One: The discovery, development, and exploitation of new faces and personalities which is important. In other phases the industry is in good shape, but this phase has been by-passed and overlooked. He felt that the audience awards will be instrumental in creating these needed newcomers.

Two: The campaign will serve to focus public attention on the numerous good pictures along the lines of the Academy Awards which hypo better films. This nation-wide poll of nominations and awards should serve wider focusing on more pictures by the public spotlight, with better resulting reaction at the box-office. He saw no conflict with the Academy Awards since the COMPO operation is an expression of the American public and not the industry designating its best. It will supplement the Academy Awards if anything.

Three: Since there is a dire need for more comedy personalities and humorous teams, the poll may be instrumental in making these discoveries and putting them in their proper category.

Rhoden estimated that between 50 to 60 million people will vote in the poll with tremendous publicity and reaction resulting and he thought that the results would influence the industry in many quarters. Producers will be affected in that they will be anxious to cast more new players who fit the picture roles instead of the theatre marquees; exhibitors will be more willing to play good pictures with lesser known people rather than

BROADWAY GROSSES

(As of this Monday)

Slump Hits First-Runs

NEW YORK—According to usually reliable sources reaching MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR, there was little to get excited about over the Broadway grosses. The breakdown was as follows:

"The Sea Chase" (Warners). Paramount hoped for an opening week of $42,000.

"Soldier Of Fortune" (20th-Fox). Roxy claimed $18,174 for Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, with the third week dropping to $34,000.

"Love Me Or Leave Me" (MGM). Radio City Music Hall, with stage show, reported $100,000 for Thursday through Sunday, with the third week holding satisfactorily at $155,000.

"5 Against The House" (Columbia). Criterion opened to a $17,000 week.

"Davy Crockett, King Of The Wild Frontier" (Disney-Buena Vista). Victoria dropped to $18,000 on the third week.

"Violent Saturday" (20th-Fox). Mayfair was still dropping, with $5,000 anticipated on the fifth week.

"The Magnificent Matador" (20th-Fox). Astor slipped to $11,500 on the third week.

"This Island Earth" (U-I). Victoria jumped to a $40,000 opening week.

"The Prodigal" (MGM). Capitol slipped to $12,000 on the fifth week.

"The Seven Year Itch" (20th-Fox). Loew's State continued on its merry way with $72,000 in sight for the second session.

Buckley Mourned

NEW YORK—Harry D. Buckley, 66, died in St. Luke's Hospital last fortnight. He was formerly vice-president in charge of domestic operations for United Artists, and vice-president and director, United Artists Theatre Circuit, of which he was one of the largest, and original, stockholders. Since 1951, he had been in retirement, retaining his place on the UATC board.

Funeral services and burial were held in St. Louis, where Buckley started in the theatre business 45 years ago. Later, he became personal and business manager for Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks. His wife, Florence, who is related to Fairbanks, survives.

Stengel Leaves Crescent

NASHVILLE—President Kermit C. Stengel, Crescent Amusement Company, resigned last week, emphasizing that his action did not involve the business affairs of the company, but was taken solely in the interest of preserving harmony.

Stengel pointed out that the book value of Crescent has doubled since the death of former head Tony Sudekum, and that profits for the first 11 months of the current fiscal year exceed those of the previous year by 87 per cent. He said that he and his wife would retain their substantial stock holdings in Crescent, and devote their time to theatres outside the chain and to other interests.

20th-Fox Sales Policy Change Reported

Allied EDC Postpones Roundtable Deadline

WASHINGTON—The National Allied Emergency Defense Committee, under chairman Benjamin Berger and general counsel Abram Myers, following a meeting in Chicago last week, released a statement to the effect that the Senate Small Business Committee is preparing to hold hearings next month on exhibitor complaints about distribution trade practices. The hearings will be held by either a subcommittee headed by Senator Humphrey (D., Minn.), or by a joint session of his group with an anti-monopoly subcommittee headed by Senator Long (D., La.). Inasmuch as the SSBC lacks power to report legislation, it is unlikely that any action will be taken this year on an Allied bill to secure federal regulation of the film industry.

The Allied committee also announced a postponement until July 1, pending almost certain Allied board approval, of the deadline for meetings with distributor company officials in New York in an effort to side-step an appeal for Congressional relief. Also present at the meeting were Allied president Rube Shor, Horace Adams, Irving Dollinger, Jack Kirsch, Ben Marcus, and Wilbur Snaper.

U-I, NBC Set TV Show

NEW YORK—Joint announcement last week by Universal-International and the National Broadcasting Company disclosed the completion of arrangements for the first 90 minute "Spectacular" ever arranged with a television network utilizing the talent facilities and top star personnel of a major motion-picture studio.

The presentation, to be telecast on July 2 in black-and-white over 128 TV stations in the United States and Canada, will have as its master of ceremonies Steve Allen, NBC's TV star of "Tonight," due in Hollywood to make his film debut in the title role of U-I's "The Benny Goodman Story."

To be titled "Allen In Movieland," the spectacular will feature appearances and entertainment by such U-I personalities as Jeff Chandler, Tony Curtis, Piper Laurie, Audie Murphy, and Mamie Van Doren.

Announcement of the precedental TV-Hollywood tieup was made by David A. Lipton, U-I vice-president, and Jack Rayel, NBC producer.

20th-Fox Ups Rice

NEW YORK—L. I. Rice has been appointed studio auditor at 20th-Fox, succeeding T. R. Krazer, who steps up to the position of special advisor to the finance and accounting department. Rice has been at 20th-Fox since 1935 with the exception of a three-year tour of duty in the Air Force. He joined the firm as an accountant, became head of payroll, and until his appointment as studio auditor served as assistant to Sid Rogell, executive production manager.

High Court Upsets NSS Monopoly Suit Dismissal

WASHINGTON — Mitchell Pantzer and Charles Lawler, heading the Independent Philadelphia Poster Exchange, last week won a victory in their long case against National Screen Service when action was referred back to the trial court in a unanimous decision by the Supreme Court, Justice John M. Harlan not participating. The ruling, coupled with opinions expressed by the justices, questions current methods of handling advertising for motion picture theatres.

Lawler and Pantzer, alleging a monopoly in the production and distribution of movie advertising adjunct, sought treble damages in 1949 under the Sherman Anti-Trust Act from National Screen Service and all distributors who had signed with NSS exclusively. On the arguments of the defendants, a Philadelphia District Court judge, later seconded by an Appellate Court, dismissed the case, whereupon the plaintiffs sought relief in the Supreme Court. In last week's decision, the high bench said that lower courts had erred in dismissal.

AA Earnings Up

NEW YORK—Allied Artists reported last week that net earnings for the 53 weeks ended April 2 amounted to $574,059, with total income totaling $12,682,303. For the fiscal year ended June 30, 1954, net earnings totaled $414,480, out of gross income of $11,838,526.

Allied Bulletin Reports Theatres Grossing Under $1,000 Per Week Can Buy All Films At Flat Rental

NEW YORK—The industry cold war, which had threatened in recent weeks to blow up into a "federal case," took a turn in favor of exhibition last week with relief from percentage rental terms rumored on the way for the appoximately 4,000 theatres grossing less than $1,000 per week.

Although no official report was forthcoming from the recent meetings between 20th-Fox executives and the combined Allied-TOA committee headed by E. D. Martin and Rube Shor, a bulletin issued by Allied Independent Theatre Owners of Iowa, Nebraska, South Dakota, and Mid-Central stated unequivocably that 20th-Fox had agreed to change its sales policies to aid the small exhibitor.

It was reported that Spyros Skouras, 20th-Fox president, and William Gehring, executive assistant general sales manager, had agreed to "absolutely and definitely sell all their pictures to all theatres, no matter how small, or their ability to pay."

The bulletin was also emphatic in reporting that all theatres grossing less than $1,000 per week will be able to buy all 20th-Fox pictures "at fair and equitable flat rentals they can afford to pay and retain a profit."

The Allied unit added that the 20th-Fox policy switch will be made public in the trade press, with Skouras and Gehring requesting that any company salesman or manager who refuses to follow the new setup be reported to the home office. Further action is also expected, according to the bulletin, on sales head Al Lichtman's proposal that rentals of $50 or less be arbitrable. The film company has also increased the number of optical CinemaScope prints, it was reported.

The unit expressed its appreciation to the exhibitors committee for their efforts, and to 20th-Fox's Lichtman, Skouras, and Gehring for their willingness to take positive steps to aid the small theatreman. The bulletin added that "in all fairness to those companies that will now sell us flat, notably Fox and MGM, small exhibitors who are fair, honest, and above board surely will not now go for percentage deals with other distributors."

It is believed that the official announcement of the change will come following conferences between Skouras and Gehring and Lichtman, recuperating from an illness on the west coast.

Brandt Joins DCA Board

NEW YORK—Harry Brandt, circuit executive and president, Independent Theatre Owners Association, Inc., since 1933, has become a member of the board of Distributors Corporation of America, it was announced last week by Fred J. Schwartz, president.

Herman Robbins, NSS Board Head, Named 1955 "Pioneer Of The Year"

NEW YORK—Herman Robbins, chairman of the board, National Screen Service Corporation, has been named the "Pioneer of the Year" by the Motion Picture Pioneers, an organization composed of men who have served in the motion picture industry for more than 25 years, it was announced last week by Jack Cohn, founder and president of the Pioneers.

Ceremonies honoring Robbins will be held in conjunction with the 17th annual dinner of the Motion Picture Pioneers on Nov. 4, 1955, at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, New York City.

Cohn, executive vice-president, Columbia, stated that "Among the distinguished leaders of the motion picture industry whose contributions through the past one-third of a century have made the screen the greatest medium of entertainment in the world, we of the Motion Picture Pioneers salute the efforts of Herman Robbins as worthy of our highest honor. Herman Robbins is truly a pioneer in our industry."

Robbins learned the meaning of showmanship as a young man while working on the old New York Evening World. From the World he joined the Fox Film Corporation and rose to general sales manager under the fabled Winfield Sheehan. He served with Fox until 1923, during the greatest growth of the original company, leaving to acquire an interest in National Screen Service.

During these past 32 years, his company has kept abreast of the industry's needs for promotional material on its screens and in its lobbies, as well as furnishing posters, billboards, etc. Its facilities and personnel have served national, civic, and industry causes as a public service.

But beyond the contributions of himself and his company are the many unpublicized services Robbins has performed throughout the years on behalf of philanthropic and charitable enterprises in and out of our industry. His work for the Motion Picture Pioneers is among his outstanding contributions to the assistance of those unfortunate enough to require aid from their fellows of the motion picture business. He is also on the board, Will Rogers Memorial Hospital. The United Cerebral Palsy Foundation has given him its Distinguished Service Award Plaque for five years of invaluable support. In 1949, he was cited for his service to the Disabled American Veterans.

During the war, Robbins was an active member of the Industry Advisory Committee, War Production Board, and was cited for his contribution to the War Finance Program of the Treasury Department. Within the industry, he is treasurer of COMPO.

Veteran Distributor Mourned

NEW YORK—Sol Edwards, president, International Releasing Organization, died suddenly last week at 55. He was a distribution veteran of 30 years' experience, having held posts with Grand National, Selznick, Film Alliance, 20th-Fox, Warners, and others. Survivors include his widow, his mother, a brother, and a sister.

Loew's Receives Permission To Acquire Florida Drive-In

NEW YORK—In an important decision last fortnight, Federal Judge Henry W. Goddard signed an order permitting Loew's, Inc., to acquire possession of the Normandy Outdoor Theatre near Jacksonville, under certain conditions.

The Normandy, with the recently-acquired Twin Drive-In near Chicago, brings to two the number of theatres taken over by Loew's since the Paramount consent decree froze new theatre acquisitions by defendant companies.

Judge Goddard ruled that until divestitures required by the consent decrees have been completed in Jacksonville, the Normandy may not show majors' product until after first downtown runs, except those pictures refused, or not bid on, by independents, and that if the divestitures have not been completed in six months, the Normany will be subject to product limitations, possibly for a period of three years.

Circuit Expansion Ban Unlikely To Continue

WASHINGTON—Assistant Attorney General Stanley Barnes, speaking last week for the Justice Department, said that continuation of the ban on theatre acquisition by the divorced circuits would have the effect of preventing big corporations from competing with little ones. Most of the circuits, he noted, are now free to seek government and court approval of new theatre acquisitions, having completed divestiture, with the exception of American Broadcasting-Paramount Theatres.

With the Justice Department's apparent approval, a New York court has recently allowed some acquisitions by divorced circuits. Barnes, who was testifying before a Senate judiciary subcommittee, admitted that some small theatre owners might decline to compete with some of the big companies now reaching the end of the ban, but stressed that action to extend the ban would be contradictory on the basis that it would assume a breakdown in the enforcement of the anti-trust laws through the courts which, he said, could be relied on to prevent abuses.

Skouras Heads Fund Drive

NEW YORK—Spyros P. Skouras, president, 20th-Fox, entertained with a dinner last fortnight at the Metropolitan Club for the building and development fund of New York Medical College, Flower-Fifth Avenue Hospital. Gen. James A. Van Fleet, former commander of armed forces in Korea, was guest speaker.

Skouras is honorary chairman for the drive for $1,000,000 to finance completion of a six-story building at New York Medical College, the first step in a 10-year expansion and development program. The ultimate goal will be $10,000,000.

French Film Center Planned By Early Fall

NEW YORK—Plans were revealed last week for a French film center here by early fall, with the primary purpose of promoting French product, in an announcement made by director general Jacques Flaud, National Film Center of France. The enterprise will be a joint venture of the French government and the industry, he said, but will not distribute films.

Flaud also announced that negotiations for a new Franco-American accord will begin in Paris on June 25, to replace the current one expiring June 30, with no change anticipated in the present quota for American imports.

To build a much-needed larger audience for French product, accurate dubbing and the release of documentaries and shorts will be two methods used, Flaud said, in a bid to recoup foreign earnings for France, which have dropped since before the war from 40 per cent to a recent high of 25 per cent of production cost. Little more than one per cent of the $11 million foreign revenue in 1954 came from the United States, he pointed out, attributing the low figure to misunderstanding and prejudice on both sides. In Latin America, he noted, the acquisition by the French of seven theatres possibly helped to return more than 10 per cent of total revenue from abroad, although no such action is contemplated here unless all other methods fail.

Convention Chairmen Named

NEW YORK—E. D. Martin, president, announced last week the appointment of three co-chairmen to direct the TOA national convention being held in Los Angeles on Oct. 6-9. Representing the east and the south is Ernest G. Stellings, Charlotte, head, Stewart and Everett Theatres; midwest, Lester R. Kropp, St. Louis, president, Missouri-Illinois Theatre Owners Association, and co-manager, Wehrenberg Circuit; and the west, Joseph J. Rosenfield, Spokane, Wash., national TOA vice-president, and theatre operator in Washington and Colorado.

Superscope Bonus Inaugurated

HOLLYWOOD—A plan was inaugurated last week by which an exhibitor purchasing a pair of Superscope lenses at the established price of $395 receives a bonus of $100, to be applied on the booking of any Superscope picture. When his order is placed, the theatreman is supplied with a validated certificate in which to insert the name of the film produced in the medium, and the booking date; when returned to Superscope, the company forwards him a check for $100 for the booking.

English Exhib Leader Dies

LONDON—Walter Fuller, general secretary, Cinematograph Exhibitors Association, collapsed and died suddenly in the street last week. He was in his early sixties, and had been CEA general secretary since 1925. A widow and two daughters survive.

Industry Will Adjust, Fitzgibbons Asserts

TORONTO—The trade picture in the industry will adjust itself, it is the belief of John J. Fitzgibbons, president and managing director, Famous Players Canadian Corporation. Addressing the winners of Famous Players Ontario B District showmanship contest. Fitzgibbons said that "this lull that we're experiencing, not only in Canada, but in the United States, will adjust itself."

He said that while other industries had gone in for new selling techniques, those of the motion picture were comparatively unchanged. Fitzgibbons said the managers in Famous Players were the best in the industry.

Top prize-money went to Art Cauley, Paramount, Peterborough, in Group A, and George Forhan, Jr., Capitol, Welland, in Group B, each receiving $100. Group A and B second prizes of $50 each went respectively to Mel Jolley, Century, Hamilton, and the Regent, Oshawa, duo, Al Hartshorn and Charlie Perrie.

Morris Stein, general manager, eastern division, and R. W. Bolstad, vice-president, also spoke. Stein observed that it was good to see the honors passed around and praised the trade press for its help, while Bolstad congratulated the winners "for good selling and good operation."

Dan Krendel, supervisor, Ontario District B, acted as chairman. He said, "I'm old fashioned enough to believe a man ought to justify his existence." The campaign, he said, was the fourth in six years and was not easy, since each lasted six months. He was proud of the efforts of his managers.

Canadian Comment

The showing of the Paramount's sales staff in Canada in the whole picture of Paramount sales was praised by George Weltner, the company's world sales chief, at the recent convention in Toronto. Weltner was one of a number of top home office executives who came to Toronto for the three-day meeting. The others were Jerome Pickman, vice-president in charge of advertising, publicity, and exploitation; Robert Rubin, vice-president in charge of administration; and Oscar Morgan, sales manager of short subjects and newsreels. The meeting generated enthusiasm by the Canadian branch managers, who came from all parts of the country, as they were given some inkling of what went into the making of the films, something of the administrative problems of the company, the problems of setting up exploitation, and the selling value of the pictures that Paramount had to deliver in the next year.

Borden Macem, assistant to Louis de Rochemont, recently accepted a gold medallion in behalf of the producer of "Cinerama Holiday," which was presented by Peter Kasper, director of tourism for the Swiss resort of St. Moritz. The medallion was given de Rochemont in acknowledgment of the "conquering of the mountains and ski slopes of Switzerland by the "Cinerama Holiday" cameras and microphones."

Balaban Answers Rap At Toll-TV By Sarnoff

NEW YORK—Barney Balaban, president, Paramount, last week took the occasion of the company's annual stockholders' meeting to refute what he termed the "pious declarations" of General David Sarnoff, board chairman, National Broadcasting Company, who has attacked "pay-as-you-see" television and the interest of motion picture companies in this projected new form of entertainment.

"General Sarnoff issued a statement," declared Balaban, "attacking the motion picture industry and Paramount in particular. He attempted to defend the vested interest of the big networks in maintaining the present system of so-called 'free TV.' His concern about the preservation of the status quo is thoroughly understandable. The 'free TV' which he champions has brought his combined companies well over a billion dollars from royalties on every TV set made in this country and from sales of goods and services. Ultimately, it was the public who paid for it! There is far less freedom in the TV market place because of its present dominance by the giant networks than in any other form of entertainment distribution. NBC controls the production of shows, their distribution, and decides who shall be affiliated with its network and who shall not. Station affiliates are bound to the networks through their dependence upon them for the only quality programs presently available. It is a few executives of the networks and a handful of sponsors who determine what the public shall see. It is the promotion of commercial products on television that dictates the kind of programs we have on television. It is the sale of merchandise rather than the inherent value of the program that sets present TV standards."

Balaban emphasized the inconsistency of General Sarnoff's position in simultaneously deploring the possibility that motion picture companies might influence the TV industry through "pay-television," and at the same time berating the motion picture industry for refusing to turn over pictures to television.

"One gets a little weary of these pious declarations about the motion picture companies in their relation to television. No one has a patent on how to make motion pictures. Anyone can make a motion picture who has the talent and the money to do so. There is nothing to prevent NBC, or any of the other networks, from investing in quality production motion pictures as we do in our business. If they think it is economically feasible at this time to make high budget pictures for 'free' television, why doesn't General Sarnoff lead the parade? His company has had a wide experience in this field, having controlled, for a considerable period of time, a major motion picture company which owned theatres and produced and distributed motion pictures throughout the world. The answer is a very simple one. Sponsors cannot afford to pay for a million dollar or multi-million dollar production and then give it away."

Balaban reaffirmed his faith in the coin-box Telemeter system as being the most practical for "pay-as-you-see" television. He further stated his firm conviction that the advent of paid television is "inevitable." Balaban also announced that Chromatic Television Laboratories, Inc., an affiliate of Paramount, would shortly be demonstrating a color television set using Chromatic's 21-inch single-gun Lawrence color tube, which can be manufactured and sold to the public at less than $500.

The Paramount president estimated that the results for the second quarter of this year will "show a healthy improvement" in operating profit over the second quarter of 1954.

All present board members were re-elected, and United Shareholders of America presented an award to Balaban for his achievements in management-shareholder relations.

Japanese film star Shirley Yamaguchi, who stars in 20th-Fox's "House Of Bamboo," is seen in New York recently meeting and greeting the crew of the U. S. Coast Guard Ice Breaker "Westwind."

Writers Guild Bars Reds

HOLLYWOOD—F. Hugh Herbert, national chairman of the Writers Guild of America, West and East, revealed last fortnight that the three constitutional amendments referred to a vote by the recent annual meeting in New York and Los Angeles have been passed by more than the necessary two-thirds majority.

Two amendments affect only the Western constitution. The third, and most important, affects both constitutions and denies membership in the Guild to any writer who states before a Congressional committee he is a member of the Communist party, or who is convicted in court of violating the Smith Act. A code of working rules covering standard practices in fields of the Guild's jurisdiction was passed also by a large majority.

H. L. Clarke Mourned

CHICAGO—Harley L. Clarke, former president of the $400 million Utilities Power and Light Corporation, died last fortnight at the age of 73 at his home in suburban Mount Prospect.

Clarke's interests were not confined to the huge holding company which he controlled. In 1930, with a group of associates, he gained control of the Fox Film properties but, as the depression grew worse, he was forced to withdraw from the venture.

Survivors of Clarke, whose personal fortune has been estimated as high as $60 million, are his widow, a daughter, and a son.

IFE Seeks Autonomy, Wider U.S. Market

NEW YORK—Seymour Poe, new executive vice-president, IFE, recently revealed that his company had hopes of increasing its gross through the system of distributing quality products. Poe stated that IFE would not succeed if they were to continue their present policy of catering to the art houses. It is important that top films be obtained which can be shown in any theatre in the U. S. Poe further stated that IFE must not be known as a company that handles just any films, regardless of quality. The new vice-president put the blame on exhibitors, and not the public, for unenthusiastic reception to Italian films. The exhibitors do not realize that IFE products can have great boxoffice draw if properly handled, he said.

Poe announced that he would leave for Rome where company policy will be discussed with the board of directors. Poe will make suggestions to the effect that substantial advances and guarantees be given to worthy films. IFE's present policy is to make no guarantees concerning films they obtain for release.

It was announced by Poe that IFE has reached the point where it could be autonomous and be responsible for its own decisions as well as the consequences arising from those decision. The Rome discussions will go far in clarifying this matter, with Poe asking for complete autonomy within a framework so that the American company can acquire products, negotiate with producers, etc., without first having to check with Rome.

13 From 20th-Fox

NEW YORK—With the number of releases from 20th-Fox in 1955 expected to hit 28, the company last week announced that 13 major, top-budgeted attractions will be placed in national release between June and October. Of the total, 12 are in CinemaScope and color, and one, "A Life In The Balance," is a standard dimension release in black and white.

Heading the June releases is "The Seven Year Itch." Also in June are "Soldier Of Fortune" and "The Magnificent Matador." July releases are "House Of Bamboo" and "How To Be Very, Very, Popular." Other July releases are Panoramic Productions' "A Life In The Balance" and the first CinemaScope featurette, "The Living Swamp."

August releases are "The Virgin Queen" and "Left Hand Of God." September releases are "Love Is A Many-Splendored Thing" and "The Tall Men." October releases are "Seven Cities Of Gold" and "The Girl In The Red Velvet Swing."

Terrytoons Go C'Scope

NEW YORK—The first Terrytoons animated cartoon in CinemaScope, "An Igloo For Two," starring "Willie The Walrus," has been introduced by Paul Terry. This marks the entry of the world-known cartoonery into wide-screen production for 20th-Fox.

According to Terry, head of Terrytoons, Inc., which has been in existence since 1929, all Terrytoons productions in the immediate future will similarly be produced in CinemaScope.

Committee Against Toll-TV Files Argument To Meet FCC Deadline

WASHINGTON — As the deadline approached last week for the filing of briefs with the Federal Communications Commission for and against Zenith Radio Corporation's controversial subscription television plan, arguments were heard and statements made in every quarter, notably by the Committee Against Pay-As-You-See TV.

The joint exhibition committee, co-chairmaned by Alfred Starr, TOA, and Trueman Rembusch, National Allied, filed a brief with the FCC, through general counsel Cohn and Marks, arguing that power to authorize toll-TV was not invested in that body by the Communications Act of 1934, and that no action should be taken anyway without enabling legislation from Congress, inasmuch as the Communications Act was amended in the light of an advertising-support pattern and other conditions which would no longer exist, supposedly, with the introduction of a toll system.

The 167-page document, speaking for 75 per cent of American exhibition, is the result of four months' research in economics, engineering, entertainment, and law. In its anti-toll arguments, it contends that FCC approval of the new medium would mean the eventual destruction of free television through a monopoly of talent, and that it would impose an undue financial burden on those least able to afford it, estimating, on the basis of the five-year-old phonevision experiment in Chicago, that the American family would need $1156 a year to receive programs now offered for nothing, not including $80 or more to equip with unscrambling devices 37 million sets now in use, at a public investment of $10 billion, which was made with the understanding programs would be free on FCC-allocated channels.

The brief points out the danger to the financial well-being of the exhibitors it represents, conceding that selfish interests have prompted action. However, many other groups are also represented on the committee, notably labor unions, radio and TV station owners, set owners, and trade associations, and the argument is advanced that the toll proposal to "seize" an established medium is not in the public interest, regardless of the source of comment. The opposition statement further emphasizes that the pay proposition would utilize facilities of a billion dollar industry, created by other interests, for its personal profit without investment, and that the promises of proponents for better programs are in the haziest of speculative categories, which, in short, would replace, not supplement, free TV. "Subscription television," the FCC is told, "is still a service intended only for subscribers," and it is pointed out that only those who can afford to pay would enjoy any kind of television once the free medium was buried.

The committee's brief also offers alternate suggestions in the event that FCC approval is secured for toll-TV. Insisting on public hearings with witnesses cross-examined under oath, previous to approval, it goes on to ask that the FCC require Paramount, after approval, to divest itself of film production, in accordance with the federal trust decision against the industry to the effect that the producer of a film cannot be its purveyor. Paramount controls the International Telemeter Corporation, which seeks, with Zenith, the FCC go-ahead on the toll-system.

Another voice heard from last week was that of General David Sarnoff, chairman of the board, National Broadcasting Company and Radio Corporation of America. Sarnoff joined the ranks of the opposition, supporting the points of the joint exhibition committee, and emphasizing that toll promoters carefully avoid any commitment that the medium would not carry advertising. He expressed concern that film producers might gain control of television, and ended by accusing the proponents of "speaking out of both sides of their mouth at the same time."

Answering comments on both sides of the controversy may be filed with the Commission up until July 11. The deadline for briefs was June 8.

Three Pay-TV Firms Supply Answering Briefs

WASHINGTON—The first brief by a toll-TV company advocating approval of subscription television by the Federal Communications Commission was filed jointly last week by Skiatron TV, Inc., headed by Matty Fox, and Skiatron Electronics and Television Corporation, Arthur Levey, president, using the term Subscriber-Vision to describe their toll system. The Fox company holds a 99-year franchise from Levey's organization, which developed the system and holds the patents.

The 81-page document maintains that toll-TV will be able to compete with theatres for top motion pictures and would serve to rejuvenate and re-create the Hollywood film industry with the result that revenues would be substantially increased because of a reduction in distribution costs. Original investments in production costs would be tied up a shorter time, Skiatron says, because the period of distribution would be shorter. The brief also points out that subscribers would be able to pay prices high enough to bring about the release of the extensive film libraries of the majors which, in the case of MGM and 20th-Fox, are reportedly valued at more than $25 million each, and that the toll system would encourage production of features specifically for TV, which could bring a new industry, with new talent, into being.

Skiatron states that if FCC approval is forthcoming, it will be operating within nine months, with an initial program schedule of 18 hours a week, and an early increase to 26 hours. The brief announces that the companies' unscrambling devices would be sold, at first, through normal retail outlets, and later incorporated in every set manufactured. The initial cost of the device is estimated between $40 and $50, with an installation charge of $5. Program charges would range from 25 cents to $2, with a proposal to eliminate commercial advertising.

Following close on Skiatron's heels was the Zenith Radio Corporation, which filed another brief in favor of the pay plan, in this case Phonevision. If Zenith "has its way," commercials would be eliminated for subscribers and networks would be prohibited from charging the public for programs now sponsored by advertisers. Not more than 15 per cent of broadcast time would be on a fee basis. The decoding devices would be rented at a "nominal charge," not sold. While promising subscribers "boxoffice quality" entertainment such as Broadway shows, first-run films, important sports events, and the like, Zenith remained uncommitted to any definite programming. Meanwhile, in Chicago, Zenith president E. F. McDonald, Jr., charged that Radio Corporation of America board chairman David Sarnoff, who recently attacked the toll-TV proposal, at one time sought to gain control of Phonevision.

The Paramount-controlled International Telemeter Corporation, filing still another statement seeking FCC approval, attempts to refute charges that a pay plan would have a detrimental effect on film exhibitors, taking the position that the competitive force of subscription would stimulate the industry with the result of competitive co-existence to the benefit of the public. The brief denied the premise that television of any form can ever replace entertainment-in-the-theatre, citing that the threat of sponsored television following the war failed to have the anticipated disastrous effect on the film industry but, instead, prompted new methods and processes to compete.

Producer Howard Pine recently showed William Roberts the Southern California Motion Picture Council's award of outstanding merit for U-I's "The Private War Of Major Benson." Roberts collaborated on the screenplay for the film.

New Cartoon Company Formed

PHILADELPHIA—The formation of Brian Cartoons, Inc., in conjunction with the operation of Louis W. Kellman Productions has been announced. The new organization will produce special color theatrical cartoons for national and international distribution.

The new firm has acquired a specially designed Oxburry Electronic Animation Unit which, according to President Louis W. Kellman, gives Brian Cartoons the latest in technical advances and the elimination of many manual operations formerly associated with the creation of animated material.

The 50th anniversary of the founding of the first Nickelodeon, birthplace of the exhibition of motion pictures, is about to take place. On the left is John P. Harris, who founded the first Nickelodeon in Pittsburgh in 1905; in the center is an old shot of his theatre; while on the right is a reproduction of the plaque marking the site on which the world's first movie was erected, presented by the Historical Society of Western Pennsylvania.

Nation Marks Golden Anniversary Of John P. Harris' Nickelodeon

PITTSBURGH—On Sunday, June 19, motion picture exhibitors throughout the nation will join in celebrating the Golden Anniversary of the Nickelodeon, the world's first movie theatre.

While the 50th Anniversary of the Nickelodeon will be a nation-wide observance, Pittsburgh, where the late John P. Harris and his family have meant "Show Business" since before the turn of the century, will be the focal point. Governor George Leader, Mayor David L. Lawrence and his entire official family; Allegheny County Commissioners John J. Kane, Harry Fowler and John M. Walker; the Western Pennsylvania Historical Society, and the Variety Club are cooperating in elaborate plans for the observance.

It was a daring venture for Harris, back in 1905, when he remodeled a small store, hung a muslin sheet on one wall, set up 96 chairs and opened for business as a theatre for movies exclusively. However, it was a risk that proved spectacularly successful and was the spark that ignited the drive that changed America's entertainment habits, brought thousands of beautiful movie palaces to the nation and, in at least three instances, altered the careers of men who became leaders in the motion picture industry.

There had been movies previously shown; in fact, Harris had shown them in one of his theatres as early as 1897, but until the opening of the Nickelodeon, these films were only an added attraction for vaudeville and stock company programs. The name, Nickelodeon, was coined by combining the admission price with Odeon, the Greek name for theatre. It opened as a continuous performance house from 8:00 a.m. until around midnight, with the shows running from 12 to 20 minutes in length. It was also the beginning of the double feature program, for the opening features were "Poor But Honest" and "Baffled Burglar."

This new entertainment caught on immediately and during its 16 hour daily grind it averaged nearly 7000 paid admissions a day with nearly 1000 of these standees.

The success of this new entertainment was noted by a salesman of men's clothing at Kaufmann's department store across the street. "I looked across the street and saw the nickels rolling in at John P. Harris' Nickelodeon," Harry M. Warner once said in telling of his inspiration for getting into the motion picture business. Warner and his brothers, Sam, Albert, and Jack later had movie houses in New Castle, Pa., and Youngstown, O., that started them on their way first as film distributors and then as the Warner Brothers Pictures Corporation.

A jewelry store a few doors from the theatre also had observers keenly interested in the crowds attracted by the Nickelodeon. The jeweler was Lewis J. Selznick, who later became an industry leader and whose sons, Myron and David, became outstanding producers.

For Harris, the founder, the Nickelodeon was the start of a new phase of show business that saw Harris Enterprises expand into a chain of highly successful motion picture theatres.

Today the business is headed by his son, John H. Harris, who carries on not only with the theatres, but as president and producer of the internationally famous Ice Capades; Ice Cycles; and the Pittsburgh Hornets hockey team.

Celebration headquarters has suggested a variety of campaigns with which exhibitors all over the country can take advantage of the Nickelodeon anniversary. Mayors and other civic officials, in many localities, can be approached for participation in the celebration by declaring a "motion picture week," newspapers can be provided with an abundance of feature material to publicize the event. Some research into the beginnings of motion picture exhibition in various areas will provide interesting and applicable feature copy.

AB-PT Goes After Teen-Age Audience

NEW YORK—Plans designed to increase theatre attendance among children and teen-agers either have been inaugurated, or will be shortly, in the affiliated circuits of American Broadcasting-Paramount Theatres, according to a statement last fortnight by vice-president Edward Hyman, who explained that the program is an outgrowth of AB-PT president Leonard Goldenson's long-advocated ideas.

The boost-attendance methods will range from intermediate price scales to talent contests. United Detroit Theatres will begin shortly a talent search to be climaxed with a grand performance at the Michigan, covered by radio and TV tie-ups, awarding a trip to Hollywood for screen tests to the winners. Des Moines' Tri-State Theatres has launched several programs, varying from lower price scales to forming teen-age film clubs, arranging merchant tie-ins with special children's shows, winning school cooperation, and the like. Henry Plude, Capitol, Davenport, Ia., commented that after three weeks the new methods had secured many new teen-age patrons.

Hyman added that the wealth of material gathered from actual, practical experience by AB-PT will be forwarded to distribution and production organizations in order to win their cooperation, in addition to being made available to the industry. The experience garnered from the new approach will be one of the highlights of the forthcoming annual meeting of AB-PT affiliate executives, Hyman said.

Nine Suits Settled

NEW YORK—Nine anti-trust suits brought by David and Benjamin Weinstock, Raybon Theatres Corporation, seeking $20 million in damages from nearly all major distributors, were settled out of court last week for $100,000. Adjustment on the suits followed dismissal with prejudice of the Normandie Amusement Company action in the U. S. court for the southern district of New York.

60 Million Votes Are Anticipated For National Audience Awards Poll

NEW YORK—The Council of Motion Picture Organizations, Inc., expects a vote of between 50 and 60 million people in its National Audience Awards Poll scheduled Nov. 17 through Nov. 27, according to an announcement last fortnight by Elmer C. Rhoden, national chairman of the poll.

Rhoden appealed for enthusiastic industry support "to make the Audience Awards program the most effective public relations activity ever conceived by this industry."

Rhoden stated that regional meetings to further the interests of the poll will be held this summer in all exchange cities. Leading exhibitors and film exchange executives will attend to receive in detail all information concerning the successful exploitation of the Audience Awards program.

Co-chairmen Wilbur Snaper, Sam Pinanski, and Al Lichtman urged every exhibitor to enlist his theatre in the awards election. "Aside from its enormous public relations benefits for our industry," the statement says, "the Audience Awards, in our view, will mean heightened public interest in pictures and a definite enhancement of the boxoffice value of several pictures. Coming at the beginning of the Christmas holiday season, the announcement of the awards will make it possible to re-release several of these pictures, thus providing powerful attractions for our theatres at a time when new product is normally in short supply."

In a later announcement, COMPO revealed that 72 pictures, featuring 184 stars, are listed on the first of the three ballots for exhibitor nominations. Each theatreman is urged to fill out the ballot at once and mail it to Price Waterhouse and Company, 56 Pine Street, New York 5, N. Y.

All pictures listed on the ballot were submitted for nomination by the sales managers of the distributing companies. U-I heads the list with 16. Other entries are MGM, 13; 20th-Fox, 10; Columbia, 7; Warners, 7; Paramount, 6; Allied Artists, 5; RKO, 4; and United Artists, 4.

Each exhibitor is entitled to nominate not more than 10 pictures, and not more than 10 personalities in each of the other four categories on the first nominating ballot. July 11 is the voting deadline.

The initial ballot lists the pictures, bearing the Production Code seal, released between Oct. 1, 1954 and March 31, 1955. Subsequent ballots will be sent to exhibitors for nomination of pictures released in the April-May-June and the July-August-September periods.

There were no pictures submitted for nomination by independent or foreign distributors on the first ballot, although foreign and independently produced films bearing the Production Code seal, and released within the stipulated period, are eligible.

Warners Names Benson

HOLLYWOOD—Mort Blumenstock, Warners vice-president in charge of advertising and publicity, last week announced the appointment of Hugh Benson to Bill Hendricks' studio publicity department to work on radio-TV promotion and publicity.

Starr Honored By TTOA; Tune Elected To Head Unit

NASHVILLE, TENN.—Alfred Starr, co-chairman, Committee Against Pay-As-You-See TV, was honored last fortnight by the Tennessee Theatre Owners Association, of which he is a director, at a testimonial luncheon during the association's annual meeting. Starr was cited as Tennessee's "most distinguished contribution to organized exhibition," and attention was called to his active role in combatting subscription television and his many civic activities, ranging from aid to the National Symphony Orchestra to the promotion of medical education.

The meeting of TTOA, affiliated with Theatre Owners of America, was presided over by vice-president Norton Tune, Shelbyville, in the absence of president Stacy Wilhite, Cooksville, who was ill. At an election, Tune was elected to the presidency to succeed Wilhite, and W. Russell Holder, Rockville Amusement Company, Nashville, was named vice-president; the secretary-treasurer's place went to Aubrey Crouch, Nashville, and directors elected were Starr, Bijou Amusement, and Kermit Stengel, formerly president, Crescent Amusement.

Wanger Heads New TV Group

NEW YORK—Walter Wanger was named president last fortnight of Sheraton Closed Circuit Television, Inc., a subsidiary of the hotel-operating Sheraton Corporation of America, which will arrange facilities for closed-circuit business meetings, primarily. The service will be offered to groups across the country which have messages for the public, and entertainment programs will be initiated also, probably in the fall, for selective small audiences.

Other officers of the Sheraton subsidiary, under the coordination of Robert L. Moore, Jr., advertising director and former TV producer, are William P. Rosensohn, executive vice-president, and Robert Rosencrans, vice-president. Both men formerly were with Box Office Television, Inc., in executive capacities.

Stock Notes

WASHINGTON—The Federal Securities and Exchange Commission reported last fortnight that Bernard E. Smith, Jr., bought 14,250 shares Republic common stock in April, increasing his holding to 30,000 shares, and that a partnership of which he is a member increased its holdings from 1000 to 6600 shares in the same month.

Other reported transactions were the sale of 500 shares of National Theatres common by Peter Colefax, who retained 1500 shares; 1000 shares of Columbia common by Joseph A. McConville, who retained 3,148; and 420 shares of Allied Artists common by Harold J. Mirisch, leaving him with 100 shares in his own name and 24,400 in holding companies which he controls.

TV Value Apparent In Disney Income Rise

LOS ANGELES—Gross income of Walt Disney Productions and domestic subsidiaries for the six months ended April 2, 1955, first half of the current fiscal year, totaled $9,876,175, an increase of $5,544,348 over the $4,331,827 reported for the corresponding period a year ago, President Roy O. Disney said last fortnight in a letter to shareholders. The company's 1955 annual report pointed out that gross film rental income for the current year is not comparable with that of prior years because of the recent adoption of the policy of distributing certain pictures through a wholly-owned subsidiary, Buena Vista Film Distribution Company, Inc.

After all charges, consolidated net profit for the six months ended April 2, last, was $430,048, equal to 66 cents per share on the 652,840 shares of common stock outstanding. This compared with a profit of $283,662, or 43 cents a share for the same months a year ago.

Walt Disney Productions' new hour-long television program, "The Mickey Mouse Club," will be telecast five days a week between 5 and 6 p.m. in each time zone beginning Oct. 3, the report said. "Disneyland," the company's current weekly television show, will continue on Wednesday evenings and is now estimated to be reaching in excess of 50 million viewers every week.

Disneyland Park, Anaheim, Cal., will be previewed nationally over the ABC network on a 90-minute live telecast Sunday, July 17, at 4:30 p.m. Pacific Daylight Saving Time. The telecast will be sponsored by American Motors, Swift and Company, and The Gibson Art Company, three of the more than 40 prominent American firms which will be represented as exhibitors or concessionaires. On the following day, the park will be opened to the public, the report stated. Walt Disney Productions, which already holds $500,000 in stock of Disneyland, Inc., will increase its investment by an additional $1,250,000. American Broadcasting-Paramount Theatres, Inc., is also making an additional investment in the new company proportionate to its stock holdings therein.

Senate Group Studies Code

WASHINGTON—Hearings to be held in Los Angeles this week on the adequacy of the industry's production and advertising codes were announced last fortnight by Senator Kefauver (D., Tenn.), chairman of a Senate judiciary subcommittee on juvenile delinquency. Twenty witnesses are expected to be heard during the three-day session probing the effect of crime and horror films on juvenile behavior. The film industry is but one medium of public communication which the subcommittee is investigating, in a manner similar to that of the comic-book industry probe last year.

Industry officials will assist in examining and evaluating the code with the subcommittee, whose members are, in addition to Kefauver, Senators Daniel (D., Tex.), Hennings (D., Mo.), Langer (R., N. D.), and Wiley (R., Wis.).

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

I want to express my appreciation for the many fine editorials you have written, they state our problems more effectively than any other comments I have read. The last time I wrote was several years ago in regard to ASCAP, long before the court decision on this matter. At that time, I called attention that a copyright owner could not legally pursue his copyright charge along the line to the final consumer. Now may I say a word in regard to closed television which is to be shown at selected theatres or as "pay-as-you-see" at home. I have not had the time or inclination to pursue the various arguments in favor of the above and, therefore, may be out of date with what is stated below.

First: Sending entertainment over telephone wires is a violation of the telephone company's charter in the state of Connecticut and, I believe, the charters of companies in other states. Their charter gives them a franchise for "systems and methods of communication from and between any and all towns by means of telephones and telephonic apparatus. There is nothing in their charter permitting them to engage in the entertainment business and, by no stretch of the imagination, either in law or plain common sense, can entertainment through telephone be classified as communication. If a telephone company can enter the entertainment business, they can also enter the advertising business and solicit accounts to be shown either for a fee on each telephone or "for free" for a lump sum paid at the main office to anyone who wishes to dial in on their closed circuit. By what right can a telephone company claim this privilege to use their lines over our highways and our individual property for their personal profit?

Second: It seems to me that broadcasting companies should be alert to this danger. If telephone companies can broadcast pictures over their lines, why should they require a broadcasting company? Surely, they can set up the apparatus in one of their own rooms and bypass the broadcasting company entirely. It would be simple for them to operate without the costly apparatus needed by the broadcasting companies. Theirs is a captive audience made up of the most select of America's customers, namely those who have a telephone. Their picture would certainly be free from the hazards of weather or atmospheric disturbances. Still further, there would be no interference from the Federal Communications Commission and none of its regulations would apply to them. Therefore, it appears to me that broadcasting companies should bestir themselves on the danger of this business. What a bonanza it would be for the telephone companies! For a fixed fee, General Foods, General Motors, Gillette, etc., could give their programs "for free" over a closed circuit via telephone to all who wish to plug in on the telephone's individual setup. The implications of all this are immediately apparent. If you find anything I have written of interest, I would be pleased to have your comments.

MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR does not suggest questions to readers in order to provide a flow of letters to the publication.—Editor)

I loved your editorial, "The Noose Hangs High." (April 27.) If everybody thought as clearly into the future as the direction your thinking points to, there would be no question of an organized industry fighting toll-television, including the producers. Personally, I am of the opinion that the group of people that are going to be put out of the business faster than anybody else, if I were writing your nightmare story, would be the producers.

depend on the old standby of "how big is the cast"; producers will see that it's to their advantage to prepare special publicity material, book and schedule tours for their budding personalities, who will be the older stars of the future, and even place more of these under contract so that the proper development can be to their advantage; picture-makers will have information at their command never before available to this degree, when the public through its voting becomes a part of the industry.

Rhoden pointed out that in the past, this audience poll was never put into effect because there was no organization on the order of COMPO in the business, and that with it, the future can be handled with a united front for the benefit of all concerned. This year will become a historic one in the annals of the industry when the campaign reaches the heights that it should, and he urged all exhibitors to fill in their ballots and questionnaires completely and intelligently, even checking their playoff records for accuracy.

Others who addressed the group included Leonard Goldenson, president, American Broadcasting-Paramount Theatres, Robert Coyne, executive director, COMPO, and Charles McCarthy, ad-pub head of the organization.

MAKING MONEY: The other morning we saw neophyte producer and director Jack Rose and Mel Shavelson, respectively, when they were in town to promote their first venture from behind the camera, "The Seven Little Foys," which premieres at the Criterion shortly. After propping open eyelids, having come from appearing on a television show which can be classified as either an early, early show or a late, late, late show depending on how and when you look at it, they reported that this end of the biz was the nuts, especially since they own a piece of the film.

The pair, who have been around in the writing end for years as well as in publicity, used to write radio shows for Bob Hope and Milton Berle, as well as pictures for Danny Kaye, Hope, and a number of Warners pictures. Now they have formed Scribe Productions and have signed a deal with Paramount to make one picture per year for three years plus an option for two more. They also plan outside films with Hope Productions calling for three features with the comedian.

They regaled us with bits of important information like Hope is going to travel with the picture for openings to be held for the benefit of Cerebral Palsy, and that he will particularly exert himself because for the first time he drew no salary but rather is in for a piece of the picture. They thought that the deferment method of making pictures was the "cat's meow" since everyone concerned works harder, rehearses early and long, does his best all the time, and follows through when the film is ready for release.

The pair's next two films will be "Beau James," by Gene Fowler, with Hope portraying Jimmy Walker in semi-serious vein, to roll in the summer of 1956 with no release set as yet, while "Kitty Hawk, The Story Of The Wright Brothers" will go as soon as the cast can be set. Both will be made in color, and the process used will depend a great deal on the release. They would prefer Vista-Vision.

They were on this biographical kick (Foy, Walker, and the Wrights) because these can be treated lightly. They can also get away from the formula pattern with the public going for the fresh approach. In making their films they are endeavoring also to keep the overseas market in mind as "that is where the profit comes from."

On the subject of the Production Code, they saw signs that it was beginning to come of age and made the observation that it seems to lean towards leniency in times of economic stress when competition for the entertainment dollar is keener. The thought was expressed that perhaps a swing towards the European method of classifying pictures for adults and for children ought to be tried here. They opined that the Legion of Decency has done a good job, but its presence and influence does hamper writers at the start of a film since they don't know what will pass and what won't.

Shavelson and Rose thought that distributors and producers were more conscious of the exhibitors' problems these days since they no longer have theatres of their own and must compete with others in getting screen playing time. As for an actual film shortage in theatres, they said that this was due to producers being more careful as to the pictures they make. They are no longer turning out routine product, leaving this to their counterparts in television.

The pair announced that they will concern themselves with the advertising of their films in that they will have an honest approach, believing that the day is past when the public can be fooled by misleading ads. They said the public has grown-up and it is shopping carefully, but give it good, honest, entertainment and it will buy it.

Fair Practice Rules Proposed Solution To Industry Ills

DETROIT—Thomas McGuire, former public relations director, Co-operative Theatres of Michigan, last fortnight proposed the establishment of a set of rules of fair practice as a solution to industry controversies.

The McGuire plan suggests voluntary cooperation between branches of the industry, working freely and legally with government agencies set up to deal with problems and relationships in business. McGuire pointed out that fair practice rules may become binding when agreed to under the aegis of the Federal Trade Commission. To solve individual problems in industry relations, he said committees may be formed with the help of the Small Business Administration.

The former management relations executive noted that film industry members are reluctant to meet jointly with other segments of the industry beyond the normal course of business, and he stressed that this proposal provides an accepted foundation for discussion and solution with the sanction of the FCC and SBA in their respective spheres.

PR Exec Dies

NEW YORK—Hal Horne, public relations executive who was vice-president and advertising director, 20th-Fox, from 1942 to 1945, died last week at 58 of a heart attack, in the Beth Israel Hospital.

Early in his career, Horne was Far West Theatre Circuit general manager, and later headed Horne Theatre Circuit, which he established in San Jose, Cal., before joining United Artists in 1930 as advertising and publicity chief.

Following a period as production manager for Walter Wanger, Horne became eastern representative for Walt Disney Productions and, in 1938, was named distribution vice-president and board member of that firm. Many of his associates credited Horne with the world-wide popularization of Mickey Mouse. After three years with 20th-Fox, Horne formed his own public relations firm.

Survivors include his widow, Lea, national chairman, women's division, United Jewish Appeal, two daughters, a brother, a sister, and four grandchildren.

COMPO Lists Summer Films

NEW YORK—The 45th in the series of COMPO ads in Editor and Publisher which appeared last fortnight lists 40 pictures to be released by 10 major producers this summer to the motion picture theatres of the country.

Closed Circuit Phonecast Explains Hospital Needs

NEW YORK—Regional members and chairmen of collection committees in 32 exchange cities heard addresses stressing the need of industry-wide support of the one-day theatre collection during the week of Aug. 15 for the Will Rogers Memorial Hospital, in a closed circuit telephone hook-up across the country last week.

From the board room of the Stanley Warner Theatres, A. Montague, president of the hospital, opened the meeting with an explanation of the hospital's needs. Eugene Picker, chairman, fund-raising and finance committees; Sam Rosen, vice-president of the hospital substituting for Si Fabian, and national committeemen Charles Feldman and Arthur Mayer, also spoke. The collection will neither conflict with nor replace the Christmas Salute, the executives said.

Spain

In Madrid, negotiations with the Spanish government for a new agreement with respect to the importation of American product to that country were suspended last fortnight when G. Griffith Johnson, vice-president, Motion Picture Export Association, left for Frankfurt, blaming his failure to secure a new agreement on the "onerous terms" sought by Spanish negotiators. It was understood that the latter demanded a reduction of annual dubbing permits from 100 to 80 and an increase in the price to be paid for dubbing, in addition to distribution restrictions and a requirement that American companies distribute Spanish films in the U.S. On the dubbing prices, the Spanish were reported to seek a 25 per cent increase for black and white films, and almost 50 per cent for color, in addition to a new clause charging 1,300,000 pesotas for dubbing in CinemaScope or allied new processes. It was also reported that the Spanish sought a provision that foreign distributors be obliged to distribute Spanish product in the ratio of five foreign pictures to one Spanish. Another requirement called for the distribution of eight Spanish pictures in the U.S. by the seven American film companies maintaining offices in Spain.

France

The Union Internationale de l'Exploitation Cinematograhpique closed its Paris convention in unanimous agreement to urge member associations to press for standard prints from anamorphic films, taking the position that international demand for such prints would force the cooperation of production. Britain's W. R. Fuller, general secretary, and E. J. Hinge, treasurer and past president, told the CEA group that the Denham Laboratories have perfected equipment to make the standard prints, which the British trade considers an innovation. Messages to the conclave indicating close interest by American groups were sent by Walter Reade, Jr., on behalf of Theatre Owners of America, and by Julius Gordon, acting for Allied States Association. The CEA will establish a central bureau on television through the Belgian Exhibitors Association, and will hold its next meeting in Rome, Italy, sometime late in September.

Valuable Exploitation Keys To Profitable Merchandising

Huge Campaign Set For Columbia's "It"

NEW YORK—The greatest mass territorial dating ever undertaken by Columbia Pictures will be launched later this month for the science-fiction thriller, "It Came From Beneath The Sea." When it is completed, 27 of the exchange areas in the company's distribution setup will have huge multiple-openings involving more than 2,200 theatres and backed by tremendous area-by-area advertising and promotion campaigns.

Double billed in the great majority of playdates with Columbia's companion piece, "The Creature With The Atom Brain," "It" is scheduled to open in upwards of 600 theatres in eight branch areas in the three weeks starting June 22. With an augmented supply of over 350 prints, "It Came From Beneath The Sea" will then follow the same pattern in 19 other sections of the country.

Leading the initial parade are the Oklahoma City and Detroit territories with 120 and 119 playdates, respectively. The other six branches involved in the initial saturations are Denver, Salt Lake City, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, San Francisco, and Los Angeles.

Columbia is putting more than $250,000 into the saturation advertising campaigns, which will be built around television, radio and area newspaper ads. In every territory, the advertising will develop on a radial plan, with the sales messages being beamed out from the key cities to blanket entire market areas.

Kickoff newspaper ads, many of them full page, placed to cover entire territories, will list every playdate in the papers' circulation area. The follow-up push will be made with the most extensive television spot campaign in Columbia's experience, with radio being utilized to fill in those fringe areas still not able to be sold by video.

Columbia's exploitation department is sending out a 30-man field force to aid theatremen in the saturation campaigns. Exploiteers and exhibitor-showmen have been issued special theatre promotion kits for the science fiction show. A special feature of the kit is a stunt manual describing more than a dozen ballyhoos and other devices around which a top flight promotion campaign can be planned.

Bookings have been scheduled so that all situations not playing day and date with the key cities will follow so closely that they will reap the benefits of the radiating advertising-promotion.

Thirty cents was all this lobby display cost Walter C. Heath, manager, Capitol, Hillsboro, N. H., where his "Disneyrama" show recently drew a large audience.

Bargain "Bucks" Aid "Rage"

BIRMINGHAM, ALA.—Proof that age cannot wither a good exploitation stunt came from the successful street ballyhoo put on for Nat Holt's RKO release, "Rage At Dawn," for its engagement at the Empire. The promotion was arranged and handled by RKO fieldman Spence Steinhurst and theatre manager Joe Lackey, under the supervision of the RKO exploitation department.

A pretty model was sent out to sell 100 crisp, new $1 bills for 79 cents. It took all day for the attractive Miss to find 100 individuals not too skeptical or suspicious to pass-up the bargain. But even the many who refused the offer received free passes to the Empire. And all, of course, heard about the Technicolor action film.

The stunt was covered by a local newspaper, which assigned a reporter and photographer to record the reactions of those stopped. A long story with a photo was run on a regular news page with credits for the film's run at the Empire. Considering the all-around results, the stunt was both inexpensive and successful.

Bernard J. Bispeck, manager, Senate, Harrisburg, Pa., recently effected this tie-in with a local Kresge's five and ten cent store on his forthcoming engagement of Walt Disney's Buena Vista release, "Davy Crockett." It should be a cinch to duplicate such stunts with stores handling the "Davy Crockett" merchandise.

50 Circuit Heads To Judge Contest

PHILADELPHIA—As the deadline of June 20 approached, it became evident last week that MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR's weekly SHOWMANSHIP SWEEPSTAKES, which will award $5,200 to theatremen during the next 12 months, at the rate of $100 per week for one prize for the one best promotional effort submitted during each week, would be an overwhelming success.

Fifty heads of circuits, representing over 2,000 theatres, from the state of Washington to Massachusetts and from Canada to Florida, enthusiastically accepted the responsibility of judging the entries. They have also manifested great interest for the contest designed to reward promotional effort that may result in increasing total admissions with economy, originality, and effectiveness in relation to the size of the theatre an important factor.

In addition, entries have been received from Canada, Mississippi, Florida, Missouri, Virginia, and Connecticut—just to name a few.

Don't forget the contest deadline—June 20 for the kickoff week of July 6; and weekly thereafter.

Also, don't forget that the five best entries received in any one week will be submitted to the judging committee, who will from these five pick the winner each week. All five entries will be published along with the entry that won the $100.

Participants may send in as many campaigns as they wish, but to be considered for judging in different weeks, these should be judiciously spaced.

With time drawing near, it is urgent that all interested in garnering some of this extra money get in on the bonanza early. Re-read the rules, and let's go!

As the contest grows, the publication trusts that as many as possible compete and get in the winning column. There is no limit as to how many times you may win. The better the judges find you, the better MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR will like it.

Next week, the contest's board of judges will be announced.

U-I Seeks "Earth" Beauty

NEW YORK—A contest to find "The Most Beautiful Girl On This Island Earth," was announced today by Universal-International in conjunction with the world-premiere of the company's new Technicolor space drama, "This Island Earth," at the Victoria.

The victorious beauty will be engaged by Universal-International to help promote the film which features some of the most unique special effects ever created by the movies. Twenty runners-up will receive guest tickets.

A new attack on Atlanta's movie censorship was launched here. Loew's, Inc., has petitioned the U. S. District Court here to enjoin the city from enforcing its ban on "Blackboard Jungle." This is the first legal test of such a ban in Atlanta since recent court rulings. . . . Mrs. Christine Smith Gilliam, Atlanta movie censor, who was backed by the appeal board of censors in her ban of the picture, said she had no comment other than that the city would defend its action. The city has won in similar actions. . . . The Loew's suit, filed for the firm by Atlanta attorneys Robert S. Sams, William H. Shroder, and T. M. Smith, Jr., argues that the ban violates the plaintiff's constitutional right to freedom of the press under the First Amendment and to due process of law under the 14th Amendment of the U. S. Constitution.

The life of Forrest Turner, former badman of Georgia who reformed and devoted his life to religion, is being considered for a film by 20th-Fox. The Rev. Jacksonville

Cecil Cohen was giving Saturday midnight horror shows a trial at his Murray Hill. . . . Hal Stanton had the first local showing of "Gate of Hell" at the Edgewood, which is normally a second-run house. . . . "Strategic Air Command" moved into a second week at the Florlda, largest theatre here. . . . "The Seven Year Itch" is being scheduled for July 4 bookings over Florida.

Jacksonville gave its finest welcome to a movie star in the city's history when Fess Parker, star of Walt Disney's "Davy Crockett," spent a full day in making public appearances. It began with a press breakfast in his suite at the Roosevelt Hotel. From there, a motorcade of new Hudson cars, preceded and followed by sound trucks playing "Davy Crockett" music, went behind a police escort to City Hall where Parker received a giant key to the city from Mayor Haydon Burns. He next went to the Hope Haven Hospital for Crippled Children for a lengthy visit, followed by a luncheon in his honor at the Roosevelt, which was attended by theatrical, TV, radio, and newspaper personages. An afternoon appearance at the largest department store, Cohen Brothers, almost resulted in a riot, and the popular star had to move into a bandstand at Hemming Park where thousands of frenzied young fans could see him. The only peaceful interlude of the day was during a quiet cocktail party for Parker at Mayor Burns' home. His last main appearance, at the new city baseball park which he dedicated to the Jacksonville Braves, brought a mingled crowd of more than 7,000 movie and baseball fans.

Buena Vista officials in town for the "Davy Crockett" promotions were Irving Ludwig, Charles Levy, and Phil Conway, New York; Ed Terhune, Dallas; Ken Laird, Atlanta branch manager, and Harvey Reinstein, Florida salesman. At the Roosevelt luncheon for Parker, he presented a surprise gift of a "mink" coonskin cap to Louis J. Finske, president-designate, Florida State Theatres, to provide a humorous ending for the affair.

Approaching nuptials include Nadine Kirkwood, daughter of Mrs. Lenore Kirkwood, FST staffer, to Fred Palas; Joan Zeitlinger, daughter of Mrs. Dorothy Zeitlinger, also with FST, to Ellis Fernandez, Jr.; Pat Tufano, UA booker, to Carlos Thomas, and Carol Voss, formerly Matt Schroeder's secretary at FST, to Frank Duffy.

Neely and Achee also handled the sale of new Simplex XL projectors and new Simplex XL sound system recently installed in Pinehill Drive-In, Picayune, Miss., and in the Cankton, Cankton, La.; complete Simplex equipment in the Lane Drive-In, Arnaudville, La., and new Walker seamless screens in the Nabor, Oberlin, La.; Grand, Houma, La.; Royal, Marrero, La.; Luling, Luling, La., and the Cankton, Cankton, La.

A number of patrons viewing "Tight Spot" at the neighborhood Carrolton thought for a while they were in one when smoke was discovered billowing in from the back of the theatre, caused by an overheated motor in an air conditicning unit. Several of the patrons fled but most of them remained in their seats. The showing of the picture continued after a brief interruption while the management was in search of the source of smoke. Fire chief W. J. Wild said that the extent of damage couldn't be determined immediately and that the fire was confined to the motor. He believed the damage wasn't extensive. The Carrollton is a unit of the United Theatres.

Leo Seicsshnaydre, manager, Republic, is back after a business trek in southwestern Alabama and western Florida. . . . George Rabalais, manager, new Tiger Drive-In, Marksville, La., was in buying and booking, as was William Butterfield, Lake Drive-In, Pascagoula, Miss.

The industry was greatly shocked upon hearing of the sudden death of Eldon F. Briwa, 50, who has been associated in the industry for about 30 years. Death claimed him in a physician's home where he had gone after complaining of severe pains in the chest. He collapsed and died before the physician could make an examination. A native of New Orleans, Briwa's start in the business was in 1925 as cashier at MGM, with whom he remained until 1945 serving subsequently as booker, office manager, and salesman, after which he joined the newly formed Film Service Corporation, headed by L. C. Montgomery and Joy N. Houck, as assistant to Montgomery. A year later he was promoted to manager. In 1947, with Montgomery and T. G. Solomon, he opened the new Clarke, Natchez, Miss., and the Tiger Drive-In, Baton Rouge, La., continuing as manager of Film Service and assisting in the management of the theatres. In 1951 he disposed of his theatre interests to Solomon to devote his time to the buying and booking service, which became known as Bri-Mont Buying and Booking Company, of which he was vice-president. He was also associated with the Joy ever since it opened in 1947 as chief accountant. He is survived by his widow, a son, and his father.

The Laurel, uptown neighborhood, closed, and is up for sale by real estate dealers Latter and Plum.

More than 2000 young and old New Orleanians sent up a rousing cheer when Fess Parker, Walt Disney's star in "Davy Crockett, King of The Wild Frontier," stepped off a plane at Moisant National Airport. Mobbed by a battery of photographers and newsmen, spotlights g eaming, kiddies singsonged "We want Davy," and Parker was herded to the speakers platform, which was especially arranged by Maison Blanche Company, who made his visit possible. After brief welcoming speeches by officials, city and store, Davy made a brief and simple speech of gratitude. Before his appearance at Pelican Stadium to meet personally the 141 school representatives who received metropolitan New Orleans safety council awards donated by Maison Blanche Company, he attended a press breakfast at the Roosevelt Hotel and visited City Hall where he was presented with the keys to the city. There were 3000 youngsters at the stadium, including 2300 school safety patrol members. Others who spoke briefly were Wilfred Kullman, acting president, safety council; Herbert A. Kenny vice-president, Maison Blanche; city councilman Glenn Classen; Pel president Jake Nowak, and Bernard J. McCloskey, director of safety and permits. Charles Levy, national publicity and advertising director, Walt Disney Enterprises, accompanied Parker to New Orleans. Instrumental in the ceremonial spreading of the red carpet were Buena Vista's publicity representatives Ed Terhune and Phil Conway, and manager Asa Booksh, RKO Orpheum, where the movie opened. They were also favored by George C. Steger, district manager, Hudson cars here; Angelo Melito, local Hudson dealer, and Joe Sorci, Hudson dealer in Arabi, who lined up six sleek air conditioned cars of their make for the official reception party's comfort during Parker's stay.

Philip, WTVJ; his sister, Mrs. Sidney Meyer, wife of the Wometco coowner; and his son, Richard, legal department head of Wometco.

A permit for a drive-in on 16 acres located on Golden Glades Road was approved by Dade County commissioners. The permit was granted to George C. Hoover, former district manager, Florida State Theatres, over the objections of representatives of the huge Carol City housing development, Col. Nathan B. Reed, builder, and the diocese of St. Augustine of the Roman Catholic Church. Clyde Atkins, attorney for the diocese, said that the diocese plans to build a Catholic school of higher learning just south of the proposed drive-in and that the congestion of autos at the theatre would annoy sleeping students. The commissioners who previously had rejected an application for a larger site for the drive-in, said that some recreational facility is needed in the rapidly-growing area and that they would rather see a drive-in there than a "juke joint." In granting Hoover the permit, the commission stipulated that construction must start within 60 days and that the theatre must be completed in nine months. The permit also provides that the site be fenced in and that it be extensively landscaped so it will be hidden from residential developments. Hoover, international chief barker, Variety Clubs, and president, Variety Children's Hospital, has estimated his investment in the theatre will be about $250,000.

The Variety Children's Hospital was the scene of a Hollywood camera crew shooting activities which will be included in the 90-minute Technicolor feature "Heart Of Show Business," being produced and directed by Ralph Staub, Columbia. . . . Wometco neighborhood theatres were the scene of special "Bomba, Jungle Boy" features on a recent Saturday children's matinee for a Jungle Day show.

Title Change Halts Premiere Activity

RALEIGH, N. C.—The Raleigh, N. C., Merchants Bureau, which had asked that the world premiere of the 20th-Fox film on Sir Walter Raleigh be held in Raleigh, announced May 31 that it will not participate in the premiere set for July 21 because of a change in the film's title.

Originally, the picture, which stars Bette Davis and Richard Todd, was titled "Sir Walter Raleigh," and now it is slated to be titled "Raleigh and the Virgin Queen," John Alexander, president, merchants organization, said.

"Because Raleigh is named for Sir Walter Raleigh, we feel that a fine promotional program could be built around the film's original title," Alexander said. "With the title change, the board's interest in putting on a promotional program lessened considerably. The lack of interest was such that we finally decided not to engage in a program of any sort in connection with the picture's premiere here."

The premiere is scheduled to be held at the Ambassador.

Durham

The Rialto closed because of financial problems, which Charles Lewis, city manager, North Carolina Theatres, Inc., said were caused by several factors. Located at a building that once was the Orpheum, a pioneer movie and vaudeville house at Durham, the Rialto, Lewis said, was forced to close because of "exhorbitant taxes on all levels" which small theatres find difficult to offset; television programs which show entertainment of the "family trade" type presented by the Rialto; Hollywood's emphasis on "big spectacles and fewer films" with a resultant decrease in the number produced of the type in which the Rialto has specialized; and the fact that CinemaScope and stereophonic sound are now the "big things" in movies and "few small theatres can justify the costs" of installing the equipment to show such films.

New Censor Bill Seen Passing Test

COLUMBUS, O.—The administration film censorship bill, approved by the Ohio House of Representatives, "should be able to stand the test of judicial trial," said The Columbus Dispatch editorially. "The measure is definite in its limitations, is obviously clear in the kind of matter that would be considered objectionable, and, unless the courts finally decide that any kind of control is in itself illegal simply because it is control, should be able to stand the test."

The 105-10 vote on the bill "is largely indicative of public sentiment on the issue," added the editorial. The newspaper paid tribute to Representative Edmund James, chairman, subcommittee, judiciary committee, which drafted the measure. He "worked valiantly" to draw a measure "which will stand up in court and at the same time identify and define what is obscene, lewd, lascivious, and advocative or provocative of immediate crime or jeopardy to public safety."

The Dispatch said that the task of writing a constitutional censor law is "most difficult," for "in a free nation such as this where the freedoms, especially of speech, assembly, and press are guaranteed unconditionally, the freedom for an unrestricted expression of ideas of any kind and through any medium is strongly implied."

Theatre owners and other business firms in Ohio face costs doubling the amount of payments for unemployment compensation if a bill backed by the CIO is approved by the voters in the November election, said Robert Wile, secretary, Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio. The labor group currently is circulating petitions throughout the state to assure placing the bill on the ballot. Wile said if the bill is approved it will make the hiring of employees doubly difficult. He is asking Ohio exhibitors to agree to run a short trailer urging patrons to vote "no" if the bill should come up for a referendum. He said the labor organization is dissatisfied with results of attempts to get increased unemployment benefits by vote of the Ohio Legislature. The proposed legislation seeks to raise the maximum primary weekly benefits from $30 to $50 and increase dependency benefits from $5 ($2.50 for each of the first two dependent children) to $9, which would give $3 per week for each of three children. Maximum duration for receiving benefits would be increased from the present 26 weeks to 39 weeks. Wile said the potential maximum benefits would increase from $910 to $2301.

MGM Workshop Hits Mound City

ST. LOUIS — Upwards of 200 theatre owners and managers who attended MGM's 21st Ticket-Selling Workshop at the Chase Hotel here were rewarded with more than $600,000 worth of selling ideas, luncheon, plus some ice cold Coca-Cola as an extra bonus for having been on hand. Host at the luncheon, as in the previous workshops, was the Coca-Cola Company, and F. E. Riggs, sales manager for Chicago and St. Louis, and Frank Sheldon, vice-president, Coca-Cola Bottling Company of St. Louis, were on hand to take the bows.

Mike Simons, MGM's director of customer relations, was in charge, but the exhibitor panelists worked entirely on a free-wheeling basis. The exhibitor participants in the workshop were Clarence Golder, Civic Center, Great Falls, Mont.; Robert Walker, Uintah, Fruita, Colo.; Art Farrell, Southwest 14th Street Drive-In, Des Moines; and Joseph Jarvis, Gilbert Stuart, Riverside, R. I. Emery M. Austin, director of exploitation, Loew's, Inc., New York, gave a quick but properly detailed outline of MGM's 33 exhibitor aids.

Loren Cluster, Salem, Ill., on behalf of the Missouri Illinois Theatre Owners, was given time to make an appeal for letters to the FCC before June 9 to protest against toll-TV.

The day's proceedings got underway with an address of welcome by Tom E. Bailey, St. Louis exchange manager for Loew's, Inc.

Simons gave the why for these workshops, "Getting people into theatres, since that's all theatre folk are interested in." Panelists here and elsewhere had been "billed" solely because they had ideas that sold theatre tickets.

The importance of impressing on merchants and other business men the value of the theatre to their community and the absolute necessity for every motion picture theatre owner and manager to make himself an important person in the community was stressed throughout the day. As Simon put it, "The town without a motion picture theatre is a dead town," a fact that should be constantly kept before all community leaders.

Golder, who owns four conventional theatres and two drive-ins, urged exhibitors to become the permanent chairman of the entertainment committee of the community, and told how in order to sell theatre tickets he gives them away. These "giveaways" are slanted at public goodwill, including invitations to be the theatre's guests sent to various organizations, such as Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, high school teams, and school bands, etc., and free shows for Safety Patrol card holders. All this is to keep the community indebted to the theatre.

Walker, who had a 210-seat theatre in a community of from 1200 to 2500, took time out as he was starting his talk to introduce his wife, Melba Walker, his chief helper in combatting the competition of three drive-ins, plus a lighted horse track and a baseball team, not to mention TV. He told of the beneficial results from the "Salute to the Movies" in which the merchants of the town participated.

Simons stressed the importance of employee morale, with all workers trained to boost the house at every opportunity. Mike also told of the advantages of reading the trade press. Farrell said everything he does is pointed at the family trade, his drive-in having a playground for the kiddies, provision for bottle warming, free gum and free potatoe chips, etc. He told how he "took our story to the housewives of Des Moines" through a questionnaire take house-to-house by two trained lady canvassers. Housewives who participated by answering varicus questions were rewarded with free passes for the family and a pearl necklace that cost seven cents. This check-up of movie habits and views has already covered 7,000 of the 50,644 homes in Des Moines, at a total cost of $1,400. He touched on the fine possibilities of Sunday morning church services at a drive-in.

W. Hardy Hendren, Jr., United Film Service, Inc., Kansas City, then hit the highlights of the fine direct mail campaign his company had worked out slanted at selling the movie theatre to hometown merchants.

Friends of the late former Circuit Judge Moses Hartmann and his widow, Mrs. Carrie Scooler Hartmann, were saddened to learn that funeral services for her were held in Los Angeles. Mrs. Hartmann, who left here with her husband to settle in California some 17 years ago, died at the age of 75 and was buried at Forest Lawn Mausoleum. One of her two sons is Edmund Hartmann, a Hollywood producer. The other son is Sidney Hartmann, Long Beach, Cal. Three sisters and a brother also survive.

The grand opening of the Holiday Drive-In, a unit of the Jablonow-Komm Theatres, Inc., took place. The 1000-car Holiday offers to the public one of the most elaborate drive-ins in America. Its contemporary style buildings are in a park-like setting that has real eye appeal. It includes a year 'round air conditioned cafeteria that will offer a select menu for supper or lunch, and provides tables and chairs at large picture windows that enable the guest to eat in comfort while watching the picture program. A patio of paved terraces with umbrella-covered tables and chairs indicates a modern approach toward movie relaxation. There is a large playground for the kiddies. The kitchen is all-electric equipped and designed for faster service. The screen is said to be the largest in the St. Louis area. All of the projection and sound equipment is the newest Simplex, as are the in-a-car speakers. It has in-a-car heaters to permit operation in the winter months. This equipment was provided by National Theatre Supply. The architects for the drive-in were Gerhardt Kramer Associates, while the general contractors were the Swan Construction Company.

In Highland, Ill., the Air Park Drive-In, 300 cars, will be taken over by R. L. Costilow, a teacher in the Highland High School. Prior to his teaching job here, Costilow had experience in theatre operations in the middle west. Adolph P. List had operated the drive-in since July 30, 1953. . . . Pete Cardoni is the owner.

Don Davis, theatre equipment department, RCA, Kansas City, was here en route home from Camden, N. J. . . . George Phillips, co-owner, Realart Pictures of St. Louis, was in Chicago for a Lippert business conference.

Seattle

A Seattle chapter of the Variety Club is being organized, with committee appointments from a recent meeting including Ed Cruea, Bud Saffle, Glen Haviland, Fred Danz, Jr., and Mercy and Hall Baetz. The next meeting had as guests publicists, and radio and TV personnel. . . . Hugh Owen, Paramount's vice-president out of New York, in charge of western sales, made his first trip to Seattle for a meeting with Paramount's Seattle and Portland sales force. Owen was accompanied by H. Neal East, western division sales manager, Paramount.

Ed Cruea, Allied Artists branch manager, returned from a business trip to Ephrata and Spokane, Wash. . . . A. C. Lyles arrived from the Paramount Studios to handle premiere of the Pine-Thomas "The Far Horizons." Walter Hoffman, Paramount's northwest publicity director, has been traveling throughout the northwest territory setting up plans for the film. . . . Paramount held an exhibitor's luncheon at the Georgian Room of the Olympic which was thoroughly interesting and enjoyed by all who attended.

NEWS OF THE Territory

Boston Crosstown

"Variety Club Day" at the Suffolk Downs race track was a most enjoyable affair, with more than 100 exhibitor members attending the luncheon and races as guests of Judge John Pappas. The Judge named the feature race the "Variety Club Race" with the owner of the winning horse presented a trophy from second assistant chief barker Michael Redstone. All guests were given a free daily double ticket. Cocktails and luncheon were served in the Paddock Club. . . . The largest screening of the week was held at the Fenway when Buena Vista presented Walt Disney's "Lady And The Tramp" and "Switzerland" to the trade and invited guests. Herbert Schaefer, Buena Vista manager, greeted guests at the door. The film opens in July at the Keith Memorial.

U-I's science-fiction film, "This Island Earth," is to have a strong radio and television exploitation campaign. Rex Reason, starring in the film, came to town for air appearances and to meet the press for interviews. Johnnie McGrail, U-I publicist, arranged a luncheon at the Ritz Carlton to introduce the star to the local critics and film editors. McGrail executed a nice tie-in with the film and the Supreme Markets in their four stores in metropolitan Boston. Each store will give away a $25 Planetarium, as well as three plastic space ships and a number of courtesy tickets to the Memorial, to lucky number holders in the four stores. In return, the Supreme Markets are taking 180 lines of film advertising in four insertions in the Boston Globe and other large ads plugging the film in three district newspapers. The film opens June 15 at the Keith Memorial. Following this opening, McGrail leaves for Bridgeport, Hartford, and New Haven to exploit the film in those cities.

Officials of Stanley Warner Theatres have closed the Waldorf, Lynn, Mass., for the summer, with manager William Hart subbing at the Warner, Lynn, as assistant manager, until the Waldorf reopens in the fall. . . . Norman Glassman, Lowell, Mass., exhibitor, has returned from Miami Beach, Fla., with Mrs. Glassman, who spent the winter months there. . . . Don Falco paid a visit to the district for the first time since his recent illness. Looking tanned and rested, he expects to be back on the job as salesman for Capitol Theatre Supply after July 4.

Owner Benjamin Sack has closed the Saxon, Fitchburg, Mass., for June while the theatre undergoes refreshening. Manager Frank Boyle is concentrating all his activities on the Fitchburg in the same city. . . . One of his first evenings out of the house since his recent hospitalization found Bill Sullivan, Maine and New Hamphire head booker, at a drive-in watching the show from the comfort of the family car. From all reports, he enjoyed the experience immensely. His condition is so improved that he expects to be back at his office in July for part-time appearances, at any rate. Another industryite on the recent sick list is Edward Canter, American Theatres, who is also greatly improved and is expected back on the job in a few weeks.

Redstone Drive-In Theatres have started construction on a new huge drive-in to be built in East Rutherford, N. J., marking the 10th drive-in in the circuit and the second in New Jersey. Their Newark Drive-In opened its gates on June 9 with Michael Redstone, president, and his son, Edward, vice-president, in attendance. The new East Rutherford ozoner was designed by William Riseman Associates, Boston. The actual work will be done by local contractors. The opening is scheduled for Labor Day.

Joseph E. Levine, Embassy Pictures, is distributing "Sins Of Pompeii," which is to have its American premiere in this territory. Bought in Europe by Terry Turner, General Teleradio, Inc., and Tom O'Neil, president, Mutual Broadcasting Company, the film is to have the full radio and television exploitation treatment accorded other of the Turner films which have been presented in this section. Levine invited a group of film buyers and bookers to his office to see the TV and theatre trailers which have been made up from scenes from the film. George Kraska, Embassy, is already working on the exploitation and will contact theatre managers on the publicity.

Lyman O. Seley, division manager, Manley, Inc., announced the following promotions in his staff. Irving Dunn, former theatreman, who has had the New York and New Jersey territory, has been appointed territorial manager, Philadelphia area, which includes Pennsylvania, New Jersey, and a portion of New York state. He has purchased a new home in a Philadelphia suburb for his family. Harold J. Mulcahey is replacing him as salesman, New York City area. John Stone, who had the Maine, New Hampshire, and Vermont states, is now territorial manager for all six New England states. Ed Courtney has been named his assistant. Sam Horenstein, who was Manley manager here for many years, has returned to the company, covering the New England section, and will be a general goodwill ambassador for Manley all over the country.

Arthur Stein was recently promoted to district manager, Levine-Yanofsky Drive-Ins, operating four in Massachusetts, with a home office in Boston.

C. Edwin Compton has taken over the Altec service in the Worchester, Mass., area, effective June 6, replacing the late Phil Gruen, it has been announced by "Red" Pierce, Altec district manager here.

Worthington "Buster" Holt, who has been with the Lockwood and Gordon Circuit since 1939, has resigned as manager, Portland Drive-In, Scarborough, Maine. He will open the new Den-Rock Drive-In, North Andover, Mass., on July 3 for the Shay brothers and will continue as managing director. This new theatre is being booked by Daytz Theatre Enterprises. He is being replaced in Scarborough by Harry Johnson, who moves over from the circuit's Winslow, Maine, Drive-In. Robert Duffy has been placed at the Winslow.

The first thing Rex Reason did when he arrived for his first visit was to take in the art festival in the Public Garden. A native Californian, the young actor featured in U-I's "This Island Earth," is six feet, 3-and-a-half inches tall, and wired ahead for a special bed at the Ritz Carlton Hotel. He also has completed for U-I, where he has a seven-year contract, a film called "Kiss Of Fire," in which he is starred with Jack Palance. He has made two films before but they were under the screen name of Bart Roberts, which the studio gave him because his own name, which happens to be Rex Reason, sounded, according to U-I, too theatrical. But by dint of persuasion he was at last able to work under his christened name. He was in town for two days under the guidance of Johnnie McGrail, U-I publicist, for radio and television appearances, and to meet the press at a luncheon in the Ritz.

David Score closed the Yarmouth, Yarmouth, Me., permanently. This is the house he took over last February when the lease to Marshall Carleton had expired. Carleton is now in the real estate business in that area. . . . A daughter, third child and second girl, was born to Mr. and Mrs. John W. Fecke, Cheshire, Conn., making Al Fecke, UA salesman, a grandfather again.

Gasper G. Urban, new branch manager, Paramount, is a native of Lynn, and now lives in Swampscott. He joined the company in 1949 as a shipper, and worked his way up through the booking department to office booking manager. He was with the Marine Corps for 17 months, returning to Boston as a sales trainee. Almost immediately he was transferred to Charlotte as office booking manager. Last September he returned to Boston as a special representative for the new VistaVision process, and later he was a salesman in Maine and Vermont. A graduate of Notre Dame, he played football on three national championship teams under coach Frank Leahy, and has had professional football experience.

Eliminations announced by the Bureau of Sunday Censorship included "The Good Die Young," parts 1 to 10 (Deletions: Eliminate dialogue, "You don't give a damn about me," in part 3; "Two bums in harmony," in part 5; "Would you mind telling me where the hell you've been all night," in part 5). Portland

This city will have its first film premiere when the 20th-Fox feature, "The Virgin Queen," is presented at the Strand, July 22. Bette Davis, starring in the film, is now a resident of Cape Elizabeth, and it is through her graciousness that the affair was arranged. Proceeds will be turned over to the Children's Theatre of Portland, one of Miss Davis' favorite organizations. Plans for the premiere were discussed and consummated at the Hotel Graymore, with Miss Davis heading the group. Others present were Phil Engle, 20th-Fox publicist; Miss Lysle Abbott, president, Children's Theatre; Charles Doughty, its director; Nat Silver, managing director, Strand; John P. Sullivan, manager, Empire; Edward E. Kessler, Jr., Chamber of Commerce; heads and members of the press, radio and television. Phil Engle promised that the affair would resemble a true Hollywood opening with kleig lights, bands, and a plane load of stars to be flown into the city by 20th-Fox. A buffet supper will be served at a hotel before the film is scheduled to go on. Miss Davis has been interested in the Children's Theatre since the beginning of her residence in Greater Portland, and

Providence

The Strand, celebrating its 40th anniversary, arranged an interesting and colorful program incidental with the first screening of Paramount's "Strategic Air Command" advertised as the "Gala Rhide Island Premiere." Several top Air Force officers from surrounding military installations were invited guests, the Warren Indian Band serenaded the opening night patrons, and spotlights played on local dignitaries as radio interviews were conducted on the sidewalk and inside the lobby. Al Siner, manager, also arranged for a military guard to flank the entrance as the air officers arrived. The theater was gayly decorated and polished up. All in all, the occasion created much favorable comment, and gave the film considerable impetus.

Teenagers and adults alike descended on Loew's State, where Bill Trambukis, manager, staged a three-day "Rock 'n' Roll" revue, in addition to the screening of UA's "Jesse James' Women." The stage portion of the show featured "The Moonglows," "The Moonlighters," "The Five Keys," and seven other attractions. From the youngest to the oldest, everyone left the theatre highly enthusiastic. . . . Because the Gionti Trio proved so popular on their first stage appearance at E. M. Loew's Providence Drive-In, they were brought back for the Memorial Day weekend as a special feature.

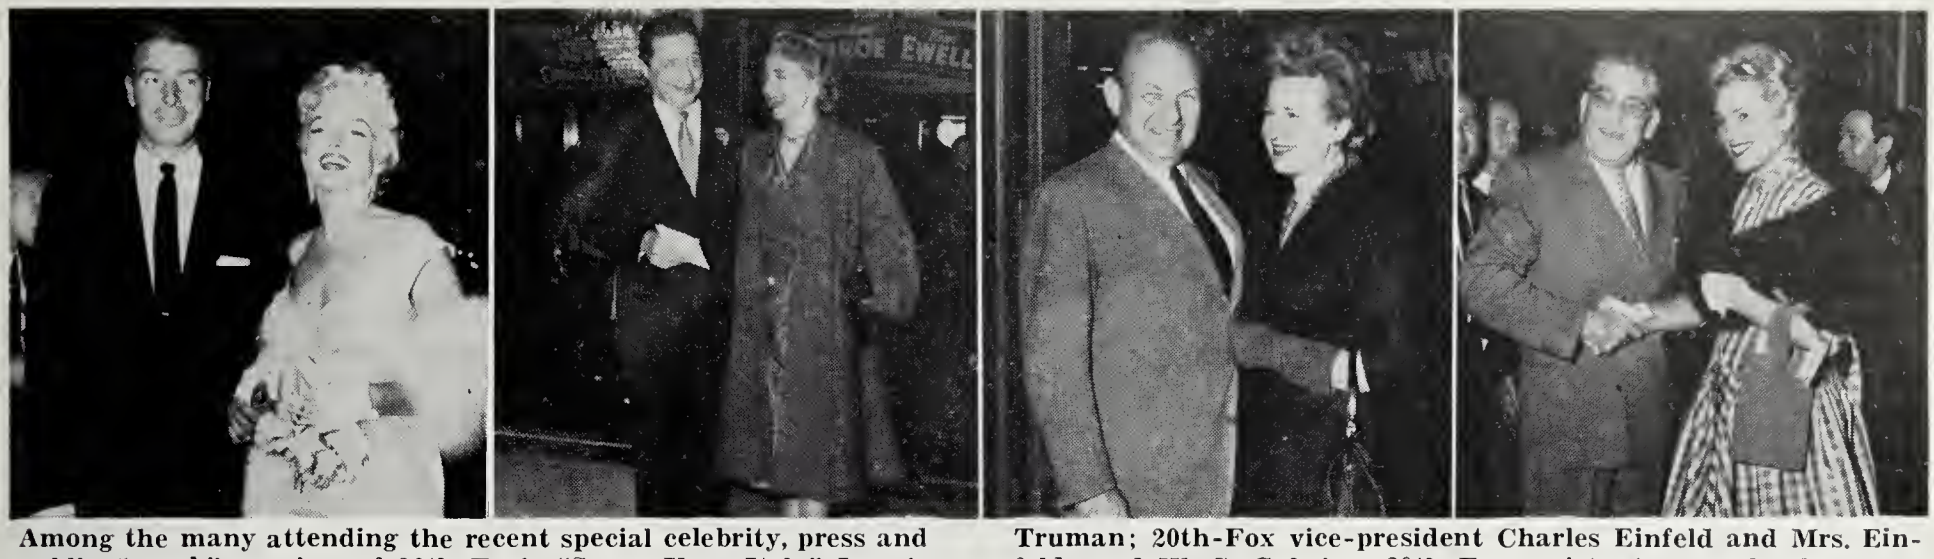
The first Rhode Island showing of Republic's "Doctor In The House" took place before appreciative audiences at the Avon. . . . Dean Martin and Jerry Lewis, together with their Hollywood Review, played a one-night stand at the Auditorium. . . . Some 1,500 persons paid $3.50 each to see the Marciano-Cockell championship fight on closed-circuit TV at Loew's State. . . . Once again, the Metropolitan reopened, offering second-run films, with a special Sunday stage show, featuring local radio station talent.

As school closing nears, many of the open-air theatres are presenting special Friday night features appealing to youngsters. The Route 44 Drive-In presents a half-hour of color cartoons; the Bay State gives free lollipops, in addition to a special "Kartoon Karnival," while other drive-ins are using bicycle give-aways and similar gimmicks, to entice parents to bring the kiddies the nights before school holidays. . . . The Quonset Drive-In is now admitting all children under 12 without charge.

"Adventure" seemed to be the catch-phrase at downtown first-runs, and by curious coincidence, two ads, side-by-side, that of the Majestic, heralding "Captain Lightfoot"; and Loew's State, announcing "Purple Plain," were both headed "Adventure" in screaming bold type.

All amusement parks are running full tilt, Saturday and Sundays, with plans underway for full-week operation. . . . Many down-town first-runs will experience slightly accelerated activity during the next few weeks, when graduating classes hold informal theatre-parties.

Loew's State, RKO Albee, and Majestic united in congratulating in newspaper ads the Strand on the occasion of its 40th anniversary. This indicates harmonious relations of local down-town first-runs.



Among the many attending the recent special celebrity, press and public "sneak" preview of 20th-Fox's "Seven Year Itch," Loew's State, New York City, were, left to right, Joe DiMaggio and Marilyn Monroe, star of the film; Harold Arlen and Margaret Truman; 20th-Fox vice-president Charles Einfeld and Mrs. Einfeld; and W. C. Gehring, 20th-Fox assistant general sales manager, with film star Judy Holliday. The next day the film opened to record-breaking crowds.

Aubrey Schenck, executive producer, "Desert Sands," and Howard W. Koch, producer of the forthcoming SuperScope, Technicolor film, arrived to confer with UA executives on promotion and distribution plans. . . . MGM star Ann Miller left by plane for Istanbul. She will visit also Beruit, Cairo, Alexandria, Rome, Madrid, Paris, Brussels, Antwerp, and London, and most likely will attend the Berlin Film Festival, June 24 to July 5.

Henrietta Fulci, MGM's publicity department, married Raymond Conti at St. Raymond's Church in the Bronx. . . . Mike Simons, MGM director of exhibitor relations, and Emery Austin, MGM exploitation head, were in St. Louis, attending the company's 21st Ticket Selling Workshop, at the Chase Hotel. . . . Sandra Block, secretary to 20th-Fox assistant exploitation manager Eddie Solomon, was married to Sidney Cohen, and left on a Florida honeymoon. . . . Spyros P. Skouras, president, 20th-Fox, left for a series of conferences at the Hollywood studio.

With more than 2,000 persons jamming the Times Square area fully an hour-and-a-half before the boxoffice was opened, 20th-Fox's "'The Seven Year Itch" made a spectacular debut at Loew's State. . . . Crowds began forming as early as 7:30 a.m., and at 9 a.m., when the boxoffice was opened, lines extended from the boxoffice south to Broadway and 45th Street, and east from Broadway to Sixth Avenue, with extra details of police called upon to restrain the enthusiastic fans. . . . On-hand to welcome fans, sell tickets, and sign autographs between 9 and 10 a.m. were Roxanne, TV personality who makes her motion picture debut in the film, and George Axelrod, who co-authored the picture's scenario with Billy Wilder. The morning event brought out reporters and photographers from the metropolitan newspapers, wire service men, camera crews from Movietone News, and CBS-TV, assuring national reportage for the gala launching of the attraction.

Kevin McCarthy, co-star, Allied Artists' "An Annapolis Story," recently visited Edward R. Morey, vice-president, AA, in New York, and is seen showing the executive his press book.

Skouras is now operating the Westbury Drive-In, Westbury, Long Island. . . . Associated Prudential has taken over operation of Commack Drive-In, Commack, Long Island; Massapequa Drive-In, Massapequa, Long Island, and Hempstead Turnpike Drive-In, Beth Page, Long Island.

A daughter, Diane Beth, was born to Mr. and Mrs. Adam Wachtel. Wachtel is office manager, Sargoy and Stein, special counsel for various motion picture distributors.

Miss Mary E. Tuttle, Glen Rock, N. J., director of personnel, RKO Theatres Corporation, has been named new president, Mount Holyoke College Alumnae Association, South Hadley, Mass., for a three-year term. Miss Tuttle is chairman of the board of the Alumnae Advisory Center, an association of 20 colleges which helps graduates who are seeking jobs in New York. She is on the Extension Division Faculty of the New York State School of Labor Relations, Cornell University, and is on call as an outside consultant for the Human Relations Workshop, sponsored by New York City College. A member and past-president of the New York Personnel Club, Miss Tuttle has been director of RKO personnel since 1948. . . . Herbert H. Greenblatt, RKO's domestic sales manager, left for Canada, where he will discuss with the Toronto and Montreal branches forthcoming productions which the company will release between now and the end of the year.

Jules A. Birnbaum, son of Columbia's assistant secretary Bernard Birnbaum, married Elaine Isaacs.

Legion, Code War Seen Approaching

ALBANY—Storm clouds are gathering between the Legion of Decency and the Production Code Authority of the Motion Picture Association. This is the frank prediction made by The Evangelist, weekly publication of the Albany Catholic Diocese, in its editorial, "Decency Is Reasonable," asserting that "The Legion's dissatisfaction with normally objectionable factors characteristic of so many approved films was received with an attitude of obstinancy by Eric Johnston, president of the industry's censoring office." Johnston maintained, in reply to the Legion's complaint of an "obvious trend toward laxity," and a "retrogressive attitude" on producers' part, that "Pictures reasonably accepted by reasonable people will continue to be made without concessions anybody or anything." In view of "the comparatively few" films that can be classified by the Legion of Decency as "entirely suitable" for general patronage, Johnston "leaves no doubt he regards the honest norms of decency to be too right and unreasonable in the demands they make on the movie makers," claimed the editorial.

The MPA head's "reasonably accepted" measuring rod gives "unscrupulous producers a wide range which they will not fail to abuse," The Evangelist continued. The reasoning that backs "the content of motion pictures is based principally on cash profit, with little, if any, regard for consequences, be they good or bad. . . . Vulgarity, immodesty, and the highly suggestive are continuously employed as the most lucrative instruments. To many producers, filth in all its categories is the 'reasonably accepted.' If the Code Authority continues to relax present mediocre restrictions, pictures are sure to sink to unprecedented depths of rottenness."

The Evangelist held that the Legion of Decency "came into being to awaken the Motion Picture Association of its obligations to society." It asserted: "Boycott is an effective weapon . . . which producers understand and appreciate." Johnston, "by ignoring the necessity for present vigilance, is inviting the Legion's action," stated the editorial in its final shot. The paper has, on occasion, called for a boycott of, or patronage withdrawal from, theatres showing "condemned" pictures. Two recent instances concerned the Ritz and the Grand. In the case of the Ritz, the picture was pulled; in that of the Grand, an Italian feature, the Page 1 editorial was ignored. In a third situation, at the Delaware, a "C" picture was withdrawn after several days and quiet Catholic objections, and "Camille" was the moved-up replacement!

The Lincoln, Union City, N. J., presented a bathing beauty contest. . . . The Ritz, Elizabeth, N. J., will present on its stage on June 17, a "Rock 'N Roll" presentation.

Albany

Paul L. Jacobson, son-in-law of S. H. Fabian, and a resident of Albany for two years while serving as treasurer and assistant to the president, Van Curler Broadcasting Corporation, has returned to New York and accepted a position with the National Broadcasting Company. The Jacobsons have put their fine Holmesdale Avenue home up for sale. . . . WTRI, a UHF station in which Stanley Warner holds a 50 per cent interest, has proceedings pending before the Federal Communications Commission to revoke FCC approval to the purchase of control in WROW-TV by the Lowell Thomas group, and the subsequent switch of the Columbia affiliation from WTRI to WROW. The latter move forced WTRI to go off the air last winter. Recent testimony before the FCC indicated that Van Curler lost more than $475,000 on the WTRI operation. However, the station management still has hopes of getting back into the picture, via an FCC okay to its request for allocation of VHF Channel 10, at Vail Mills, if the current appeal against WROW is rejected. WROW and others are also seeking Channel 10. Meanwhile, Troy Broadcasting Company, operator of radio station WTRY, Troy, and holder of the other 50 per cent interest in WTRI-TV, has announced it will become an independent outlet on Nov. 15, when the Columbia tie-up ends. WROW is obtaining that hookup.

Richard B. Wheeler, general manager, WTRI-TV, will remain in Albany for the present, according to reports in industry circles. The new offices and studios are closed, but can be reopened.

A long-successful short subjects producer, Ralph Staub, visited Albany in connection with the picture he is making of Variety Club charitable projects. Staub shot scenes at the Variety-Albany Boys Club Camp Thacher, with Tent 9 officers cooperating.

Perfect weather and surroundings helped to make the 14th annual Variety Club golf tournament at Shaker Ridge Country Club, Colonie, what chief barker George H. Schenck termed "one of the most successful ever." It was the 13th in the series, but the committee decided the number had connotations of bad luck which made a bypass advisable. There were about 45 golfers and 65 diners, at $10 a ticket. The new champion, with a gross score of 82, was Charles Stevens, advertising manager, Norman Kill Dairy Company. Irwin Ullman, 1954 chaimpon, predicted last winter that he would assume the Tent 9 crown, although Stevens had never played the difficult Shaker Ridge course before. Ralph Ripps, MGM salesman, the champion two years ago, finished runner-up, with an 84. Ullman racked an 85 for third place, and took the driving honors, with a tee-off that went 270 yards.

W. Gordon Bugie, Paramount salesman, took honors for coming closest to the pin. Norman Weitman, U-I branch manager, took the booby prize, with an estimated 158; he played only six holes. Keeping faith with the tradition of a prize for every guest, sweaters, golf shoes, table radios, record albums, and other articles were awarded. Bob Adler, Allied Artists booker, walked off with a rotissimat, donated by Harry Lamont, president, Lamont Theatres, and former chief barker. Stevens won a sweater; Bugie, shoes. Generous donators included circuits, branch managers, ex-chief barkers, and business establishments.

Jack Goldberg, second assistant chief barker, and delegate to the recent Variety International Club convention in Los Angeles, reported at the dinner that he was deeply impressed by the number, importance, and scope of charitable projects undertaken by individual Tents, stressing that they were "all for children, crippled, retarded, diseased, or under-privileged." He urged each member to bring in an associate member, from radio, television, or other fields, to increase the range of the Tent 9 Camp Thacher program, for which $12,500 is expended annually.

Among those participating in the tournament, attending the dinner, or both, in addition to the foregoing, were: Norman Jackter, Columbia branch manager, a member of the arrangements committee; Ken Farrar, Tri-State Candy Corporation, assistant manager and committeeman; Aaron Winig, brother of ex-chief barker Nate Winig; Ray Smith, Warners branch manager; Clayton G. Pantages, 20th-Fox branch manager; Milt Levins, Columbia head booker; Al Marchetti, U-I head booker; George Seed, Fabian manager, Cohoes; Dick Murphy, manager, Proctor's, Troy; Phil Rapp, manager, Plaza, and Lou Rapp; George Lourinia, manager, Fabian's Saratoga Drive-In, Latham; Sid Dwore, Cameo, Schenectady; Dave Rosenbaum, Capitol, Elizabethtown; Leon Duva, Morris, Morrisville; Leonard L. Rosenthal, counsel, Upstate Theatres, Inc.; Lewis A. Sumberg, property master; Jules Perlmutter, head, Perlmutter Theatres, and former chief barker; Sylvan Leff, Utica and Watertown exhibitor, and upstate representative for Realart Pictures; Sidney Kulick, Bell Pictures Exchange, New York; Sidney Urbach, dough guy, and Bob Lamont, office manager, Lamont Theatres.

Visitors on Film Row included: John G. Moore, Paramount assistant division manager for the east, who was en route to Schine Circuit offices in Gloversville; Harry Rogovin, Columbia district manager, Boston, who trekked to Kallet Theatre headquarters, Oneida, with branch manager Norman Jackter; Peter Dana, U-I division manager; Joseph Gins, district manager, and Irving Sochim, short subjects sales manager.

William J. Jarvis, chief projectionist, Troy, since Moe Mark opened the house in 1923, died in St. Mary's Hospital. A brother and several sisters survive.

Mrs. Vicki Grygiel, U-I biller, vacationed for a week in New York with her husband, and spent a week at home entertaining his two sisters, Dominican nuns stationed in Puerto Rico. . . . James McCabe, Warners head shipper, flew to Miami, Fla., for a session of fishing. . . . Donald Nelly, Columbia assistant shipper, was on vacation. . . . A. O. La Flamme, Strand manager, marked the first two weeks in August for a vacation at Lake George. . . . George Seed, Fabian city manager, Cohoes, will not take his fortnight until November. Seed's wife, who established the Bette Seed bridal shops in Albany, Menands, and Latham, will return to that field with a Loretta Lane store in the new Latham development. Opening date is July 5. . . . Alvin Kosoff is a new 20th-Fox salesman.

New York State

Buffalo

At a signal from the boxoffice of the Teck to Paul Swater, managing director, Mrs. Frank J. Clark was intercepted at a matinee and presented the special "This Is Cinerama" orchid. Mrs. Clark purchased the 100,000th ticket to the show, which opened March 16. Swater told Mrs. Clark and her husband that, as a milestone patron, she had confirmed the management's selection of Buffalo as one of the 15 Cinerama cities on the continent. Cinerama in Buffalo has drawn 50 per cent of its patrons from western New York, some 20 per cent from distant sections of the state, and 30 per cent from Canadian cities and towns.

The old Academy has been purchased by the Marine Trust Company of Western New York, from Michael D. Perna, owner, according to a deed filed in the county clerk's office. Revenue stamps attached to the deed indicated a purchase price of approximately $135,000. It is reported that the trust company plans to erect an office building on the site, with parking space in the basement.

Jim Bailey, manager, Little Hippodrome, says the passing of the Academy should help business in his operation.

The Aero Drive-In installed a new playground, complete with swings, slides, and a merry-go-round, to entertain the children of its patrons. The Aero also has installed a new giant screen. Manager Ronald Hoelcle is urging parents with youngsters to come in when the boxoffice opens so that the children can enjoy the playground facilities before the film begins. . . . So successful, from a publicity angle, was the plaque presentation at the premiere of "Strategic Air Command," at the Paramount that E. J. Wall, field representative, Paramount, arranged with Sol Sorkin, manager, RKO-Keith, Syracuse, to put on a similar stunt, which proved equally successful. . . . Jack Oswald, UPT home office auditing department, was in checking the Paramount, Center, Seneca, and Niagra, and the Paramount and Regent in Rochester. . . . Carl S. Hallauer, president, Bausch and Lomb, Rochester, received an honorary LL.D. degree at the commencement exercises at Alfred University. He recently visited Hollywood to accept a special Oscar for his company's work in the development of the CinemaScope lenses.

Robert T. Murphy, managing director, Century, announced the early arrival of 20th-Fox's "The Seven Year Itch." In the cast is Robert Strauss, who used to run a women's wear shop in Buffalo, and who visited the city recently. . . . The Commodore, a community house, has been put on the market by David Krieger, Batavia. The Commodore was operated by William Brett, now president, Skyway Drive-In Theatres of Buffalo.

The Colonial, another community house, has closed for the summer. . . . Edward L. Hyman, vice president, American Broadcasting-Paramount Theatres, was in to look over local UPT theatres, as well as those operated by UPT in Rochester. . . . It is rumored in political circles that Elmer F. Lux, head, Elmart Theatres, and president of the common council, may become a candidate for city comptroller.

Students at Clarkson College, Potsdam, are attending movies with more regularity this year as a part of a well planned program. Dr. Donald G. Stillman, chairman, liberal studies department, reports that audio-visual aids are playing a major role in the teaching of courses in his department. Seventeen films supplement the course in applied psychology.

Birk Binnard, ad-publicity head, Philadelphia zone, with an assist from Roy Robbins, has gotten out the first issue of a house organ, Stanley Warner Showman, which throws the spotlight on ideas and activities of showmen in the zone. The first issue turns the spot on Ben Blumberg, SW 69th Street, for promoting a special Saturday morning Cinerama Holiday children's show, in which he contacted his local school and sold 369 tickets; on Paul Marsden, Clementon, N. J., for being the first manager in the zone to plant the "Relax Today At A Movie" copy in his local newspapers, on Sidney Poppay, Strand, York, for a bread tieup used in connection with showing "The Prodigal," whereby samples were distributed in special wrappers at no cost to the theatre; on Iz Perlin, Stanley, Camden, N. J., who sold a pencil box deal to a local merchant for a special kiddie show in the amount of 2,625, the largest to date; on Dominick Lucente, Broadway, who on a special Catholic Feast Day yanked his regular feature for the matinee and booked "The Miracle Of Mother Cabrini," sold this program directly to his Catholic School and played to 933 kids for a gross of $240, which was much better than his regular evening business for that day. The Spotlight is also thrown on MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR'S forthcoming SHOWMANSHIP SWEEPSTAKES contest which will pay off $100 each week — 52 weeks a year. Binnard states, "With all the showmanship in the SW Philadelphia Zone, we are looking forward to a weekly $100 windfall from our good friend, Jay Emanuel."

Delaware

Dover

The House passed and sent to the Senate a bill introduced by Representative Paul F. Livingston, Democrat, Wilmington, to permit the showing of motion pictures in rural New Castle County outside of incorporated communities from 2 p.m. to midnight, ending the 6 to 8 p.m. break now required by law.

Wilmington

Mrs. Edgar J. Doob, wife of the manager, Loew's Aldine, was recuperating nicely following surgery at the Delaware Hospital, and was due to return home. . . . In a special promotional effort, Edgar J. Doob, manager, Loew's Aldine, scored with a three-way tie-up with Brait's clothing stores and WDEL Radio. Brait's women customers were voting for the "Father of the Year" for Wilmington, to be announced by Harvey C. Smith, WDEL's "Mr. Goodwill," at a male fashion show on the Loew's Aldine stage June 13, after which those attending would see the attraction then current at Loew's. Topping a long list of prizes was a year's wardrobe for the "Father of the Year."

To promote the forthcoming engagement of Times Films' "Naked Amazon," Edgar J. Doob, manager, Loew's Aldine, bought extra radio time and extra newspaper space, arranged radio and TV contests, was distributing 5,000 specially made up heralds, and had one-sheets and three-sheets posted at advantageous spots about the city.

The Wilmington Council of Churches endorsed 20th-Fox's "A Man Called Peter," and after being contacted by Earle G. Finney, manager, SW Ritz, churches affiliated with the council announced its presentation there through church calendars or from pulpits. . . . Radio and TV were giving heavy play to the hit tunes from the score of 20th-Fox's "Daddy Long Legs," Rialto. . . . Virginia Meany joined the Rialto, replacing Nancy Greenfield, resigned.

Baltimore

Baltimore Variety Club, Tent 19, has signed to present the 15th edition of Ice Capades at Memorial Stadium, July 14 through July 20 to raise money for its charitable projects. . . . James Gladfelter, manager, Playhouse, and Mrs. Gladfelter are receiving congratulations upon their 19th wedding anniversary. . . . Loretta Gallagher, Censor Board's projection staff, has returned from her vacation.

Harold T. Colley, publicist, Keiths and the New, and Mrs. Colley are expecting a blessed event. . . . Bob Gruver, owner, New Glen, Glenburnie, Md., was lunching at the Variety Club along with Meyer Leventhal, Lord Baltimore; Isador Makover, Edmondson Village; Aaron Seidler, New Albert; J. Stanley Baker, Hicks-Baker Theatres; John Recher, publicist, Mayfair; and Sam Tabor, Republic.

Joseph Morrison, Century staff, spent two weeks' vacation in New York visiting friends and seeing shows. . . . Rodney Collier, Stanley manager, has promoted a trip to Hollywood in connection with the showing of "The Far Horizons." The contest is to select a Diamond Queen and she wins a trip to Hollywood. . . . I. M. Rappaport, owner, Town and Hippodrome, was in New York on business. . . . Oscar Kantor, Warners representative in Baltimore and Washington, has returned from a west coast vacation.

This town is witnessing a rare example of cooperation between competing first-run exhibitors to bring out the juvenile trade, with Jack Fruchtman plugging on the screen of Keith's the opening at Izzy Rappaport's Hippodrome of Walt Disney's "Davy Crockett, King Of The Wild Frontier," while in return Rappaport is cross-plugging Fruchtman's opening of "This Island Earth." It's figured that in this way both theatres will help each other in bringing the kids downtown.

Supported by the extra curricular efforts of Armour Company and Dodge Motors, Irving Cantor, manager, Hippodrome, scored heavily promotion-wise for added boxoffice results of "The Prodigal" on its engagement at the I. M. Rappaport house. Through Armour, grocery stores and super markets all over Baltimore plugged "The Prodigal" on their radio time, with special advertising mention in newspaper ads, putting out 200 window cards, and distributing 10,000 heralds, in addition to 25 one-sheets on the name contest for Tania Elg. Local Dodge dealers supplied Coronet models for cars, which were bannered with the contest information plugging the MGM picture. Rappaport promoted 3,000 double slices of bread in cellophane bags with a throwaway attached, plugging the theatre and playdate in advance of the opening. Hollywood Bread also provided 1,000 table tents free and these were distributed in all downtown restaurants. Station WCBM used the special star interview with Lana Turner on "The Prodigal." Laurie and Eve Allwyn daily publicized the picture and playdate on the American Store program. WFBR tied up with Club 1300, the women in the audience receiving meat sandwiches, the meat being furnished by Armour and bread by Hollywood. Delvale provided ice cream and Gossin furnished soft drinks. Armour made up and served the sandwiches, the stunt taking place a week ahead of opening and continuing until Rappaport opened the picture. MGM's "Wheel of Fortune" float also appeared on the local scene in time for the opening, but the Sunday American used a picture of it a day before the unit arrived from its tour. The Evening Sun also gave the theatre and picture special art on Lana Turner 11 days ahead of opening and a few days before. The American day-anddated with the Sun by using a special streamer and art on the picture, theatre and opening date.

Irv Blumberg, Warners publicist, was in from Philadelphia in connection with "Mister Roberts" and future product.

Sidney Hoffman, manager, Metropolitan, Washington, recently came up with a stunt when he played Columbia's "Tight Spot" that tied in directly with the picture. In cooperation with a department store he hired a model to stroll through the store attired in a polka dot dress similar to the one worn by Ginger Rogers in the film. Those who spotted her were given guest tickets to the theatre.

Elkton

Two ex-convicts arrested in East Paterson, N. J., have allegedly confessed participating in the March 19 armed robbery of the Elkton Drive-In, where they escaped with $238. Cecil County Sheriff Nathan Kaplan and Maryland State Trooper Thomas H. Mogle went to East Paterson to question the two suspects, Michael McDonald, 24, Port Chester, N. Y., and Joseph Frasea, alias Joseph Calabrese, Lodi, N. J., who were being held in the Bergen County Jail. The two men were arrested following a short automobile chase resulting from a tip to police. Investigators say the men had traveled across the country in a three-month crime spree, which netted them between $2,500 and $3,000. They told police they staged at least a dozen robberies, concentrating on service stations and outdoor movie theatres. In addition to Elkton, the pair was said to have operated in Miami, Fla., Hollywood, Cal., Cleveland, Lexington, Ky., Hammond, Ind., Chicago, and Grand Prairie, Tex.

Leonardtown

T. L. Harrison, Jr., general manager, Southern Maryland Theatres, is busy arranging a country wide tie-in with all St. Mary's County merchants handling Davy Crockett merchandise to promote the Disney-Buena Vista feature when it plays the Park, Lexington Park, Md., the end of the month. . . . "Lucky Night" at the 235 Drive-In, California, Md., is proving successful, with hams, turkeys, and passes given out to lucky car license plate holders. . . . T. L. Harrison, Jr., general manager, Southern Maryland Theatres, visited the Jack Fruchtman offices, Washington, on business.

presented by the Air Force Association Band and Color Guard. Sally Ann Porter, "Teen-Age Princess" in the Patriot-Evening News model contest was honored as "Air Force Association Sweetheart" and was presented with a bouquet. The guest list numbered over 150, including high-ranking Air Force officers. Manager Wollaston was presented with a citation on behalf of Paramount and Fabian Theatres Corporation in commendation of Air Force support. Huge searchlights were operated outside the theatre over the weekend and a big trailer truck with Air Force equipment attracted much attention. WHP-TV presented a telecast of the premiere and plugged the film daily on its "Meet the People" program from in front of the theatre. The station also presented a TV film interview with Jimmy Stewart. Other bally included cards on busses, extensive radio spots, good newspaper coverage, and in a tie-up with Vince's Hobby Crafts and Revell plane models, an airplane model contest was conducted. A bicycle was given as first prize and there were 12 other substantial prizes.

Jack O'Rear, manager, Colonial, is out of the Harrisburg Hospital. He was in for a checkup. . . . State manager E. G. Wollaston is treasurer, newly-formed Downtown Harrisburg Association. He is also on the board of directors of the group. . . . Ken Steckline, assistant manager, Loew's, was on vacation recently. . . . Herman Nowitsky, in charge of maintenance and construction of the Pennsylvania and Virginia Fabian theatres and drive-ins, was in recently.

Lancaster

The first drive-in operated by a church is now open here. Known as the Drive-In Church, the spot is on Manheim Pike, Route 72, at Old Lancaster Airport. A newspaper ad states, "Worship in the great out-of-doors; dress comfortably; bring the whole family; Sundays at 7:45 p.m." Religious films are shown. In case of rain meetings are held at Lancaster Gospel Center. T. J. Gresham Speedy is pastor.

Reading

The Reading Fair has cut its grandstand prices as much as 75 cents in some classes of seats for the coming September show, in an effort to boost grandstand seat buying. In some years, with big crowds on the grounds, the grandstand has been far from full. The management also has decided to repeat its "Miss Reading Fair" beauty contest, usually attracting 100 or more entrants, in which the Astor and Strand cooperated in selecting finalists, through stage shows.

The Shillington Theatre, Joseph M. Schverha, owner and manager, booked James Stewart's "Rear Window" for a repeat engagement, after showing it some time ago to big business. . . . Reports say the big new drive-in being constructed on the Reading to Harrisburg road, west of Sinking Spring, will not be opened in July, as expected, but in August or about Labor Day.

This ballyhoo truck on MGM's "Blackboard Jungle," arranged by city manager George Paycte, Jr., for the SW Maryland, Hagerstown, Md., recently attracted plenty of attention in the town and surrounding area.

The Astor's cooking school, sponsored by the Consumers-Reading Gas Company, this city, on June 14-15-16, is to be a really big event. Manager J. Lester Stillman and the gas company are screening at each show names and descriptive matter from a score or more business firms which are cooperating in the school. The exhibition in the Astor lobby of gas and other appliances, and kitchen and home equipment that will be demonstrated in the three-day school, is taking more space each week, and the indications are that the event will be a singularly interesting and highly successful one from every point of view. . . . The Plaza, Masonic Temple, is again a church. A traveling evangelist has leased it for a week or more of special services.

An adjudication of the estate of the recently deceased Paul L. Knorr, Reading shoe wholesaler, was filed in the Berks Orphans' Court. The amount distributed is $312,702, including about $60,000 to charities and to peace promotion societies. Knorr's estate recently sold one of his holdings, the State, later known as the Warner, to the Stanley-Warner theatre interests, Philadelphia, for an undisclosed price.

Schuylkill Haven

The Renninger, Schuylkill County's first drive-in, has opened on a six-day schedule. It is closed Thursdays, the date of the nearby weekly Schuylkill Haven open market. Double bills are shown Saturdays, Sundays, and holidays.

Francis DeVerter, manager, SW Capitol, York, Pa., recently arranged this attractive front on Hallmark's combination of "Karamoja" and "Half Way To Hell."

Scranton

Mayor James Hanlon has appointed Harold Brazill, Roosevelt, as captain of the Life Guards and Bath House Attendants at Lake Lincoln here. . . . President of Projectionists Local 329, Eddie Friedman, Riviera, is vacationing in Delaware. . . . Byron Linn, Comerford executive, spent last fortnight in Indianapolis, where he attended the speed races. . . . Bob Murrin has become the central city relief manager and is presently substituting for Emmett Hart who, with his family, is planning a motor trip to Florida. . . . Mary Alice Patricia Rooney, a niece of Tom Cary, Comerford district manager, Waverly, Pa., was recently graduated from local Marywood Seminary. . . . A bon voyage party at the Blue Lantern Restaurant is planned by her friends for Frimi Spiegal, daughter of Comerford's Harry Spiegel, who will sail shortly on a two-months visit to Palestine.

A tremendous fireworks display on Memorial Night, and also on the previous Sunday night, were the successful holiday devices of manager Bill Keating, Comerford Drive-In, Dupont, Pa., while Al Farrell, manager, Dis-Valley Drive-In, is readying a gift night featuring a $100 gift certificate through the courtesy of the Eynon Drug Store, Eynon, Pa., . . . In conjunction with the opening of "Love Me or Leave Me," manager Ed McGovern has scheduled a surprise preview.

West Chester

The former Rialto theatre, restaurant, and apartment building were sold by Albert M. Greenfield and Company for D. Arthur Magaziner to Max Slavitz for $50,000.

Virginia

Staunton

William Gallagher, for 40 years associated with theatres of this area, and most recently at the Riviera, died last week. . . . Dr. Peter Favini, son of Louis Favini, was recently honored by his friends at a testimonial dinner at the Hotel Casey. . . . Gerard Adams, Comerford district manager, Honesdale-Hawley, has been appointed by Governor Leader to the Pennsyvania Fish Commission to serve until 1960. . . . A former employee of the Capitol, Virginia Wetzel has been graduated from the Mercy Hospital School of Nursing. . . . A Comerford employee for many years, William Kays, father of manager Bill Kays, Capitol, died during the week.

West Point

The York has closed indefinitely leaving this town without a theatre. Mrs. Franklin Darnell was manager. Operated by Pitts Theatres, Inc., Fredericksburg, Benjamin J. Pitts said business had dropped off to such an extent that continued operation would not be practicable. He also said that the theatre is some distance from others in the circuit, making operation difficult. An interest in the theatre was first purchased by Pitts about 25 years ago.

Case Of The Red Monkey (5521)

MYSTERY MELODRAMA 73½M.

(Filmed in England)

ESTIMATE: Satisfactory programmer.

CAST: Richard Conte, Rona Anderson, Russell Napier, Colin Gordon, Arnold Marle, Sylva Langova, Donald Bissett, John King-Kelly. Produced by Alec C. Snowden; directed by Ken Hughes.

STORY: Several murders of nuclear scientists occur in London in a manner that baffles Scotland Yard at about the time that Richard Conte, special officer from the U.S. State Department, arrives to oversee the transfer of Russian scientist Arnold Marle, who escaped from the Reds. An attempt is made on Marle's life with a monkey's paw print found at the scene. Persistent newspaperman Colin Gordon tries to break the case and follows through on some hot leads. Marle is moved secretly to a nursing home. Conte stumbles onto the hideout of the gang behind the killings and is captured, along with Rona Anderson, niece of superintendent Russell Napier. He is tortured to reveal Marle's new hiding place. He manages to escape in time to avert Marle's murder at the hands of a gang member, a midget, who has been the killer of other scientists, getting in where normal sized people fail and being aided by a monkey who opened windows and latches. The gang is killed or rounded up, Conte prepares to leave for the U.S. with Marle, to return to Anderson with whom he is in love.

X-RAY: Lots of action, intrigue, and excitement are to be found in this entry which should round out the program in neat fashion. The cast is good and the direction and production are okeh. The screen play is by James Eastwood and Ken Hughes, based on a story by Eric Maschwitz.

AD LINES: "A Mystery Thriller With A Different Angle On Murder"; "Torn From The Dramatic Headlines Of Today's Newspapers"; "He Was Assigned To Prevent A Murder And Almost Wound Up A Corpse Himself."

Las Vegas Shakedown (5516)

MELODRAMA 79M.

ESTIMATE: Satisfactory programmer.

CAST: Dennis O'Keefe, Coleen Gray, Charles Winninger, Thomas Gomez, Dorothy Patrick, Mary Beth Hughes, Elizabeth Patterson, James Millican, Robert Armstrong, Joseph Downing, Lewis Martin, Mara McAfee. Produced by William F. Broidy; directed by Sidney Salkow.

STORY: To the gambling casino and hotel owned and operated by Dennis O'Keefe in Las Vegas come all kinds of people including Coleen Gray, a mathematics teacher who wants to write a book exposing gambling and who has had little opportunity for romance. She and O'Keefe become friendly. Others not so friendly are waiting to visit O'Keefe, such as ex-convict Thomas Gomez, who has sworn to get him for testifying against him, along with henchmen Robert Armstrong and Joseph Downing. They beat O'Keefe but are interrupted by police before they can kill him. They escape. In a battle with two lone cops, Downing is killed but Gomez gets the police. When Armstrong tries to escape, Gomez wounds him. He gets to O'Keefe before he dies and tells him the location of Gomez and he and O'Keefe have it out. O'Keefe is wounded but he kills Gomez. He and Gray can make wedding plans.

X-RAY: Containing action, dramatic sidelights, intrigue, a bit of romance, and some scenes and settings in Las Vegas, this entry shapes up as a good entry for the program, with interest being maintained pretty much throughout. The cast is okeh, as is the direction and production. The screen play is written by Steve Fisher. A song, "Miss You So," is heard.

TIP ON BIDDING: Program rates.

AD LINES: "Once The Gambling Fever Hit . . . They Were Lost"; "He Had A Way With Women And Dice And When He Called A Bluff He Almost Lost His Life"; "A Killer Makes His Point The Hard Way In A Story Of Thrills And Suspense."

The Petty Girl (745)

COMEDY WITH MUSIC 87M.

(Reprint)

ESTIMATE: Reissue should do okeh.

CAST: Robert Cummings, Joan Caulfield, Elsa Lanchester, Melville Cooper, Audrey Long, Mary Wickes, Frank Orth, John Ridgely, Raymond Largay, Ian Wolfe, Frank Jenks, Tim Ryan, Mabel Paige, Kathleen Howard, Sarah Edwards, Everett Glass, Douglas Wood, Edward Clark, Philip Van Zandt, 12 Petty girls. Produced by Nat Perrin; directed by Henry Levin.

STORY: Robert (artist George Petty) Cummings is persuaded by man-hunting Audrey Long to abandon his curvaceous glamor girls for highbrow art. When he meets Joan Caulfield, beautiful teacher in a prim college, he gets her to pose for him and she is thus forced to quit her position. Finding Cummings again in Long's clutches, Caulfield determines to make the Petty Girl nationally famous, which she does. She also finally wins Cummings.

X-RAY: When first reviewed in THE SERVISECTION of August, 1950, it was said: "This should ride into the higher grosses, backed by the tremendous publicity given to the Petty Girl. The story is sufficient for the singing, dancing and comedy that make this a most pleasant film, produced in an atmosphere of taste, gaiety, and beautiful girls. Caulfield is an ideal lead physically and otherwise, and Cummings is an able comedian in addition to handling the romance. Excellent support comes from Elsa Lanchester, Melville Cooper and others. Looming as one of the biggest merchandising tieup opportunities in some time, this looks as a real potential. Songs include: "The Petty Girl," "Calypso," "Fancy Free," and "Ah Loves You." The story is by Mary McCarthy. When originally released this was in Technicolor, but the reissue is in black and white.

TIP ON BIDDING: Reissue price.

AD LINES: "The Most Luscious Magazine Girl Of All Time Becomes Seductively Alive On The Screen"; "More Gorgeous Than Ever On The Screen"; "The Most Beautiful Girls In The World."

They All Kissed The Bride (741)

COMEDY 86M.

(Reprint)

ESTIMATE: Reissue has names to sell.

CAST: Joan Crawford, Melvyn Douglas, Roland Young, Billie Burke, Allen Jenkins, Andrew Tombes, Helen Parrish, Emory Parnell, Mary Treen, Nydia Westman, Ivan Simpson, Roger Clark, Edward Gargan. Produced by Edward Kaufman; directed by Alexander Hall.

STORY: Joan Crawford, who rules her family with the same iron hand that she runs a trucking corporation, learns that budding author Melvyn Douglas is preparing a story about her late, unscrupulous father which is bound to be uncomplimentary because of his piratical career. She is faced with a damage suit filed by Douglas because she had him arrested for kissing her sister, Helen Parrish, at the latter's wedding, to which Douglas had not been invited. Douglas tells Crawford he will cancel the suit if she goes with him incognito to an employe dance, where she inadvertently wins a jitterbug contest. Douglas' later antics, particularly his unconcern for the money he is suing for, awaken Crawford to romance. Making love, she finds, is more fun than making money.

X-Ray: When first reviewed in The Servisection of June, 1942, it was said: "With the name strength, the direction, and generally fast pace, this emerges as one of the better comedies of its kind. An escapist comedy, it should have plenty of appeal. The jitterbug sequence stands out. This was from a screen play by P. J. Wolfson, from a story by Gina Kaus and Andrew P. Solt."

Tip On Bidding: Reissue Price.

Ad Lines: "This Big Business Woman Was All Business 'Til He Proved She Was All Woman"; "A Story Of The Little Things That Make Love So Precious"; "A Laugh-Filled Love Story That Tells In A New Way The Things That Eve Told Adam."

Mad At The World

Melodrama
71m.

Estimate: Okeh exploitation entry.

Cast: Frank Lovejoy, Keefe Basselle, Cathy O'Donnell, Karen Sharpe, Stanley Clements, Paul Vryar, Paul Duboy, James Delgado, Joseph Turkel, Aaron Spelling, Terence DeMarny. Produced by Collier Young; directed by Harry Essex.

Story: A gang of deliquents looking for excitement and trouble, including Paul Duboy, Stanley Clements, Joseph Turkel, and James Delgado, borrow a car and attack Keefe Brasselle, his wife Cathy O'Donnell, and their baby, who is seriously injured by a thrown whiskey bottle. Captain of detectives Frank Lovejoy and his assistant Paul Bryar try to follow through with not much to go on. Brasselle takes matters in his own hands, traces the car to Aaron Spelling, who is beaten by Brasselle before he can prove his innocense. He gets friendly with the gang's girl friend, Karen Sharpe, and gets to meet the gang. With a hidden gun, he invites them out for a drink, but they are tipped to his identity. They take him to a lumber mill intending to kill him. Turkel is picked up and tells Lovejoy the whole story. Brasselle breaks away and a hand-to-hand fight between him and leader Duboy takes place, with Duboy falling to the ground seriously hurt. Brasselle is about to kill him with his gun when Lovejoy arrives and persuades Brasselle to surrender the gun and let the law take its natural course. The baby dies.

X-Ray: Not a pleasant film by any means, this entry deals with the ever-increasing problems of delinquency among older boys and girls and because of its timeliness, butality and a certain amount of animal excitement, this could do okeh as part of the program. The story is average, making its point without trying to solve anything, and it mounts in tempo and excitement until the climax, which is fast-moving. The screen play is by Harry Essex.

The Cobweb (531)

Drama
124m.

(CinemaScope) (Eastman Color)

Estimate: Highly interesting entry about a mental sanitarium, its patients, and its personnel.

Cast: Richard Widmark, Lauren Bacall, Charles Boyer, Gloria Grahame, Lillian Gish, John Kerr, Susan Strasberg, Oscar Levant, Tommy Rettig, Paul Stewart, Jarma Lewis, Adele Jergens, Edgar Stehli, Sandra Descher, Bert Freed, Mabel Albertson, Fay Wray, Oliver Blake, Olive Carey, Eve McVeagh. Directed by Vincente Minnelli; produced by John Houseman.

Story: Dr. Richard Widmark, recently appointed to supervise a small psychiatric clinic, has modern ideas about patient rehabilitation. When the library is in need of new drapes he agrees with activities director Lauren Bacall that it would be good for the patients to replace the old ones as a project. They agree to let inmate John Kerr, much troubled, design them. Meanwhile Widmark's wife, Gloria Grahame, unaware of the decision, decides to replace them as a help to her husband. Lillian Gish, spinster in charge of the clinic's business affairs, decides to replace the drapes as cheaply as possible, also unaware of other plans. Grahame, feeling neglected, takes refuge in the embrace and consolation of nominal head of the institution, Dr. Charles Boyer, free with whiskey and women, while Widmark's interest in Bacall increases. Widmark berates his wife for her interference, orders Gish to let the patients make the drapes, but doesn't reckon with Boyer who suddenly asserts his authority and rescinds Widmark's orders. When Kerr learns he no longer is to do anything on the project, his emotions give way and he runs away. An alarm goes out which warns he may kill himself and authorities drag the river. Widmark is forced to attend a meeting of the board of directors where he defends his methods and Boyer offers his resignation, thus ending the crisis at the clinic. Kerr returns, and Widmark and Grahame agree to try and straighten out things between them.

X-Ray: Interesting in plot, development, characterizations, this entry concerns itself with the thoughts and actions of patients in a psychiatric clinic as well as with the lives of several of its supervisory personnel. The problems of one group are counterbalanced by those of the other, the result being off-beat and of an absorbing nature to adult audiences. The pace is fast, so that the length of the film is not distressing. Interest is maintained pretty much throughout. The cast comes through in fine fashion with Widmark, Bacall, and Gish particularly noticeable, and newcomer John Kerr also impressing. The direction and production are in the better class. The screen play is by John Paxton based on the novel by William Gibson, with additional dialogue by Gibson.

Tip On Bidding: Higher rates where this type of entry will be appreciated.

The Seven Little Foys (5413)

Comedy With Music
95m.

(Technicolor) (VistaVision)

Estimate: Top Hope entry is headed for high grosses.

Cast: Bob Hope, Milly Vitale, Angela Clarke, George Tobias, Billy Gray, Lee Erickson, Paul De Rolf, Linda Bennett, Lydia Reed, Tommy Duran, Jimmy Baird, James Cagney. Produced by Jack Rose; directed by Melville Shavelson.

Story: Bob (Eddie Foy) Hope, a single in vaudeville, is attractive to the ladies but manages to escape the matrimonial venture. Agent George Tobias promises to catch his act, but a ballerina from Italy, Milly Vitale, doing the turn before Hope, stays on so long that Hope is afraid the agent will leave. In desperation he butts in on the ballerina with such hilarious results that Tobias wants to sign them as an act. Hope urges Vitale into signing. However, when he finds out that the only condition she would team up with him was by marriage he turns down the chance. Later, he hears that she has returned to Italy and will soon wed. He goes there and they are married, returning to the U.S. to open at the Palace in New York. At the zero hour, he discovers that his wife is pregnant and this thwarts his lifelong ambition to play the top vaudeville house in the nation. Seven children arrive in rapid succession; he buys a house, and to support his brood is away from home most of the time doing a single. Almost a stranger in his own house, the children come to regard him as such. When his wife dies, Hope is forced to return home to be a mother and father to the children, aided by his wife's older sister, Angela Clarke, who disapproves of his way of life. Knowing his limitations, Hope decides to build up a family act using all seven kids. The act is an instant success. Just as they have made the grade and have been booked into the Palace, Clarke, thinking she is doing the right thing for the children, hauls Hope into court for not being a fit father. The children rally to his aid and the presiding judge decides they should stay a show business family.

X-Ray: This is one of the best pictures Bob Hope has ever made. A happy mixture of corn, tears, and all-out comedy, Hope turns in a performance which should ring up good business in all situations, whether audiences of today ever heard of Eddie Foy and his famed vaudeville family or not. VistaVision greatly enhances the splendid color camera work and the production numbers are tops. Hope is just great in a semi-straight role. The appeal will be high for all the family. This has all the angles for exploitation and should send people from the theatre well entertained and reindoctrinated with the Hope brand of humor. Production and direction are top drawer throughout. The cast, which includes a show-stopping bit by Jimmy Cagney as George M. Cohan, back Hope to the hilt. This was written for the screen by Melville Shavelson and Jack Rose. Songs heard include "Mary Is A Grand Old Name," "The Greatest Father Of Them All," "Smiles," "Row, Row, Row," "Chinatown," "I'm Tired," "Nobody," "Yankee Doodle Boy," and "The Animal Act."

Tip On Bidding: Higher brackets.

(Reissue)

Estimate: Names should help reissue.

CAST: Henry Fonda, Lucille Ball, Barton MacLane, Eugene Pallette, Agnes Moorehead, Sam Levent, Ray Collins, Marion Martin, William Orr, George Cleveland, Vera Gordon, Louise Beavers, Millard Mitchell, Juan Varro, Hans Conreid, Harry Shannon, William Halligan, John Miljan, Don Barclay, Julius Tannen, Ozzie Nelson and Orchestra. Written and produced by Damon Runyon; directed by Irving Reis.

STORY: Lucille Ball, haughty show girl, is mistress of night club owner Barton MacLane. When she tries to ditch MacLane for society man William Orr, he knocks her down a flight of stairs, injuring her spine. Busboy Henry Fonda, secretly in love with her for years, steps in when all of her friends desert her, takes care of her, first hocking all of her jewelry to raise money, then taking her to his humble room. Feeling that she can once again interest Orr if she can get to him in Florida, Ball insists on Fonda taking her there. With the aid of his friends, all typical Broadway characters and mostly horse players, Fonda gets her to Palm Beach. There she meets Orr, but when he finds she is a cripple he loses all interest. Ball collapses and the doctor tells Fonda that unless her illusions of grandeur are restored she will die. Fonda learns that MacLane is head of a gang of jewel thieves, blackmails him into tossing a party at a swank club with Ball as guest of honor. The party is a success until police enter, with proof that Fonda stole wealthy Marion Martin's jewels. As they are about to break up the party, Ray Collins, one of Fonda's friends, tells the true story of the jewel theft. Hearing this, George Cleveland, Martin's husband, does his best to make the party a success. Ball sings the song for which she was once famous in New York, confides to Fonda that she is at last happy, and that she wouldn't mind being a cripple if only she could dance once more. With Fonda supporting her, she works her way around the floor, collapses in Fonda's arms, and dies.

X-RAY: When first reviewed in THE SERVISECTION of August, 1942, it was said: "Sticking closely to the Damon Runyon formula of underlying tragedy with broad overtones of Broadway comedy, this is one of the better Runyon stories so far brought to the screen. For those who have read and enjoyed the Runyon stories this is a film that will be well appreciated, but it may have heavy going in the smaller spots. It deserves the best of attention. One song is "Who Knows."

TIP ON BIDDING: Reissue price.

AD LINES: "One Of The Late Damon Runyon's Most Famous Stories"; "He Had A Heart As Big As Broadway And It All Belonged To Her"; "Cinderella Got Her Glass Slipper, But The Prince Turned Out To Be A Busboy."

The Seven Year Itch (517)

COMEDY
105M.

(CinemaScope) (Color by DeLuxe)

ESTIMATE: Highly amusing comedy should do better business.

CAST: Marilyn Monroe, Tom Ewell, Evelyn Keyes, Sonny Tufts, Robert Strauss, Oscar Homolka, Marguerite Chapman, Victor Moore, Roxanne, Donald MacBride, Carolyn Jones, Butch Bernard, Doro Merando, Dorothy Ford. Produced by Charles K. Feldman and Billy Wilder; directed by Billy Wilder.

STORY: The Indians on Manhattan Island used to send their squaws and children off to the cooler interior while they remained at home to toil in the summer heat and appreciate what females were left. Some hundreds of years later, the custom is still the same, and among the hundreds of husbands seeing their wives and youngsters off is Tom Ewell, who bids wife Evelyn Keyes and son Butch Bernard farewell. He plans to stop smoking and drinking pursuant to doctor's orders. At home, one of the three apartments in a brownstone, he settles down to read an office manuscript when the bell rings. He finds Marilyn Monroe, who explains that she has rented the apartment upstairs while the regular tenants have gone to Europe for the summer. He dreams of imaginary affairs with secretary Marguerite Chapman, nurse Carolyn Jones, friend of Keyes' Roxanne, etc. Keyes calls to report the safe arrival and also that an old friend, Sonny Tufts, is visiting in the vicinity. Monroe accidentally knocks off a plant which lands on his patio and he invites her down for a drink, after which cigarettes and scotch follow one another. They get friendly until Ewell decides she had better go. The next day his conscience bothers him and he even consults psychiatrist Oscar Homolka. Another date follows that night and she asks couldn't she sleep in the apartment since it's air conditioned. That night and the next morning more conscience rumblings and dreaming. He finally blows his top and decides to go spend two weeks of vacation with Keyes, but quick. He takes off, leaving Monroe the apartment until he gets back, air conditioning and all.

X-RAY: Loaded with highly humorous scenes, dialogue, and situations, this entry should prove quite popular with audiences seeking light, gay, and amusing film fare. Laughs abound aplenty from start to finish. Interest is kept on high from start to finish, with Tom Ewell walking off with the acting honors being on the screen practically all of the time. His clever performance makes the entire operation believable, while Monroe looks particularly attractive and is well suited for her role. Direction and production are in the better class. A "sneak" preview audience found the proceedings thoroughly entertaining. The screen play is by Billy Wilder and George Axelrod, based on the original stage play by Axelrod.

TIP ON BIDDING: Higher rates.

AD LINES: "Every Husband Gets It Provided He is Married Long Enough"; "She Was After His Air Conditioner—He Was After Other Things. The Result Is A Hilarious Comedy"; "Have Some Real Fun—Get 'The Seven Year Itch'."

(Welles)
(Filmed in Italy)

ESTIMATE: Shakespeare work for the art and specialty houses.

CAST: Orson Welles, Michael MacLiammoir, Suzanne Cloutier, Robert Coote, Milton Edwards, Michael Lawrence, Fay Compton, Nicholas Bruce, Jean Davis, Doris Dowling. Produced and directed by Orson Welles.

STORY: Orson Welles as Othello, a Moorish general, woos and wins Desdemona, played by Suzanne Cloutier, daughter of a Venetian senator, who is angry over the romance and accuses Welles of stealing the girl via black magic spells. Welles is sent to the island of Cypress to oppose the Turks, and Cloutier accompanies him. Welles incurs the wrath of junior officer Michael "Iago" MacLiammoir when he promotes another, Michael Lawrence, as his second in command MacLiammoir plots Lawrence's downfall and when he is demoted, suggests he get Cloutier to intercede with Welles for him. He also arouses suspicion in Welles' mind about their relationship, even to planting clues that would implicate them, obtained by forcing his wife, Fay Compton, to steal a handkerchief from Cloutier. Welles, influenced by the false evidence, kills Cloutier, after which Compton reveals MacLiammoir's guilt. Welles takes his life while MacLiammoir is arrested and sentenced to be torn to shreds by vultures.

X-RAY: Art house devotees, students, and lovers of Shakespeare should go for this entry in a big way, for it has dramatic impact, fine performances, a good interpretation of the Shakespeare work, as well and better direction and production of its type. It is doubtful whether the average audience would appreciate the entry with its language of yore and off-beat situations. Welles is very good as the lead, director, and producer.

AD LINES: "One Of Shakespeare's Most Noted Works Brought To The Screen As Dramatic Entertainment By Orson Welles"; "A Thrill-Packed Drama Of Love . . . Its Trust And Mistrust . . . Its Inspirations And Consequences"; "Shakespeare At His Best . . . A Screen Treat Not To Be Missed."

(Eastman Color—Print by Technicolor)

ESTIMATE: Stage play filmization has angles.

CAST: Katherine Heyburn, Rossano Brazzi, Isa Miranda, Darren McGavin, Mari Aldon, Jane Rose, MacDonald Parke, Gaitano Audiero, Andre Morell, Jereny Spenser, Virginia Simeon. Produced by Ilya Lopert; directed by David Lean.

STORY: American secretary Katherine Hepburn arrives for her first visit to Europe and Venice, in particular. She notices that with the night, people seem to pair up automatically, and she feels lonely. During a shopping tour, she makes the acquaintance of attractive shop owner Rossano Brazzi, and he asks her out. She agrees to another date but discovers that Brazzi is married, though not living with his wife, and that he has several youngsters. He persuades her not to ask questions of romance but accept it where and when she finds it, and they spend some days together until she realizes that there is no future in their relationship and she decides it's time to go home. She finds it hard to make the break but does so.

X-RAY: A tour of Venice can be had by viewing this entry, along with other items such as romance, atmosphere, a fairly interesting story, and efficient performances, direction, and production. Paced in leisurely fashion, the entry, written by David Lean and H. E. Bates based on the play, "The Time Of The Cuckoo," by Arthur Laurents, should please discriminating moviegoers who will appreciate the film's finer points. A little extra selling can insure better returns. The use of actual backgrounds provides a fine assist in putting the film across. A song, "Summertime in Venice," can be heard throughout.

TIP ON BIDDING: Higher bracket depending on situation.

AD LINES: "An American Secretary Seeks Romance On Her First Trip To Venice . . . And Finds It"; "Anything Can Happen In Summertime In Venice . . . And It Did"; "She Was Lonely And He Told Her To Take Her Romance When She Could Find It."

(Color by Technicolor)

ESTIMATE: Interesting drama.

CAST: Jane Russell, Jeff Chandler, Dan Duryea, Mara Corday, Robert F. Simon, Frieda Inescort, Barton MacLane, Charlotte Wynters, Eddy C. Waller, Celia Lovsky, Arthur Space, Phil Chambers, Robert Bice, Vici Raaf, Grace Lenard, Guy Wilkerson. Produced by Aaron Rosenberg; directed by Joseph Pevney.

STORY: While vacationing at a guest ranch in Arizona, socialite Jane Russell meets and falls in love with Jeff Chandler, engineer at a nearby copper mine, and despite the fact that he is half Indian, marries him. She goes to live in his house. He has few friends because of his background, but among them is mine doctor Dan Duryea, who drinks too much, and his nurse, half-Indian Mara Corday, in love with him. More and more of Chandler's time is taken by plans to reopen an old mine once owned by the Indians. He wins support from mine owner Robert F. Simon, aided by Russell. Neglected by Chandler, she turns to Duryea for companionship and doesn't even try to tell Chandler that she is going to have a baby. She has a miscarriage but pulls through alright. Her mother, Frieda Inescort, who has been against the marriage from the start, convinces her to take a short vacation and plan on freeing herself. Chandler is too proud to beg her to return. He devotes himself more and more to his work and finally discovers the lost gold vein after a terrific explosion that injures some, including Chandler. Russell hears of his injuries and rushes to his side.

X-RAY: This entry has a little of everything, including romance, intrigue, action, colorful and off-beat settings and situations, good performances, an interesting yarn, and okeh direction and production. Colorfully presented, the film with a little selling can wind up in the better-than-average column. The screen play is by Ketti Fringe based on the story by Anya Seton. There is a song, "Foxfire," sung by Chandler, which is heard at the start of the film. This bears a Legion of Decency "B" rating.

TIP ON BIDDING: Higher program rates.

AD LINES: "She Had A Yen For Him Nothing Could Extinguish"; "What Was The Secret Of 'Foxfire' And How Could It Affect Their Future? The Answer Is Highly Dramatic Entertainment"; "Jane's Got Jeff And A Pack Of Trouble Too."

The Purple Mask (530)

MELODRAMA

(CinemaScope) (Technicolor)

ESTIMATE: Satisfactory programmer.

STORY: Tony Curtis, a supposedly innocuous dandy, is in reality the "Purple Mask," who rescues noblemen from the blade of Napoleon's guillotine. Curtis manages to capture and hold for ransom minister of police John Hoyt. Napoleon, infuriated, directs Dan O'Herlihy to take up the hunt for Curtis. O'Herlihy formulates a plan to capture the "Mask," using imprisoned nobleman Paul Cavanaugh as the bait. His daughter, Colleen Miller, and her Royalist friends learn of the plot and devise a plan of their own. They arrange for a man masquerading as the "Mask" to be captured, leaving the real "Mask" free to continue unhindered his anti-government activities. Ignorant of his real identity, they choose Curtis for the job and instruct him to kidnap a government official. Although the police are waiting for him, Curtis succeeds in the capture, the official turning out to be O'Herlihy in disguise. When Miller and her friends are captured, Curtis, with the aid of a Royalist fencing master and his 50 pupils, overpower the soldiers. The imprisoned Royalists are to be executed, but the soldiers have been replaced by the Royalist swordsmen. After winning a duel with O'Herlihy, Curtis convinces Napoleon to allow the Royalist prisoners, including Miller, safe conduct to England.

X-RAY: This adventure meller contains an abundant amount of action in the form of swordplay and intrigue. Curtis turns in a suitable performance in his dashing role, while Miller adequately handles the romantic angle. Production and direction are good. CinemaScope, Technicolor, and the Curtis name should make for good selling angles. Screen play is by Oscar Brodney; based on "Le Chevalier Au Masques" by Paul Armont and Jean Manoussi.

TIP ON BIDDING: Program rates.

ESTIMATE: For the art and specialty houses.

CAST: Richard Attenborough, Cathy O'Donnell, Derek Farr, Ian Hunter, Maurice Denham, Bruce Seton, Harry Welchman, Kynaston Reeves, Lilly Kann, Eithne Dunne, Cheryl Molineaux, Totti Truman Taylor, Robert Adair, Grace Arnold, David Hannaford, Sally Stephens, Vernon Kelso, Robert Sydney, Max Brimmell, Humphrey Morton, Arthur Hewlett, Philip King, Jean St. Clair, Enid Hewit. Produced by George King; directed by Lance Comfort.

STORY: Taxi driver Richard Attenborough is led to an abandoned bomb-site by an eight-year-old girl as an April-fool prank. When the girl is found murdered, Attenborough is picked up for questioning and later arrested for the murder. The trial is to take place in London's Old Bailey court house. Attenborough's wife, Cathy O'Donnell, fights for and wins the sympathy of Council for the Defense, Derek Farr. At the trial, Farr is opposed by his father, Prosecuting Attorney Ian Hunter. The trial is presided over by Judge Harry Welchman, whose wife is at the hospital undergoing an operation. As the trial proceeds it becomes evident that the evidence points to Attenborough as the murderer. His wife sticks faithfully by him and Farr tries valiantly for an acquittal, but all seems hopeless. Farr sees prosecution witness Maurice Denham outside the courthouse, giving candy to a small girl. Farr identifies the candy as being the same kind as that which was found upon the murdered girl. The judge's wife has died, but the trial resumes with Farr recalling Denham to the stand. The Defense cross-examines the perverted man until he breaks down and confesses.

X-RAY: Mildly interesting, this import is best suited for the art and specialty spots. A degree of suspense is maintained throughout the film with performances, direction, and production falling into the good category. Screen play is by John Baines.

(De Rochemont)

(Swedish-made) (English narration)

ESTIMATE: Excellent import for the art spots.

CAST: Anders Norborg, Kjell Sucksdorff, Arne Sucksdorff. Produced and directed by Arne Sucksdorff.

STORY: A vixen mother invades a chicken coop to provide food for her cubs. The vixen continues to raid the coop until she is shot by a farmer. The cubs are attacked by the farmer and only one survives. An otter trapped in a burrow is rescued by 10-year-old Anders Norborg and his six-year-old brother, Kjell Sucksdorff. In secret, the boys cage the animal and finally domesticate it. They obtain food for the otter by fishing through the ice on a frozen lake. Time passes, and still the boy's secret is kept from the rest of the world. On the eve of the May Day festival Sucksdorff reveals to family and friends the otter's presence. This so distresses Norborg that he dashes into the woods with the animal. The otter breaks away and again returns to its life of natural freedom.

X-RAY: Excellent photography illustrates a simple but vividly realistic story of two boys growing up on a Swedish farm. Photographer Arne Sucksdorff has captured the mood and the beauty of the Swedish countryside and has combined them with an intimate story, the result being a superior film for art and specialty audiences. The film was a prize winner at the 1954 Cannes Film Festival.

ESTIMATE: Quality export for the art spots.

CAST: Yoshi Katoh, Eiji Okada, Isuzu Yamada, Yasuaki Takano, Masayuki Tsukida, Isako Machida, Hiromi Murase, Yumeji Tsukioka. Directed by Hideo Sekigawa.

STORY: On August 5, 1945, in Hiroshima, Isuzu Yamada, whose husband is away fighting in the war, is cooking supper for her three children. Air-raid sirens send them scurrying for shelter. They remain in hiding until the all-clear is sounded the next morning. The new day begins with children going to school or helping clear the rubble, while adults proceed about their daily tasks. Planes are heard overhead, followed by a blinding flash that is over in a moment. When the mushroom cloud blows out to sea, the city lays engulfed in a nightmare of destruction and terror. Yoshi Katoh, whose wife dies in the flames, finds his eldest son dead in a jammed hospital. His two younger children, returning from their evacuation, find their home gone and their father dying in a hospital, from which one flees in fright. The other, alone now, turns to begging to keep alive. Seven years late, he (Masayuki Tsukida) is living with an uncle and working in his factory. When the factory starts to make armaments, he becomes bitter. Seeing street urchins trying to sell atom bomb souvenirs to tourists, he shows them skulls of A-bomb victims that they could sell. When he tries to sell the skulls he is arrested, but is released through the intervention of his schoolmaster.

X-RAY: Vivid in realism, tragedy, and moral propaganda, this entry will serve as powerful off-beat fare in art and specialty spots. The film's brutal sequences regarding the Atom bomb and its after effects may be offensive to those looking for mild entertainment, but few will fail to grasp the entry's forceful and meaningful message. Production, performances, and direction are good. Story and screen play is by Yasutaro Yagi.

ESTIMATE: Good import for the art spots.

CAST: Ivan Desny, Ruth Niehaus, Rene Deltgen, Karl John, Lila Kedrowa, Serge Belousow, Alf Marholm. Produced by Stuart Schulberg; directed by Victor Vicas.

STORY: In 1945, Russian Army officer Ivan Desny comes across a frightened Ruth Niehaus huddled in a Berlin cellar. He escorts her home and wins her gratitude. Seven years later, Desny, who has been living is Moscow, returns to Berlin as a civilian engineer in charge of factory production. He remembers Niehaus and searches for her in the western sector, where he is observed by the Secret Police. Desny is instructed to report to the chief of the Secret Police, Rene Deltgen, and after being reprimanded for leaving the eastern zone, Desny discovers that Deltgen's secretary is Niehaus. Factory manager Karl John resents the Russians and attempts to murder Desny. Desny is seriously injured but recovers and wins John's respect and confidence. John discloses that he is planning to escape to the western zone, and Desny gives him the address of a contact in free Germany. John's plot is discovered by the police and he commits suicide. When the police find the contact's address on John, Desny and Niehaus, who are now deeply in love, are forced to flee to the western zone. Russian secret police trick Niehaus into a car and start their drive toward the eastern sector from which there is no way back.

X-RAY: Interesting, well made, and timely, the entry is okeh entertainment for art and specialty audiences. The film moves along at a good pace with its story being presented in a realstic and suspenseful fashion. Performances and direction are good. Screen play is by Gerhard T. Bucholtz and Victor Vicas.

Murder In Villa Capri

MELODRAMA

(Screen Guild)

ESTIMATE: Mediocre lower half filler.

CAST: John Heath, Neil Hamilton, Esther Minciotti, Joe Wippler, Denise Griffin, Astride Sigismondi, Florence Mercur, Linda Blodgett. Produced by Paul Burton-Mercur; directed by Otto Simetti.

STORY: Police lieutenant John Heath is assigned to stamp out a lottery being conducted in an average American city among the Italian population. He is warned to lay off but refuses despite pleas by his wife who fears for his safety. At the Villa Capri restaurant, the gang murders one of its members who is stepping out of line. Heath tries to shoot the fleeing killers but kills a friend, who accidentally gets in the way. When his daughter is killed, his wife leaves him, but he still refuses to give up and pursues the thing to its conclusion. His wife returns to him and they try to start all over again, hoping for a happier future.

X-RAY: In areas where there are Italian-speaking inhabitants this may go over nicely because there is quite a bit of that language spoken in the film. Elsewhere, it will just serve as fair filler on the program with amateurish performances, direction and production. There is a story by Paul Burton-Mercur supposedly based on a true-crime story he had published, but on the screen it rambles all over the place.

AD LINES: "Assigned To A Case, He Refused To Give It Up For Threats Or Family"; "He Had A Murder To Solve And Nothing Would Stand In His Way."

ESTIMATE: For the lower half.

CAST: John Ireland, Jane Randolph, Roman Bohnen, Sheldon Leonard, George Tyne, Morgan Farley, Ellen Lowe, Anne O'Neal, Arthur O'Connell, John Alvin, Bert Conway, Rory Mallinson, Helena Dare, Leo Kaye, King Donovan, Tom Noonan, Charles Waldron, Jr. Produced by Frank Satenstein; directed by John Reinhardt.

STORY: Charles Waldron invites army buddy John Ireland and new bride Jane Randolph to share his apartment for a few days. When the honeymooners arrive, they discover that Waldron is not at the apartment. It is learned by the couple that there is an anti-Semitic movement in the neighborhood and the Waldron apartment has been rifled. Morgan Farley asks to see Waldron in connection with a letter received, stating that Waldron has important information for Farley's magazine "Snap." When Waldron's murdered body is found by the police, Ireland and Randolph leave some films to be developed at the shop of George Tyne, who is being persecuted by a Fascist-minded gang because of his race. The photographs show gang members in acts of desecration. The gang gets Ireland and Tyne in the latter's shop and starts to beat them. The police arrive and arrest the Fascists. The police and Ireland return to the apartment where Farley, the real leader of the gang, is struggling with Randolph. Farley attempts to escape and is shot and killed.

X-RAY: This entry handles well its racial persecution theme, the result being a mildly interesting film that gets its point across without an undue amount of crusading. The picture is acceptable for action spots in view of its abundant amount of violence and turmoil. Performances, direction, and production are satisfactory. Screen play is by Henry Blankfort and Max Wilk; original story by Max Wilk and Ted Murkland.

TWO REEL

Comedy

HISS AND YELL. Columbia—Assorted Reprints. 18m. When first reviewed in THE SERVISECTION of May, 1946, it was said: "Vera Vague, at a charity rally, meets a magician on the train whose specialty is decapitating a dummy, Vague spots the head of the dummy in his grip, and by mistake takes his grip, which looks exactly like hers, when she gets off the train. When she finally gets to her friend's home, she finds the magcian is also staying there. Thinking she has stolen the head, he gives chase with a huge razor, until she realizes the situation, and falls Vague-fashion into his arms. GOOD." (7426).

TRAINING FOR TROUBLE. Columbia—Comedy Favorite Re-releases. 15½m. When first reviewed in THE SERVISECTION of July, 1947, it was said: "Schilling and Lane, a couple of broken-down hoofers, are on their last legs, when they receive a call from their agent, telling them that he has found a job. Everything is hunky-dory until the boys climb aboard the train with their monkey. Trouble follows trouble until they are finally discharged from the troupe and tossed off the train. FAIR." (7436).

Documentary

DEVIL TAKE US. RKO—Theatre of Life. 21m. Safety on the highway is a problem and all of its aspects are seen by a California highway patrolman and the camera at the same time, and all characters in the film are real, either living or dead. Officers are seen taking all situations in stride, while driver types are well captured by the camera. The film is an effective lesson in driving safety. EXCELLENT. (53301).

Drama

AT THE STROKE OF TWELVE. Warners—Classics Of The Screen. 20m. When first reviewed in THE SERVISECTION of November, 1941, it was said of this reissue: "A two-reel version of Damon Runyon's "Midnight Alibi," this suffers because too much has to be crammed into the running time. It tells of a Broadway gangster whose true alibi is an old lady recluse, Elizabeth Risdon, who comes to help him avert the electric chair. Despite fast pace, this lacks suspense, although it is interesting in the telling. FAIR." (2105).

Musical

GIRL TIME. Universal-International—Musical Featurettes. 16m. This musical short features Ina Ray Hutton singing "When My Sugar Walks Down The Street," Tina and Coco dancing to the tune of "Casteneta Espanol," Lucita on the Marimba performing "Rhapsodic Fantasie," Ina Ray Hutton vocalizing with "Jamaica Rumba," the Costello Twins, acrobatic team, performing to the tune of "Mambola," singer and pianist Nellie Lutcher performing "Real Gone Guy," and the Ina Ray Hutton Orchestra performing "Granada." GOOD. (1307).

Color Historical

WAVE OF THE FLAG. Warners—Specials. Color by WarnerColor. 19m. Within a 150-mile radius of the Washington Monument stand the major historical shrines of the nation. Shown are Jamestown and Williamsburg, Philadelphia and its Liberty Bell, Valley Forge, Yorktown, the White House, the White House of the Confederation, Appomatox Courthouse, Ford's theatre, where Lincoln was shot, the monument to the Unknown Soldier. EXCELLENT. (2010).

Color Novelty

THE KING'S SECRET. Universal-International—Special. (Color.) 16m. Steve Allen comments on his wife's orders to him to get a haircut, and he then recalls the secret of a king having to do with barbers and a haircut. Through the medium of puppets, the audience learns that King Looie is reluctant to have his hair cut because he has long ears like a rabbit beneath his shaggy mane. He finally takes a chance on a barber and swears him to secrecy but the latter had to tell someone or something or bust. He winds up telling a willow and soon the four winds have it. The moral, it seems, is that it matters not how long the ears are but rather it's the man between them that counts. Aside from normal bookings, art house patrons might also appreciate this because of its off-beat components. GOOD.

Serial

ADVENTURES OF CAPTAIN AFRICA. Columbia—Serial. 15 chapters. John Hart, Rick Vallin, Ben Welden, June Howard, Bud Osborne, Paul Marion, Lee Roberts. Produced by Sam Katzman; directed by Spencer G. Bennet; story and screen play by George H. Plympton. Chapter one—"Mystery Man Of The Jungle," 25m. Bud Osborne, wild animal trapper in the Near East, and adventurer Rick Vallin become interested in Osborne's Arabian assistant, Ben Welden, who was once rescued from an attacking leopard by the legendary Captain Africa (John Hart). They follow him to a jungle meeting attended by Arabian girl, June Howard, where Paul Marion, a deposed caliph, is trying to win forces to help him regain his throne. Attacked by a guard, Vallin seeks a refuge in a cave. He suddenly finds himself trapped by burning oil. There is sufficient action and excitement here for serial requirements. FAIR. (7160).

ONE REEL

Color Cartoons

AQUARELA DO BRASIL. RKO—Walt Disney Cartoon Reissues. 8m. This is still more of Disney's "Saludos, Amigos," first reviewed in THE SERVISECTION of December, 1942, when it was said: "Following live action carnival scenes in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, Donald Duck meets Jose Carioca, sporty parrot, who spouts rapid-fire Portuguese mixed with English, and offers to show him the sights. He teaches him the native dance, the samba, takes him to Rio's night spots, and shows him Rio's scenic wonders. This closes with a farewell view of Rio's picturesque harbor. Songs heard are "Aquarela Do Brasil," which in English is "Watercolor Of Brazil"; and "Tico Tico No Fuba." This is outstanding artistically. GOOD." (54111).

HARE BRUSH. Warners—Bugs Bunny Specials. 7m. Elmer Fudd, in a rest home, thinks he is a rabbit. Bugs Bunny trades places with Elmer, with Bugs staying in the rest home and Elmer hopping away. A psychiatrist convinces Bugs that Bugs is Elmer and he is discharged as cured. Bugs goes rabbit hunting and hunts Elmer. Bugs is arrested for non-payment of Elmer's income tax. GOOD. (2727).

HOP, LOOK AND LISTEN. Warners Blue Ribbon Hit Parades Reissues. 7m. When first reviewed in THE SERVISECTION of April, 1948, it was said: "A baby jumping kangaroo escapes from the zoo, and a cat that resorts to fisherman's techniques in his mouse hunting mistakes it for a mouse. When bested in the encounter, a large bulldog becomes ashamed of the cat for being afraid of what he also thinks is a mouse; but he, too, becomes scared when he mistakes mama kangaroo, who has come looking for her baby, for a 'king-sized' mouse. FAIR." (2310).

KIDDIE CONCERT. Universal-International—Walter Lantz Cartunes Reissues. 7m. When first reviewed in THE SERVISECTION of April, 1948, it was said: "The school orchestra directed by Wally Walrus, renders its own concert for the benefit of an audience composed of animals. At a particularly sad passage in the music, the tears from the audience create a small flood in the hall, making for some confusion. The finale sees the leader, Wally, caught in the midst of a wad of bubble gum, and having his troubles. FAIR." (1354).

KUKUNUTS. Columbia—Color Favorites Reissues. 6½m. When first reviewed in THE SERVISECTION of July, 1945, it was said: "The Fox, cast away on a deserted island for 20 years with cocoanuts as the only thing to eat, imagines a delicious feast when the Crow makes his appearance. But the ingenius Crow manages to get out of his snare, causing the Fox much discomfort. The Fox is again outwitted. GOOD." (7613).

LIGHT AND MANKIND. Baker-Brill. 9m. This artistically constructed cartoon in Technicolor tells the story of man's continued striving for better sources of light. The evolution of light is reviewed, from early wick and candle illumination to modern electricity, neon, and fluorescent bulbs. The story is not narrated, but background music accentuates the excellent color animation. EXCELLENT.

LITTLE 'TINKER. MGM—Gold Medal Reprint Cartoons. 7m. When first reviewed in THE SERVISECTION of June, 1948, it was said: "A love-sick skunk finds himself repulsed by all the creatures of the forest due to his b.o. Cupid finally gives him a book on how to make love, but his experiences while trying to follow instructions still get him nowhere until he tries the chapter on camouflage. Then he meets with success with a gorgeous femme fox. It turns out that she, too, is a camouflaged skunk, but it doesn't matter. The greater portion of this is taken up with a burlesque on Frank Sinatra. GOOD." (W-667).

MOTHER HUBBA-HUBBA-HUBBARD. Columbia Color Favorites Reissues. 6m. When first reviewed in THE SERVISECTION of June, 1947, it was said: "Poor Mother Hubbard goes to the cupboard only to find it bare. When the dog learns of this, he suspects everyone in the household. Then starts a very confusing chase with everyone trying to get hold of a suitcase, thinking that it contains a bone. When the dog finally gets possession of it, only to find it empty, he is reminded of his sleep-walking habits, and is told that he ate it in his sleep. FAIR." (7612).

MOUSE IN THE HOUSE. MGM—Gold Medal Reprint Cartoons. 8m. When first reviewed in THE SERVISECTION of September, 1947, it was said: "Jerry, the mouse, is discovered in the house by Tom, the cat, his best friend, who is given strict orders to capture him. This is easier said than accomplished, however, as Jerry is not one to give up very easily. In fact, the tiny mouse gets the better of the deal all around. GOOD." (W-666).

PAST PERFUMANCE. Warners—Merry Melodies. 7m. A French motion picture studio, vintage of 1913, is the stage for the antics of skunk Pepe LePew. Pepe first drives away actors and technicians with his invigorating aroma, and then proceeds to pursue a girl cat whom he thinks is another skunk. The chase leads through various sets and projection rooms and winds up with Pepe transforming himself into a cat with the aid of a paint brush. EXCELLENT. (2717).

PAW'S NIGHT OUT. Universal-International—Walter Lantz Cartunes. 6m. Paw arrives home late and unable to enter the house quietly, he enlists the aid of his pet pig, Milford. Milford devises plans for getting Paw into the house without Maw's knowledge, but they all fail. Finally Paw goes to the back door and finds it open. Maw, who was also out late, returns home through the back way. Paw goes out the front way to berate her and again finds himself locked out. When Maw opens the front door, Paw is met with a rolling pin greeting. GOOD. (1329).

PIXIE PICNIC. Universal-International—Walter Lantz Cartunes Reissues. 7m. When first reviewed in THE SERVISECTION of April, 1948, it was said: "The pixies of the forest gather together, and prepare for their own rendition of Rossini's "La Gazza Ladra" Overture. Playing on instruments provided by Mother Nature, the characters concerned offer the selection, with the usual humorous touches. GOOD." (1355).

SLAP HAPPY LION. MGM—Gold Medal Reprint Cartoons. 7m. When first reviewed in THE SERVISECTION of November, 1947, it was said: "A man-eating lion is utterly insane. A little mouse explains that the lion is suffering from a mouse complex, and recalls the day that the lion was the king of beasts. This was before the mouse took a hand in things, and showed up the animal before his friends. The mouse quickly drove the lion out of his mind with his various strategic tricks. GOOD." (W-668).

TWEETY'S CIRCUS. Warners—Merrie Melodies. 7m. Sylvester, the cat, chases Tweety, the bird, in a circus set-up. The bird succeeds in getting the cat tangled up with a lion and other animals. Sylvester continues to pursue the bird, with the result being that the cat again and again winds up in the lion's clutches. Finally, Sylvester finds himself fighting off lions in the lions' den. FAIR. (2718).

The Shorts Parade

TWEETIE PIE. Warners—Blue Ribbon Hit Parades Reissues. 7m. When first reviewed in THE SERVISECTION of May, 1947, it was said: "Tweetie Pie, a little birdie, finds himself out in a blizzard, stalked by a horrible tom cat. The cat ducks just as the birdie suspects his presence and Tweetie Pie turns and says in a very funny voice, 'I thought I saw a pussy cat.' From there on, it is an uneven battle between Tweetie Pie and Tom and the kindly lady of the house, who wishes to protect Tweetie, and beats Tom with a broom. This is very funny. EXCELLENT." (2311).

WACKY-BYE BABY. Universal-International—Walter Lantz Cartunes Reissues. 7m. When first reviewed in THE SERVISECTION of April, 1948, it was said: 'Woody Woodpecker is in search of a home, and is very happy when his eyes feast upon a newspaper notice, stating that wealthy Wally Walrus is looking for a son. Woody quickly takes care of the situation, and shows up, ready to wait upon a doting father. Things don't break the way they should, however, and Woody and Wally don't seem to get along together. The finale sees Wally chasing Woody with a shotgun. GOOD." (1356).

Comedy

SO YOU WANT TO BE ON A JURY. Warners—Joe McDoakes Comedies. 10m. Homer and Joe get jury work to earn a few extra dollars. Both are members on a jury trying an accident case involving their boss and a gangster. Their attempts to reach an honest verdict is made difficult by alternate threats by the boss and the gangster. Finally they rule in favor of the gangster, who turns out to be their new boss. FAIR. (2405).

Musical

RAY EBERLE AND HIS ORCHESTRA. Columbia—Thrills Of Music Reissues. 10m. When first reviewed in THE SERVISECTION in November, 1948, it was said: "Featuring the band of Ray Eberle, with Eberle and Connie Haines doing the vocals, and with Fred Robbins jive-talking at the turntable, this presents "Prisoner Of Love," "Tree In The Meadow," and "How Come You Do Me Like You Do. GOOD." (7956).

Novelty

ANIMALS IN ACTION. MGM—Pete Smith Specialties. 9m. The camera catches glimpses of different kinds of animals engaged in various activities. Shown are scenes of a reindeer roundup, a greyhound race, bulls at bullfight, a cat tangling with a monkey, a chimp tangling with a dog, and a monkey attempting to climb a pole to reach a bunch of bananas. FAIR. (S-658).

THE FALL GUY. MGM—Pete Smith Specialties. 9m. Pete Smith reviews some of the falls Dave O'Brien has taken in the series of shorts he has produced over the years. In addition to falls, O'Brien is shown being plagued by stubborn ice cubes and ketchup bottles, a boomerang, and an uncooperative hammock, plus other frustrating articles. GOOD. (S-660).

HISTORICAL ODDITIES. MGM—Pete Smith Specialties. 9m. Several historical allegations, such as the cow that knocked over the lamp to start the Chicago fire, and that Steve Brody jumped off the Bridge are proven false. In addition, factual data is revealed concerning the invention of the stethescope, handshake, shatterproof glass, and the tipping of hats by men. GOOD. (S-659).

Color Sports

RIVIERA REVELRIES. Warners—Sports Parade. 10m. A tour of the south of France reveals Eden Rock, playground of the celebrated and the select; Monte Carlo and its famous Casino, various water sports on the Riviera, bathing beauties on the beaches, the scenery along the coast, and carnival night at Nice. This is in WarnerColor. GOOD. (2507).

Color Travel

VENEZUELA. Republic—This World Of Ours. 9m. A Trucolor tour through Venezuela reveals how this South American nation is replacing picturesque native scenery with modern structures. Larger Venezuelan cities are shown with their new skyscrapers, super highways, and massive and low-cost housing projects. Venezuela's International Airport is shown, as is the luxurious government subsidized hotel. Viewed are the country's major industries which include oil and natural gas refining and iron ore mining. The country's million-dollar university is shown with its two giant stadiums. Venezuelans are seen engaged in the sports of bull-tossing and baseball. GOOD. (5388).

How to keep you lovely as you are—always—in every print!
That's a problem which involves the entire industry—begins with sets and make-up . . . follows with film-selection and camera work . . . ends only in the laboratory with precision processing and printing of both original answer prints and final releases.
To aid the industry in its pursuit of perfection, Kodak maintains the Eastman Technical Service for Motion Picture Film at strategic centers. Inquiries invited.

MEMBER AUDIT BUREAU OF CIRCULATIONS

JUNE 22, 1955
VOLUME 54 NUMBER 8

MRS. LOORAM'S LADIES AND OTHER REVIEWING GROUPS

In our recent editorial, offering several suggestions for a more effective and a more realistic Legion of Decency administration, we seem to have surprised a dozen or more editors of Catholic newspapers and magazines by our reference to the fluctuating number and itinerant changing nature of the ladies of the Legion's reviewing committee. With all good will toward the objectives of the Legion, and with the honest belief that Catholic newspapermen in particular would be familiar with the machinery and methods that have been applied to Legion "classifications" during the past 20 years, we referred to "Mrs. Looram's ladies" as a group of unskilled and untrained amateur "critics" who could not be relied upon to separate technical details from personal entertainment preferences, and who would vary in number "from 3 to 73" dependent completely on the importance of the picture and the advance publicity and advertising it had received.

We might have elaborated on this theme by pointing out the years of closely checked training to which the average critic or reviewer is subjected by any good trade paper; and that here at Motion Picture Exhibitor we have been known to have men attend screenings and write reviews for as many as three years before they were considered qualified and actually had their reviews published. And we might have added that no regular censor board or professional reviewing committee that we ever heard of has been composed of more than three or five experts. But we were sure that fellow journeymen, in the even more technical field of religion, would know that.

Apparently they did not! Apparently, from requests for verification and from the comments we have received, many of these skilled newspapermen, of both clergy and laity, were genuinely surprised that "classifications" affecting the moral obligations and the consciences of more than 30,000,000 American Catholics, are judged and arrived at, not by Bishops, or by priests, or even by experienced laymen, but only, as one remarked, "by a bunch of women."

Of course, here in the motion picture business there has always been a lack of thinking in relation to group screenings, passes, and sneak previews to outsiders—and an even greater lack of judgment.

You don't catch General Motors or any other automobile company giving away Cadillacs. And you don't catch the butcher giving away steaks, the hotel giving away rooms, or Mr. Tiffany giving away diamonds. But, with only one product to sell, two hours of entertainment and relaxation, the motion picture industry thinks nothing of giving it away lavishly to every group of critics, however badly qualified, to charitable groups, to clubs, to local politicians, and to anyone and everyone who even resembles the organized public. Smart ladies, with no kids to meet after school, and with mink jackets and time on their hands, have been known to organize into "the motion picture reviewing committee" for this or that ladies club group, and to annually enjoy special weekly screenings in film distribution centers, at great monetary expense to the industry. The same and other smart ladies, with equally ephemeral "club" connections, command season passes to theatres and special invitations to every sneak preview or special opening. And we even know of a particularly important current feature that played free one Sunday night in a golf club, to a jammed audience of members and guests who had no relationship to this industry, because the golf club was "nice enough" to let a handful of local radio and TV people share their facilities "on the cuff."

Yes, we can get pretty silly in this business!

And that is why it obviously shocks the Catholic newspapermen, even more than it shocks our own industry executives, that for more than 20 years the motion picture industry has been submitting its products to private screenings, completely at its own expense, with full knowledge that the ladies present were not qualified critics, but were there for the one purpose of criticising; that, to the best of our knowledge, no explanation has ever been asked as to why their number doesn't remain the same through big and little pictures; and that, to the best of our knowledge, the people present have never been required to identify their official connection to justify their presence, or to record their attendance in any way.

We submit, gentlemen, that if "Mrs. Looram's ladies," or any other "reviewing committees" of ladies, were going to spend eight critical hours in a Statler Hotel, instead of two critical hours in a theatre or screening room, the hotel would both know who they were and make them pay for the privilege.

ACTION IN THE CATSKILLS: Buses and cars loaded with over a hundred newspapermen, magazine writers, radio and television personalities recently converged on the small town of Loch Sheldrake, N. Y., in the Catskill Mountains, and to pinpoint it even further, at Brown's Hotel for a three-day press preview celebration of Paramount's Martin and Lewis comedy, "You're Never Too Young." Most were a little startled to find Jerry Lewis outfitted as a bellhop waiting at the lobby entrance to carry bags, assist old ladies of whom there were none, and generally cut-up in a nice way.

KONECOFF

That night, after a wonderful dinner, there was a show in the playhouse which included Alan King, a very funny comedian who had his audience in stitches, the Billy Williams Quartet, and an act with live mannequins the name of which escapes us. More festivities at the neighboring Brown Derby, which is also devoted to entertaining guests of the establishment, followed.

The next day our schedule called for all kinds of games and outdoor competitions but rain washed these plans out, and instead many indulged in a variety of indoor sports. At this point we must admit we won an empty address book at bingo. Anybody got any good addresses? Towards evening, hosts Charles and Lillian Brown had a wingding of a cocktail reception. At this point, perhaps, we should explain that it was at Brown's that Jerry Lewis got his start as a professional entertainer years ago after first starting as a bus boy, and he has never forgotten the Browns, guesting with them as often as possible.

A fine dinner was followed by the dedication of the Martin and Lewis Playhouse where the premiere of the film was presented, and despite the murderous hardwood seats, it came off as one of the best pictures the team has made to date with many funny scenes and situations. Jerry Lewis was the actual star of the film and carried it marvelously.

What followed will probably be remembered for quite some time by the many press people who gathered in the Brown Derby for a special party which was emceed by Lewis. When the actual entertaining was over and done with, Lewis thanked all for their presence.

He was deeply touched at the reaction of press representatives to the reported split between Dean Martin and himself, for it was as if by pre-arrangement that not one reporter pried into his feelings or reactions, and he was grateful. He couldn't

(As of this Monday)

Boxoffice Slump Continues

NEW YORK—With the exception of the Radio City Music Hall, Loew's State, and the Victoria, business in the Broadway first-runs continued to slip over the weekend. According to usually reliable sources reaching MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR, the breakdown was as follows:

"The Sea Chase" (Warners). Paramount expected the second week to hit $32,000.

"Soldier Of Fortune" (20th-Fox). Roxy claimed $12,500 for Friday through Sunday, with the last six days of the fourth and last week dropping to $20,000.

"Love Me Or Leave Me" (MGM). Radio City Music Hall, with stage show, reported $991,000 for Thursday through Sunday, with the fourth week a satisfactory $145,000.

"5 Against The House" (Columbia). Criterion dropped to $7,100 for the last three days of the second and last week.

"Davy Crockett, King Of The Wild Frontier" (Disney-Buena Vista). Globe claimed this would reach $15,000 on the fourth week.

"The Purple Mask" (U-I). Mayfair hoped for $11,000 on the opening week.

"This Island Earth" (U-I). Victoria anticipated $25,000 for the second week.

"The Magnificent Matador" (20th-Fox). Astor slipped to $7,500 on the fourth week.

"The Prodigal" (MGM). Capitol was down to $11,000 on the sixth week.

"The Seven Year Itch" (20th-Fox). Loew's State saw only a slight letdown, with $62,000 in sight for the third session.

RKO Draws Interest

NEW YORK—The operations of RKO Pictures Corporation for the three months ended March 31, 1955, resulted in a net profit of $47,737. Since March 31, 1954, when the corporation sold, with the approval of stockholders, all its assets, its holdings have consisted solely of cash, substantially all of which is on time deposits with banks. The net profit represents the interest income on such time deposits less corporate expenses.

Prospects Brighten For Small Exhibitors

Paramount's Weltner Promises To Explore Possible Solutions To Theatremen's Complaints; Other Meetings Postponed

NEW YORK—In its efforts to secure relief from the high film rentals imposed by distributors, exhibition made some progress last week when representatives of the joint National Allied-Theatre Owners of America committee received a promise from George Weltner, Paramount worldwide sales head, that a friendly exploration of "possible solutions" to theatremen's complaints would be initiated by him in an "earnest and sincere manner" when he returns from a business trip to Europe scheduled for next month.

The statement, released following a four-hour conference at the Paramount home office, at which Robert J. Rubin, Paramount Film Distributing Corporation vice-president, was also present, was mutually agreed upon by the exhibitors and Weltner, and pledged particular attention to the plight of the theatre grossing less than $1000 a week. Like the meeting recently with 20th-Fox executives, last week's talks hold out hope for more liberal sales terms to smaller situations.

The exhibition group, headed by Rube Shor, president, National Allied, and E. D. Martin, president, TOA, included Ben Marcus, Wilbur Snaper, and Irving Dollinger, Allied, and Walter Reade, Jr., George Kerasotes, and Richard Kennedy, TOA.

Additional meetings were scheduled later in the week with Abe Montague, vice-president and sales manager, Columbia; Herbert Greenblatt, RKO domestic sales head; and Charles Reagan, general sales manager, MGM. Meetings with Milton Rackmil, U-I president, and Charles Feldman, U-I sales manager, and with Warners' executives Major Albert Warner and Ben Kalmenson were postponed for a fortnight because of the unavailability of the distribution officers.

Columbia In Agreement On Certain Key Issues

Later in the week, the joint committee met with Abe Montague, Columbia sales chief; Herbert Greenblatt, RKO domestic sales head; and with MGM general sales manager Charles M. Reagan. A statement issued by the Columbia executive following the conversations announced that "complete agreement" on certain key controversial issues was reached, including national sales policy, continuity of product sales to small situations on an equitable flat rental basis, and the development of new talent. It was also disclosed that Montague could not be persuaded to change his stand against the arbitration of film rentals, and that he urged the National Allied representatives to reconsider their position on that issue. On the subject of prints, Montague explained the economic problems involved, invited the expression of the committee's advice, and ended by praising the exhibitors for their forthright approach and sincerity.

Greenblatt termed the talks at RKO "very, very friendly," saying that nothing was demanded by the theatre spokesmen, and that nothing was promised them. The general atmosphere of the meeting was reported to be that the exhibitors felt they had been fairly treated by RKO. Also present were Edward Walton, RKO executive vice-president, and world wide sales manager Walter Branson. After the meeting with Reagan at Loew's offices, no statement was made by either side. According to Martin, comments will be forthcoming at a later date.

Maryland And D.C. Exhibs Drop Plans To Fight Tax

WASHINGTON—Plans have been dropped by Maryland and District of Columbia exhibitors to fight in court the two per cent state sales tax on film rentals recently included in a new law rushed through in the last hours of the Maryland legislature's 1955 session. Instead, efforts will be concentrated on trying to persuade the legislature to exempt film rentals next year and, in the meantime, the tax will be paid. According to A. Julian Brylawsky, president, Theatre Owners of Metropolitan Washington, attorneys for his group and the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Maryland determined, in talks with state officials, that the law without question covered film rentals, in spite of its "broad" language and the earlier impression that the inclusion was accidental. Counsel also discovered that court action for an injunction could not possibly come up before next spring.

Phillips Upped By Paramount

NEW YORK—Louis Phillips, who recently became Paramount general counsel succeeding the late Austin C. Keough, was elected a vice-president of that company at a directors meeting last fortnight. All incumbent officers were returned to office, Barney Balaban, president; Stanton Griffis, chairman, executive committee; Y. Frank Freeman and Paul Raibourn, vice-presidents; James H. Richardson, treasurer; Louis A. Nevins, secretary; and Russel Holman, Jacob H. Karp, and Arthur Israel, Jr., assistant secretaries. Adolph Zukor remains as chairman of the board.

MPAA Trio Defends Production, Ad Codes

HOLLYWOOD—A Senate Judiciary subcommittee investigating juvenile delinquency, headed by Senator Kefauver (D., Tenn.), last week held hearings on the adequacy of the film industry's advertising and production codes to probe the effect of motion pictures on juvenile behavior. Called to testify were Motion Picture Association of America executives Roger Albright, educational services director; Geoffrey Shurlock, production code administrator; and Gordon S. White, advertising code director.

In defending the protection and effectiveness of the MPA educational department, Albright pointed out to the committee the many and varied services offered the general public at the personal expense of MPA members, describing the self-enforced codes as conforming to acceptable moral and social standards in a way no other form of public communication can claim to match. He noted that films are classified by numerous outside groups who are provided with prints in advance of release dates after they have been approved by the industry, and that a special branch is maintained to serve the many requirements of educational groups of every kind, indicative of the affirmative, positive, and cultural value of the vast majority of industry product.

Albright took the position that changing times are met by a change of criteria, most of which the film makers have strongly resisted, in spite of complaints from critics to the effect that the resulting entertainment is immature and insincere because undesirable material treated by other mass media is ignored.

Shurlock reiterated the significance of the self-imposed system of self-regulation, which he asserted has made positive and constructive contributions to society by assuring high moral standards and decency in film entertainment. He asserted that under the present system the American industry has achieved high artistic and dramatic stature applauded the world over, and has become the most popular form of family entertainment there is. Shurlock emphasized that the code is practically applied through his offices, beginning with supervision during production to enforcement before the public sees the film. From the advertising side of the question, White pointed out that his department enforces the accepted trend of other national advertising, maintaining that the industry's promotional methods have been instrumental in raising the motion picture to its eminence today.

Publicists Favor IATSE

HOLLYWOOD—The Screen Publicists Guild, at a meeting held last week, voted by a landslide majority of 170 to 8 to affiliate with IATSE, it was announced by Nat James, president. The action climaxed three months' study and investigation of possible affiliations by a 12-man committee headed by Frank Riser.

San Francisco Session Winds Up MGM Workshops, Seen By 7,000

San Francisco—Four theatre representatives of important major and independent circuits were panelists at the 24th and final MGM Ticket Selling Workshop held earlier this week at the Hotel St. Francis.

Mike Simons, director of customer relations for the company, said there were 104 exhibitors in attendance from the Denver and New Mexico territory at the Santa Fe meeting, which was followed by the next to last session at the Olympic Hotel, Seattle.

On the San Francisco panel to wind up the series which started last October, were Andrew J. Sullivan, city manager, Dixie Drive-In Theatres, Savannah, Ga.; Lou Brown, advertising, publicity, and exploitation director, Loew Poli New England Theatres, New Haven; Seymour Morris, head of advertising, publicity, and exploitation, Schine Circuit, Gloversville, N. Y.; and Conrad Brady, publicity director, Interstate Circuit, Houston, Tex.

Assisting Simons, who has conducted all the sessions, was Emery Austin, exploitation head, MGM, who has attended all but four of the Workshops and explained in detail the company's 33 promotion aids.

More than 7,000 exhibitors from key cities and small towns all over the country attended the sessions which are credited for much of the current resurge of showmanship on the part of exhibition.

Court Mulls Censor Repeal

Topeka, Kans.—The Kansas Supreme Court heard oral arguments last fortnight on the controversial bill repealing film censorship. Counsel for the attorney general contended that the bill, passed by the legislature after scrutiny by the Senate and the House judiciary committees, was unconstitutional because it contains more than one subject. Counsel for the secretary of state, who is required to enter the bill in the statute book before it becomes law, argued that censorship repeal was the only item actually contained in the bill, and that a section relating to motor vehicle regulation is surplusage, since action has already been taken on that subject. According to a court spokesman, a decision in the case will be handed down early in July.

Dubbing Firm Formed

New York—The formation of Film-Sync, Inc., an organization that will specialize in the dubbing of foreign films, was announced last week by Jack Curtis, president of the new company. The first picture to be dubbed by the firm, Curtis revealed, will be the prize-winning French import, "Wages Of Fear," which DCA is releasing.

Vice-president of Film-Sync is Terry Van Tell a veteran of the dubbing industry sometimes known as "the voice of Gina Lollobrigida," one of the many foreign film stars she has spoken for in more than 30 pictures. Also associated with the organization is Al Weintraub, owner, Bell Sound Studios, where all dubbing will be done.

Schwalberg Firm To Handle Select Boxoffice Properties

NEW YORK—Alfred W. Schwalberg has announced the formation of his new company, Artists-Producers Associates, Inc., which will handle highly select boxoffice properties. Offices are now being set up in the Squibb Building, 745 Fifth Avenue.

Schwalberg, a top figure in the industry for many years, resigned as president, Paramount Film Distributing Corporation, last April to set up his own company.

The first two releases to be handled by Artists-Producers Associates are "Summertime," Lopert Productions, and "The Night Of The Hunter," a Gregory-Laughton production, both UA releases.

AB-PT Subsidiary Set To Enter Record Field

New York—American Broadcasting-Paramount Theatres, Inc., last week announced its entry via a newly organized subsidiary into the field of phonograph records. It will record, manufacture, and distribute recordings of all three speeds. The corporate name of the new company is yet undetermined and the product remain unlabeled.

Sam Clark, until recently general manager and vice-president, Cadence Records, which he helped establish with Archie Bleyer in 1952, has been appointed president of the new company by the board of the parent organization, according to a statement issued by Leonard H. Goldenson, AB-PT president.

The entry into the record industry has for months been anticipated by the trade and in financial circles. It marks another step of AB-PT into the fields of entertainment and electronics. AB-PT also owns 35 per cent of the giant new amusement park, Disneyland, at Anaheim, Cal., which is scheduled to open to the public on July 17. Microwave, Inc., developer and manufacturer of electronic equipment and tubes, is also partially owned by AB-PT.

Clark said, "The new record company will seek, at once, to enlist under its label the very finest of artists and other talents available. We want a roster of the best possible people in the entertainment business. We will, of course, also seek to develop our own stars in all categories—popular, classical, country, western, and jazz. It is anticipated that we will not enter the market in strength until about the first of the year but we expect to be in business in several months in the children's and package-goods fields."

Kohn Exits Selected

New York—The resignation of Howard E. Kohn II, national director of advertising and publicity, Selected Pictures Corporation, was announced last week by George J. Schaefer. Kohn leaves to engage in independent film production with Robert St. Aubrey.

20th-Fox Execs Attend National Sales Meeting

New York—20th-Fox president Spyros P. Skouras was scheduled to arrive in New York last week in time to address the opening session of the company's two-day national sales convention at the home office, under the chairmanship of William C. Gehring, executive assistant general sales manager, who called the conference.

The overall agenda was charted in Hollywood last fortnight by Skouras, Gehring, production head Darryl Zanuck, and distribution director Al Lichtman. Home office sales, advertising, publicity, and exploitation executives, together with field distribution leaders, division managers and their assistants, and branch managers from 39 domestic and Canadian exchanges were expected to discuss marketing flexibility and promotional policy to meet the requirements of exhibitors on the local level, large and small. The talks were slated to cover current industry problems concerning product, and greater stress on showmanship was to be applied to the elaborate promotion plans for a six month lineup of 13 top-budgeted releases between June and December. Assisting Gehring to conduct the meeting were to be Arthur Silverstone, assistant general sales manager; Alex Harrison, western sales manager; and Glen Norris, eastern sales manager. The presiding executives also were to seek the development of improved methods for the expediting of prints, better CinemaScope programming, including the utilization of trailers in that process, and the servicing of drive-ins and small town accounts.

Home office executives to be present at the conclave included vice-president Charles Einfeld; Lem Jones, short subjects sales manager; Clarence A. Hill, manager of branch operations; Jack Bloom, assistant to eastern sales manager and major circuits contract; Frank X. Carroll, sales analyst; David Ornstein executive assistant to western sales manager; Roger Ferri, editor, Dynamo; Sam Fishman, contract department manager; Harry Mersay, print department manager; Larry Ayers, assistant to Gehring; Eugene McEvoy, assistant to eastern sales manager; and Ted Shaw, assistant to western sales manager.

To assist Einfeld in presenting promotional plans for new product were Rodney Bush, exploitation manager; Edward Sullivan, publicity manager; Abe Goodman, advertising manager; and Martin Michel, TV and radio director.

From 20th-Fox's International Corporation, Murray Silverstone, president; Emanuel Silverstone, vice-president; and Leslie F. Whelan, advertising and publicity director, were expected to attend.

AA Names Mirisch

Hollywood—Allied Artists president Steve Broidy announced last fortnight that Marvin Mirisch, who joined AA a year ago, has been elected assistant secretary. Broidy also revealed that all 10 present board members have been selected by management for reelection by stockholders at the annual meeting in November.

Exhibs Find "Mister Roberts" See-Worthy

Nationwide screenings for the trade in theatres in each exchange center draw huge crowds and prove the transition from stage to screen is a real film triumph.

IN each exchange center across the country, Warners extended invitations recently for special and unusual screenings for the trade of their forthcoming release, "Mister Roberts," taking over the facilities of a local theatre in each city to accommodate a total national turnout, according to estimates, of more than 18,000 interested and excited industryites.

The new production, starring Henry Fonda, James Cagney, and William Powell, together with talented newcomer Jack Lemmon, is based on the fabulously successful Broadway stage comedy of the same name, and was directed by John Ford and Mervyn LeRoy in WarnerColor and CinemaScope, from a script by the play's author, Joshua Logan, in association with Frank Nugent.

A decision to hold the nationwide theatre showings, which were all offered the same day, was reached as the result of sneak previews on the east and west coasts. The tremendous reception accorded the film by the first viewers was many times duplicated and increased by the spontaneous laughter and applause sparking the trade screenings. Following the various presentations, the reactions of exhibitors present at several of the showings were tape-recorded in special interviews, and the new Pocket Book edition of "Mister Roberts," in its original, pre-Broadway novel form, was distributed to all guests. An analysis of opinions expressed points to an almost unanimous conviction of the high boxoffice potential of the film about life on a Navy supply ship in the South Pacific during World War II.

The noteworthy occasion also afforded Warners an opportunity to show an interesting trailer on their new "Land Of The Pharaohs," another forthcoming release in CinemaScope which was filmed in Egypt and Italy.

"Mister Roberts" has received already extremely gratifying publicity in response to the special showings, which were covered by press, radio, and television personalities in each city. But having sold the trade, it remains for the hard-working Warners publicity staff, under the direction of Mort Blumenstock, to bring the film to the attention of the public at large through newspaper, magazine, radio, and television breaks, and similar media. One fortunate spot was the highly popular Ed Sullivan show, "Toast Of The Town," which devoted its entire program time to promotion of "Mr. Roberts," introducing personalities connected with the picture, and showing film clips from the production to millions of television viewers across the country.

Heralded as one of the top screen comedies of all time by thousands of happy previewers, it appears that Warners will add one more highly remunerative success to its long history of film making with the release of "Mister Roberts." Certainly, the in-the-theatre industry screenings were exceptionally welcome, eagerly accepted, and warmly received by all who attended them.

provide any answers at the moment to the future of the team, but he was doing the best he could to carry on.

Our impression of Jerry was that this was a tremendous talent who needs no one to carry him. He took over the guidance of all the guests over the weekend, mingled because he wanted to, laughed and played because he was having a good time, and also showed that he was a wonderful human being. He hurt no one in his fun and he showed that he had a wonderful head for business in some of the conversations we had with him. He devoted himself to his family and guests and gained everyone present for a friend, something few stars can boast. We wish him well however the future goes.

The next day, more rain and clouds, but as we pulled away after lunch the sun started to come out. Isn't this always the way?

Bits and Pieces: Patti, Jerry's wife, who used to be a vocalist, was prevailed upon to do a number and she did it very well. . . . The whole party was recorded on tape and it should make a wonderful memento of the occasion. . . . Jerry Pickman, vice-president in charge of advertising and publicity at Paramount, and Herb Steinberg, exploitation manager, as well as Burt Champion, publicity manager, came in for credit and applause for the fine job they and their staffs did in the handling of the affair. . . . Jerry recorded a number of tape sessions for later presentation on various local and network shows. . . . The special VistaVision screen and projectors were installed by Paramount technicians for the event. . . . Paramount Newsreel covered everything that happened. Well, almost everything. . . . Detectives are investigating what happened to some of the prizes and other stuff that was to have been handed out to the guests. We're ready to be searched anytime. . . . Still photogs Eddie Sullivan and Jimmy Powers had a hectic time recording everything and then trying to develop and print locally so some of the stuff could be rushed to the papers. . . . One of the stunts included a session showing Jerry clowning with a penguin, but as he was hungry or looking for a Kool, Jerry stayed out of reach. . . . West coast representatives, escorted by the studio's Bob Goodfried, were really surprised at the entertainment provided by Lewis as a solo act, which demonstrated that team play is not always the best play. . . . It was lots of fun, and we say to Paramount and Jerry Lewis, let's do it again sometime; while to Charles and Lillian Brown we extend our executive thanks.

ANYONE FOR GOLF OR GIN RUMMY: The weather looked threatening but this didn't deter over 150 industryites from attending the fourth annual Film Industry Golf Tournament, sponsored by Cinema Lodge, at Vernon Hill Country Club at Tuckahoe, N. Y. For those who didn't play there was gin rummy, and for those who played early enough there was still gin rummy.

Entertaining sidelights were provided by professional golfer Paul Hahn, who demonstrated how easy the game was in all its phases; also by the Tuckers, a team of comedy mentalists; and accordionist Murray Lehrer. Comedy relief was also provided by Lodge president Max E. Youngstein, who acted as toastmaster and presided at the awarding of the prizes with Martin Levine, tournament chairman. Committee members who assisted on the handling included Herb Berg, Dave Bader, Cy Seymour, Don Mersereau, Charles Alicoate, Jack Hoffberg, Milton Salzburg, Burt Robbins, Alan Robbins, Lou Vorzimmer, Norman Robbins, Bob Shapiro, and Milt Livingston.

It was a good affair despite our not winning a door prize or any prize. We are patient enough to wait until next year to come home a winner.

THE METROPOLITAN SCENE: The Roxy's Bill Moclair has invited youngsters 12 years old or younger to bring their fathers on Father's Day as their guest at any time during the day, with the first 25 receiving chocolate Father's Day cards. Well, at least once a year father doesn't pay—directly. . . . Al Gorson, Variety Club public relations director, became a father last week when a six pound, 11 ounce baby girl was born to his wife at Doctor's Hospital. They named her Meredith Ann. . . . Okeh pressbook is out on "The Man From Laramie."

Film Properties Utilized For Summer TV Program

NEW YORK—Stories to be made into motion pictures by the majors in the future will be tested with new talent over television during the summer by the Lux Video Theatre, it was revealed last fortnight by a spokesman for Lever Brothers, sponsors of the program. The series will be inaugurated over the National Broadcasting Company network beginning June 30, and continuing through Sept. 15.

Believed to be the first of their kind, the novel presentations are a response to suggestions made by Leonard Goldenson, president, American Broadcasting-Paramount Theatres, who has long advocated that television be utilized to develop film personalities and scripts.

Cooperating in the venture are Columbia, Paramount, Republic, United Artists, and Universal, which are the same film companies which allowed their finished productions to be adapted by the TV show during the past season.

Virgina Exhibitor Unit Supports Peace Efforts

Old Point Comfort, Va.—The board of directors of the Virginia Motion Picture Theatre Assosciation last week at its convention at the Chamberlain Hotel voted unanimously to "support any practical moves to insure peace within the industry." A wire was sent to Rube Shor, president, National Allied, and E. D. Martin, president, Theatre Owners of America, meeting with the presidents of the distributing companies in New York City to discuss matters which entail the continuance in operation of many theatres, and the convention "hoped they would be successful in negotiations."

At the opening of the convention, tin cups with pencils and dark glasses were given to all exhibitors registering. Carlton Duffus, executive secretary, VMPTA, said, "If the industry continues as it is now moving they will need them." He added that this stunt was inspired by Motion Picture Exhibitor's editorial of March 9, 1955, "A Man With His Hat In His Hand."

Seymour Hoffman, District Theatres, Washington, was elected president.

Earl Westbrook was master of ceremonies at the dinner, at which Jack Beresin, Berlo Vending Company, was principal speaker.

Judge In Schine Suit Dies

Buffalo—The death last week of Federal Judge John Knight, 84, in Buffalo General Hospital, following a stroke which hospitalized him two months ago, leaves incompleted the government anti-trust action against the Schine interests and the lengthy contempt of court proceedings stemming from it. Arguments concerning both cases were recessed when Judge Knight was incapacitated.

RKO Theatres Buys Stock

New York—Sol Schwartz, president, RKO Theatres, last week announced that the corporation has purchased 111,600 shares of its stock from Ambrook Industries, Inc., and Gauley Mountain Coal Company at a price of 9⅛ pursuant to options dated May 31, 1955. As a result, the corporation now has outstanding 3,219,336 shares, including approximately 70,000 shares held in the treasury under the Corporation's Employe Stock Option Plan.

This Was The Week When.....

"South Pacific" was revealed to be the second Rogers and Hammerstein production in Todd-AO, to go before the cameras in about a year. . . . United Artists booked "Not As A Stranger" for a gala preview in New York's Capitol on June 28. . . . U-I disclosed pre-release engagements in key cities during the summer for "The Shrike," following the world premiere early next month in New York's Victoria. . . . RKO president James Grainger arrived in New York with clips from forthcoming releases to screen for sales executives.

Walt Disney's "Lady And The Tramp" world-premiered at Chicago's State-Lake. . . . The Capitol recording of "Wichita," theme song of the Allied Artists' picture, was set for launching in Kansas City the same day of the film's world premiere. . . . Eleanor Roosevelt and Margaret Truman joined the premiere committee for the bow of United Artists' "Summertime" in New York's Astor, for the benefit of the Salute to France program. . . . "The Private War Of Major Benson" was set by U-I for a world premiere in three Kansas City houses on July 21.

JARO Will Handle Republic Pictures

TORONTO—A special sales force will be set up by the J. Arthur Rank Film Distributors (Canada), Ltd., to handle the 35mm. and 16mm. product of Republic in Canada, effective July 31. The product was formerly handled in Canada by Empire-Universal Films, Ltd.

The agreement for the franchise was reached between Frank H. Fisher, JARO vice-president and general manager, and Richard W. Altschuler, vice-president, Republic.

Empire-Universal Films, through its president, A. W. Perry, announced the distribution of seven Disney subjects in Canada. Empire-Universal has had the Republic franchise in Canada since the production company's inception in 1940.

In announcing the agreement with Republic, Fisher said, "the joining of forces would give top service to all accounts." He was happy with the arrangement, he said, as an extension of their friendship.

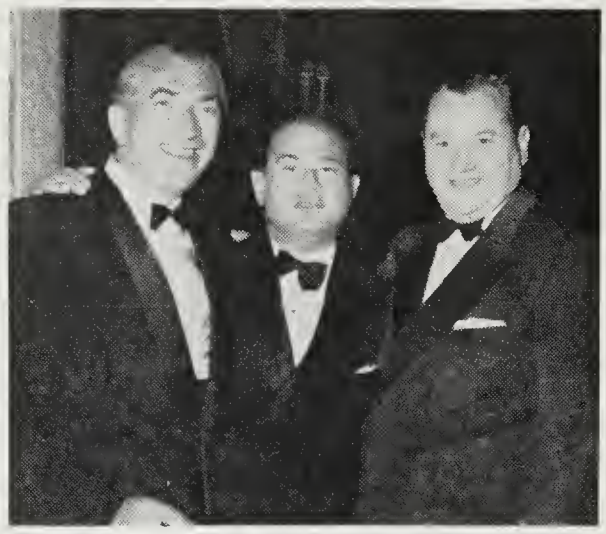
George Ganetakos, president, United Amusement Corporation, Ltd., and recipient of the Picture Pioneer Award in 1952, died following an accident near his home in Montreal. His car collided with a truck and he died a few hours later from injuries in a hospital.

Ganetakos opened the Moulin Rouge, Montreal, in 1909, which was the beginning of his interests in the motion picture industry, represented by United Amusements and Confederation Amusement Company, encompassing 38 theatres in Quebec.

During World War II, Ganetakos was particularly active in war relief work, and in 1950, the King of Greece awarded the Grand Golden Cross of Commander of the Order of Phoenix to Ganetakos for his work as Canadian chairman of the Greek Relief Fund. He was active in the Motion Picture War Services Committee and other forms of public service.

Canadian Comment

Benefit shows for Variety Village resulted in the recent presentation of checks amounting to almost $2,000 to the Variety Club by three delegations of theatre managers. Representing the Niagara Peninsula Theatre Managers Association were Bill Cupples, Park, Welland; Verd Mariott, Park, St. Catharines; Wilf LaRose, Palace, St. Catharines; and Mike Zahorchak, St. Catharines Drive-In. They presented a check for $900, with Marriott as spokesman. Ralph Cole, Century, Trenton, and Tom Mascaro, Capitol, Belleville, gave $637 for the Bay of Quinte Theatre Managers Association, with the latter speaking. From the Essex Theatre Managers Association came $400 through Ernie Taylor and Bob Knevels, Vanity and Capitol, Windsor, with Knevels making the handover comment.



Robert S. Benjamin, center, chairman of the board, United Artists, and William J. Heineman, right, vice-president in charge of distribution, are seen with producer Ilya Lopert at the recent gala world premiere of UA's "Summertime" in Venice, Italy, where the picture was filmed.

CINE CHATTER: Two of the nine full-page ads in Weekend Magazine, inserted in about a million Canadian newspapers every Saturday, were for motion pictures. RKO took a color ad for Howard Hughes' "Son Of Sinbad," while MGM had one for "The Prodigal." . . . H. T. Blumson was appointed assistant treasurer, Odeon Theatres (Canada), Ltd., succeeding E. B. McConkey, C.A., who resigned to take another position. V. Mandvere and B. Longbottom were appointed chief accountant and accountant, respectively. . . . Pioneer of the Year dinner will be held in Toronto, Nov. 2, announced Tom S. Daley, secretary-treasurer, Canadian Picture Pioneers, sponsors of the event. . . . TV in Canada now covers 75 per cent of its potential audience, A. Davidson Dunton, chairman, board of governors, CBC, told a committee of Parliament investigating TV and radio in Canada. . . . Less than 20 per cent of films shown in Canadian schools are made in Canada, Dr. A. W. Trueman, chairman, National Film Board, told the Canadian Club in Montreal recently. . . . William Winterton, Saskatoon theatreman, seeks more education in the homes because of the vandalism in the theatres. He told a home and school convention in his city that vandalism in theatres was out of control. . . . First drive-in installation of CinemaScope in the Toronto area, the 400, was recently completed.

Thailand

In Bangkok, following discussions at Warners' recent Far East sales meeting in Tokyo, Wolfe Cohen, president, Warner International, announced that the company will handle distribution of its product through the reopening of its own office here. During the past four years, company's product has been distributed in this territory by Shaw Brothers. E. V. D'Souza, formerly Warners' branch manager in Pakistan, has been named company manager in Thailand, and will operate under the supervision of Berry Greenberg, field division manager, Warner International.

Screen Directors Guild Backs Production Code

HOLLYWOOD—The Screen Directors Guild of America last week unanimously approved a resolution calling on the film industry to "vigorously resist" pressure from special interest groups to delete portions of motion pictures approved by the Production Code Administration.

The action, suggested by Robert Aldrich, director and producer, defended the PCA, and was the first stand taken by an industry group following recent attacks on the Code by the National Legion of Decency. The resolution was directed to the Association of Motion Picture Producers, with copies to be sent to the Screen Producers Guild, the Screen Writers Branch of the Writers Guild of America, and to the Screen Actors Guild.

Eric Johnston, president, MPAA, recently answered criticism by the Rev. Thomas F. Little, executive secretary of the Legion, by asserting that the industry does not intend to make "any concession to anybody or anything," once a film has been approved by the PCA.

George Sydney was returned by unanimous vote to his fifth consecutive term as president of the guild. Other officers were Willis Goldbeck, first vice-president; George Marshall, second vice-president; Anthony Mann, secretary; and Lesley Selander, treasurer.

Miller Memorial Presented

PHILADELPHIA—At the June commencement of Friends' Central School, it was announced that the members of the Senior Class and the classes in History and Appreciation of Art had purchased an oil painting, "The Wood," by Warren Rohrer, in memory of the late Herbert M. Miller, longtime editor, MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR and other Jay Emanuel publications, who died on May 11.

Miller's son, Bruce Jeffrey, was a member of the class of 1955 at Friends' Central, an honor student, and a commencement speaker. He will enter Harvard University in September.

20th-Fox Seeks Theatres In South African Circuit

LONDON—An official announcement revealed that 20th-Fox is negotiating for the acquisition of an undisclosed number of theatres in South Africa by means of a controlling interest in African Theatres, Ltd., a subsidiary of the John S. Schlesinger organization's African Consolidated Theatres, Ltd., which operates more than 150 houses from Nairobi to Capetown.

20th-Fox, it was disclosed, will offer five Pounds per ordinary share of African Theatres, subject to acquisition of at least 90 per cent of the stock. The ordinary shares, of which there are 490,000, are quoted on the London exchange at about 3.10 Pounds. Schlesinger left his Johannesburg headquarters for talks in New York with 20th-Fox president Spyros P. Skouras, and the two executives were scheduled to return to South Africa together June 21.

McGee Says COMPO May Seek Tax Relief

SANTA FE, N. M.—If political conditions seem favorable, COMPO's tax committee may try to secure further tax relief from Congress in the next session, it was announced last week by Pat McGee, TOA representative on the committee, who spoke before the New Mexico Theatre Owners convention. He said there is no definite plan to date, but "several avenues" are being explored by the committee, which includes also Robert M. Coyne, COMPO counsel, and Colonel H. A. Cole, National Allied.

McGee went on to say that information from surveys conducted in a number of towns across the country by Al Sindlinger Sindlinger Company, was strange but most revealing as to theatre patrons' habits. He also praised the COMPO audience awards poll to be conducted in November, and supported the Exhibitors Film Finance Group, revealing that the trustees of the Cooper Foundation theatres have permitted him to subscribe $10,000 to the project, and that he has undertaken, together with Ed Kidwell and Russell Schulte, the responsibility of raising an additional $50,000 in the Denver exchange area. McGee estimated that 24 additional features would bring in $300,000,000 to theatre boxoffices.

Davis Gets AA Ad Post

NEW YORK—Martin S. Davis has been appointed to the new post of eastern advertising and publicity manager for Allied Artists, it was announced last week by John C. Flinn, national publicity and advertising director.

Davis will resign his current post July 1 as eastern advertising-publicity head for Samuel Goldwyn Productions, Inc., with whom he has been associated for the past nine years, and assumes his new duties on July 5. His appointment is in line with Allied Artists' recently announced expansion program calling for the production of top-budget pictures.

Flinn also revealed that Harry Goldstein, who has been representing him in the New York office, would devote his full time to exploitation and be in charge of eastern field activity.

The Tip-Off On Business

(The Tip-Off On Business is a record of how pictures are grossing in various parts of the country. The rating given the pictures (see key) is a cross section of reports received from the field, and presents a summary of various types of runs. Inasmuch as the rating given cannot constitute the business of each individual engagement, an attempt is made to present a general average. By studying the ratings, which are constantly kept up-to-date, exhibitors may guide themselves in their buying and booking.—Editor)

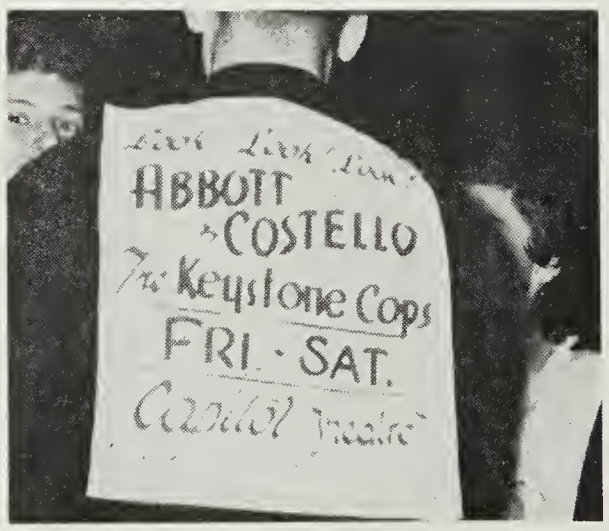
In accepting as members of the SHOWMANSHIP SWEEPSTAKES committee, several offered unsolicited comment on the contest, which gets under way with the July 6 issue.

Sam Bendheim, Jr., Neighborhood Group of Motion Picture Theatres, Richmond, Va., says, "I believe that this is indeed a forward looking step because what we need is more old-time showmanship and promotion. This plan should certainly stimulate such efforts to a great extent and should be appreciated by all exhibitors. One can do no less than to assist you in helping to fulfill the goal you are trying to attain."

Comments Royce Blankenship, Wallace Theatres, Inc., Lubbock, Tex., "This is a very constructive addition to the fine work done by MGM, and you are to be commended for putting it into operation. It should prove of utmost value to exhibitors and much promotional material should be gained from it."

Morton Gerber, District Theatres Corporation, Washington, writes, "Any plan which brings to the attention of exhibitors the necessity of proper exploitation is worthy of the fullest support of every member of the industry. You are to be commended for this new service MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR is offering."



Roy Leveque, Shine's Capitol, Ilion, N. Y., recently had this burlesque cop out as street bally on U-I's "Abbott and Costello Meet The Keystone Cops."

"Sea Chase" Bally

NEW LONDON, CONN.—John Petroski, Stanley Warner Garde, and his assistant, Bill Landers, promoted hobby store model ships for an advance lobby display, in conjunction with "The Sea Chase." A false front was built. Four models, carrying appropriately-bannered aprons, and wearing nautical caps, walked through the downtown area for several days. Five thousand sticks of chewing gum were promoted through a candy distributor, and small envelopes imprinted with theatre playdate and containing one stick each were given away in downtown locations.

NSS Ready For July 4

NEW YORK—National Screen Service has announced that a variety of Fourth of July weekend trailers are available for the occasion, at most reasonable prices.

An appropriate reminder is that the company also has available National Anthem trailers, one in Technicolor and one in black and white, priced accordingly, and which no theatre or drive-in should be without.

H. J. Hodge, Jr., Joy Theatres, Incorporated, New Orleans, states, "I firmly believe SHOWMANSHIP SWEEPSTAKES is just the tonic or stimulant that exhibitors need in this day and time to help create an incentive to make the public show-conscious once again through continuous efforts of special exploitation."

"One of the great evils in exhibition is the lethargy that has befallen showmen," remarks Charles J. Maestri, Robert L. Lippert Theatres, San Francisco. "Most theatre managers seem to have become bookkeepers and statisticians. It is refreshing to see someone come up with a very novel idea, and I am quite sure it will regenerate some old-time showmanship which we in exhibition sorely need."

Walter Reade, Jr., Walter Reade Theatres, Oakhurst, N. J., says, "I love your idea. I would cooperate with you in helping to do anything on a showmanship basis, no matter what. One of our main troubles in our busy business world today, and in the motion picture industry in particular, is that we do not have enough time to give to anything for real showmanship."

A. O. Royal, Royal Theatres, Meridan, Miss., comments, "I think you have a terrific idea in this quick summary of the five best showmanship ideas each week. It can be the source for as much extra income as a second concession stand."

Likewise, the entries show coast to coast interest, with many including ideas of prize winning calibre. The duties the judging committee has assumed is not an easy one, and while there may be only one $100 winner each week, it goes without saying that the exchange of showmanship ideas through this medium will be of inestimable value to many.

The Man In The Booth

Pictured on the cover of this issue are the keys to any motion picture theatre that is successfully doing its job; the best projection and sound equipment available, and the projectionist. Put a good man in a booth with good equipment and the management can safely devote all of its efforts to getting the public into the theatre, without worrying about the quality of the film presentation.

In the period covered by 3-D and stereophonic sound to horizontal VistaVision, it has been that man in the booth who has had to adapt, improvise, redesign and wrestle with systems and equipment completely strange to him. Very often the projectionist has had to become a part-time engineer and inventor in order to project a clear picture every day on the tilting, widening, curving screens that were installed in the auditorium.

Today there is a certain amount of standardization, and quite a reduction in the confusion surrounding projection and sound in motion picture theatres. In this issue the reader will find articles devoted to a wide range of subjects in this area, with the emphasis not so much on new systems, but on improvements in already established processes.

However, although the articles are about equipment, we would like to use this space to make a deep bow in the direction of the man in the booth. It is no exaggeration to say that many of the advances presently being enjoyed by the industry and the public would not have been possible without the wholehearted cooperation of the projectionist. The fact that in many cases the role of the projectionist is overlooked, or not given too much consideration, is a salute to his ability. It is rare that a job is taken for granted unless it is being performed in such a manner that the management does not find it necessary to devote much of its time to its supervision.

It is hoped that the manufacturers, studios, and engineers will continue to develop and perfect new and improved methods of presenting sight and sound in a theatre. Without this progress the entire motion picture industry would be in jeopardy. It is also hoped that this industry will continue to be fortunate enough to have its booths run by men with the same spirit, enthusiasm, and devotion to doing a job well, that is to be found today.

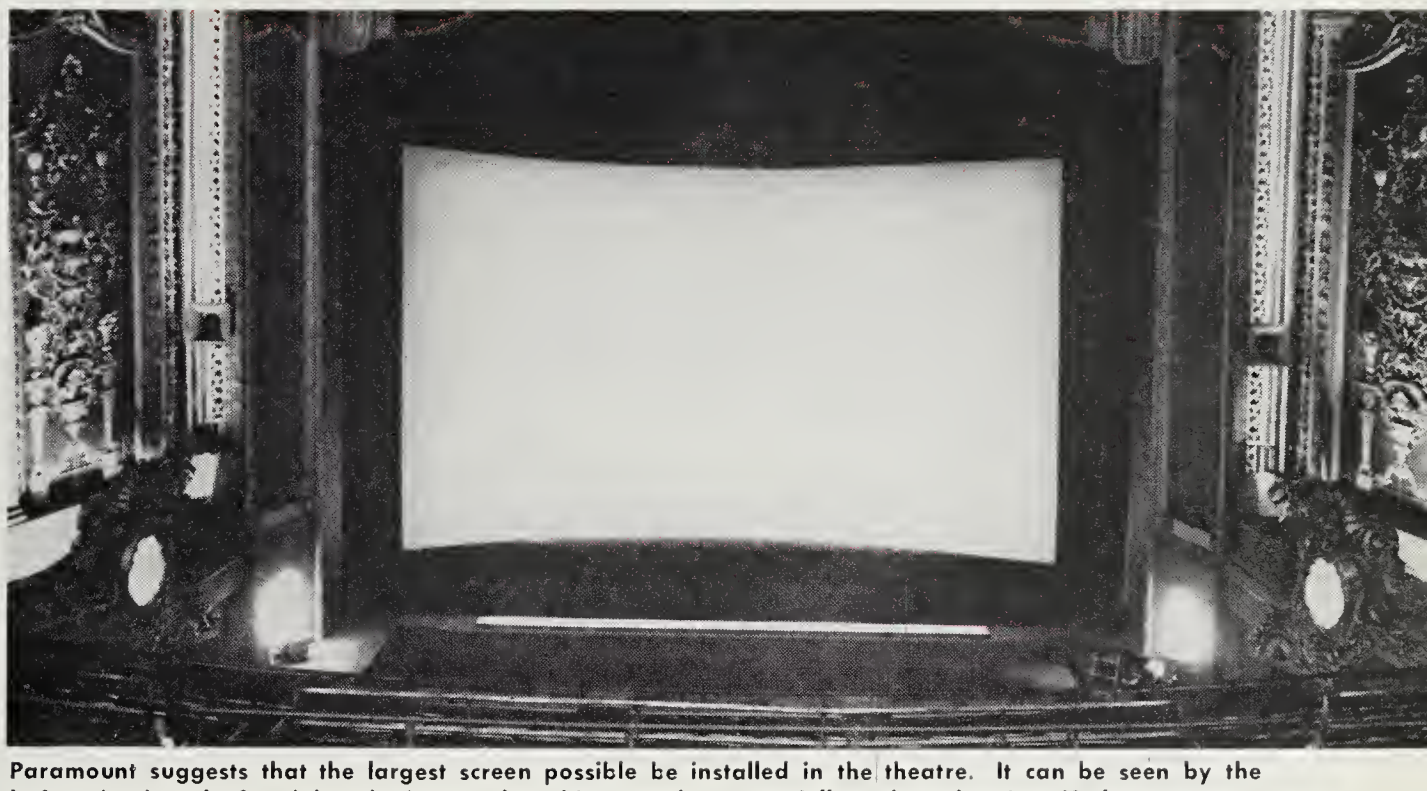
With Information Furnished By Paramount, Here Is A Brief Review of

THE FACTS ABOUT VISTAVISION



Paramount suggests that the largest screen possible be installed in the theatre. It can be seen by the before (top) and after (above) pictures that this procedure was followed at the New York Paramount. The new screen can present a picture 35 feet high by 64 feet wide using the horizontal projection.

THE most important advantage claimed for the horizontal VistaVision process is the larger image size. Paramount is using what it believes to be the optimum image size for a large picture. If the picture image on the film is smaller than that now used by VistaVision, it is claimed, there is a loss of general sharpness, and if the picture image is larger there is a loss in the depth of focus.

In motion pictures, a slight subjective effect of stereoscopy usually accompanies camera movement. This effect is said to be enhanced by VistaVision since more and more of the indices by which audiences can tell that that picture is flat are eliminated. In general, audiences tell that a motion picture is flat by the softness of focus, the film grain, the sheen from the screen, and the straight lines of the picture masking. In the presentation of VistaVision, Paramount states that there is the required sharpness, the grain is invisible, the sheen created by the mirror effect of a metalized screen is eliminated, and there is a slight curvature of the screen (radius equal to projection throw). A curve in the top and bottom line of the aperture and masking eliminates the straight line effect, and also creates an illusion of a deep curve in the screen, which is said to further add to the stereoscopic effect.

Tests made by Paramount indicate that the illusion of curvature used in VistaVision is better than a real curvature of a screen. The focus is better, the image can be seen from a wider angle of viewing, and there is no distortion of horizontal straight lines even when seen from a high balcony and side seats. It is further claimed that the same depth effectiveness is produced in any part of the theatre.

Another advantage claimed for double-frame VistaVision projection is that the picture can be viewed with ease and comfort from seats far closer to the screen than usual.

Equipment Needs

In preparing for double-frame projection the theatre must have, or install a seamless screen that is metalized and with a light gain of about 2 to 1. A gain of 3 to 1 is said to be too high and 1 to 1 too low. The size of the screen should, in general, follow the recommendations Paramount made for single-frame VistaVision, but they may vary in some cases because of the great size potential of the double-frame system.

The screen should have a curvature equal to the projection throw or 1.2 times the projection throw. In cases of theatres using a projection angle of over 15 degrees, the screen frame should be capable of tilting backward at the top. The amount of tilt should never exceed five or six degrees. In all cases, Paramount states that the screen should be as close to the stage floor as possible.

Prints

For optimum effectiveness on large screens of from 50 to 60 feet in width, the large image of the double-frame print with double-frame projection is recommended. This large area of print is not necessary for smaller screens, Paramount says.

Double-frame prints can be projected in any aspect ratio from 1.66:1 to 2:1. Paramount recommends filling the proscenium with picture on the largest possible screen as determined by the physical requirements of the theatre. Most presentations should be in an aspect ratio of about 1.85:1.

The double-frame picture film has a standard optical track located in the standard position. The recording and reproduction is at 180 feet per minute in place of the normal 90 feet per minute. The sound synchronization is 18 double frames behind the picture (in the same direction as magnetic sound).

All VistaVision prints, including the double-frame prints, are on regular 35mm. film, which can be specified and handled on any rewind and inspection equipment that will accommodate up to 5000 foot reels.

Lenses

Standard type high quality lenses are used. The lens size can be computed with this formula: the lens focal length in inches will be equal to 1.418 times the projection throw in feet, divided by the desired picture width in feet as measured

Some Theories and Facts About Projection Optics' Series of

New Projection Lenses

By John R. Miles*
President, John R. Miles Company

PROJECTOR illumination is produced by one of two basic types of optical systems; the true, or classical condenser system, and the source imaging system. Motion picture illumination is not produced by classical condensers, but rather by source-imaging systems, which have specific characteristics limiting the light on the screen edge. Some of these characteristics are often produced by using short focus lenses with a mirror designed for long focus lenses. This produces difficulties which are not completely overcome by faster lenses. Tube spaces in projectors, meant for long focus lenses, also frequently produce uneven illumination.

Classical Condenser

With the classical condenser system, the source is imaged by the condenser lens on to the objective lens, which, in turn, images the film close to the condenser on to the screen. In this way, the objective lens also images the surface of the condenser on to the screen, or nearly so, and this device produces almost perfect uniformity of illumination across the screen, regardless of the variation in brightness of the source across the face of the source.

The size of the condenser must be at least as large as the film aperture, and usually, it is considerably larger in this type of system because it is placed at a slight distance from the film aperture. In many cases the speed of the condenser must be as much as two or three times the speed of the objective lens. (Speed is defined as focal length of a lens divided by its diameter or free aperture.) Thus, a lens of three-inch focal length with a one-inch diameter has a speed of f/3. The magnification of the condenser is arranged so that the image of the source is equal in size to the aperture of the objective lens, and this image of the source must be formed in the objective lens stop to produce the even illumination required.

Several Difficulties

One of the several difficulties in using this type of condenser for professional motion picture projection is that the condenser is too close to the source in most cases, and in case an arc is used the spattering from the arc damages the condenser too quickly.

Another difficulty is that the condenser must be of a very high speed in order to obtain illumination on the edge of the field.

Source Imaging Systems

In the source imaging system, the source itself is imaged or projected on to the screen or other area to be illuminated. A simple example of this type of system is the military searchlight, where the crater of the arc is imaged at a very great distance. Since the searchlight mirror is rather long focal length, and the crater quite small, the beam is rather narrow and very intense. The professional motion picture projector for 35mm. film uses a source imaging system, where the mirror (or condenser lens) images the source at the film gate and the projection lens reimages this source, and the film gate, on to the screen. This system is convenient because the arc, which is usually used, has a fairly even brightness, and this method keeps the source at a considerable distance from the mirror and produces the proper magnification of source image without too much difficulty.

In the event the classical condenser system is used for a six-inch f/2 lens, the magnification of the condenser would have to be three times as great, and the mirror considerably larger in order to equal the performance in the center of the field as the mirrors are now used.

Projection Lenses

The double Gauss type of projection lens is used by some of the leading optical companies to obtain a fast lens up to f/1.8 or even f/1.5. Usually these lenses decrease the light in the center of the field by having eight air-glass surfaces, but they do increase the light on the edge of the field by their high relative aperture. These lenses are Anastigmats, that is, they are corrected for astigmatism, and have a relatively flat field. The back focal length in these lenses, however, is quite great, and consequently, the back lens of the system is placed at a considerable distance from the film gate so that this light coming from the edge of the mirror is spilled on to the tube of the projector. Actual measurements and calculations show that the two-inch central beam is cut down to 1.3 inches for the edge of the field on this six-element double Gauss. An Anastigmat lens of this speed, with a strong rear lens of large diameter, and close to the film gate would produce a better compromise and give more light, both in the center of the field and on the edge of the field. At one time it was thought that the long back focus, or distance from the rear lens to the film, was an advantage, but actually this is not the case.

New Type Lens

The Projection Optics Company, Rochester, N. Y., is now producing a line of projection lenses called the Super Hilux line. These lenses have a strong rear element close to the film gate, and thus have a greater light collecting ability, or

The Equipment Needed For, and Advantages of Combination

Optical-Magnetic Sound Systems

By Jim Mahon
Ampex Theatre Equipment Sales Mgr.

WITH the current situation in conventional and drive-in theatres, most exhibitors find it necessary to use both magnetic and optical sound, depending upon print availability, and the process used. The Ampex Corporation is offering a combined optical-magnetic theatre sound system.

Heart Of The System

The heart of this combined sound system is the control box. Here, in one small box, to be located on the front wall of the projection room, are all of the controls needed for complete operation of the most complex installation.

Changeover from projector to projector is accomplished on the single changeover switch provided, with extension handle, if needed, regardless of the kind of sound in use at any time. No matter if the system is adjusted to operate with magnetic sound from CinemaScope films, single-channel optical sound, or multichannel Perspecta Sound, this single changeover lever will do the job. It is provided with a spring-loaded connection, when the extension rod is used, which means that the switch cannot be damaged by vigorous operation of the changeover rod.

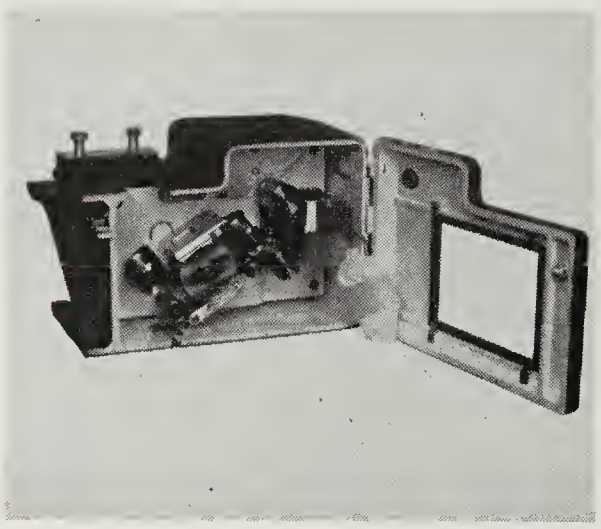
Switches are also provided on this control box for the selection of stereophonic magnetic, normal optical, Perspecta, or non-sync sound sources.

Also included is an emergency switch. This functions to take advantage of the system's three power amplifiers, three preamplifiers, and three stage loudspeakers, to return the system to single-channel operation, and continue the presentation of all the sound on the film sound track, even in case of the failure of one or two amplifiers, preamplifiers, or stage loudspeakers.

Even the master volume control is included on the central box. This box measures 14 inches high, 10½ inches wide, and four inches deep.

Magnetic Reproducers

The system includes two magnetic reproducers which mount on top of the projector head below the supply reel with easily mounted adapters that fit all standard American projectors, and automatically set the magnetic pickup heads at the correct distance from the projection aperture.



The Ampex magnetic reproducer comes equipped with adapters to fit all standard projectors.

Every moving part within the reproducer employs precision ball bearings, presealed for many years of trouble-free service, without oiling or attention of any kind. The "dash pot" damping device, of the pneumatic type, requires no oiling, and no periodic refilling.

The magnetic pickup clusters, mounted inside the heavily shielded case, are of the same design as those used in the Ampex tape recorders, and bear a 750 hour operating guarantee.

Simple threading, with automatic tension positioning, together with automatic locking of the sprocket wheel during threading, and automatic warning in case the projector is started without closing both keeper flanges, are found in all reproducers. Film with optical sound tracks, of course, may be threaded around the rollers on the left of the reproducer, without passing over the magnetic heads.

Preamplifiers

The output of the magnetic reproducer heads is fed, through the switches in the control box, directly to the input of the magnetic preamplifiers. The output of the theatre's optical soundheads is fed to the changeover switch in the control box, and then to a filter. This filter includes provision for adjustment of the frequency response of the optical system to Academy or other desired characteristics. The filter alters the level and character of the electrical signal from the optical soundheads so that, to the preamplifier, the signal is similar to that which would be delivered from a magnetic pickup head. Thus, a

A SUBSIDIARY OF GENERAL PRECISION EQUIPMENT CORPORATION

An Up-To-Date Report On The Advances That Will Bring

Improvements In CinemaScope

By Earl I. Sponable*
Research Director, 20th-Fox

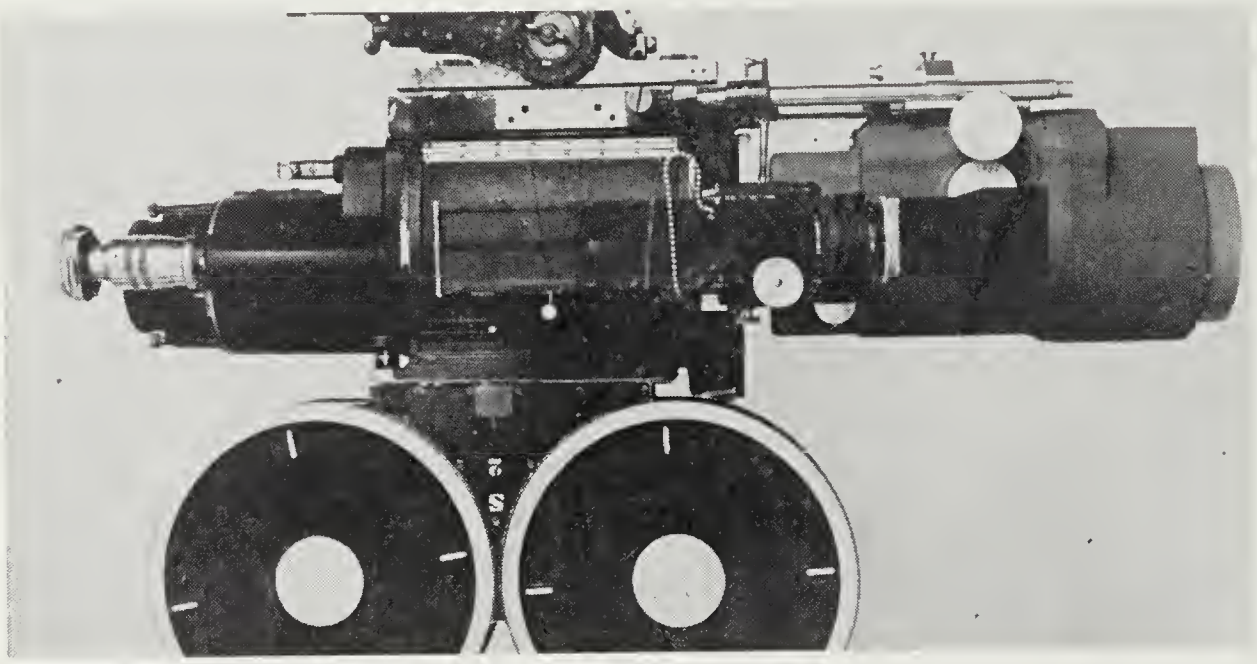
ONE of the most outstanding contributions made during the past year was the really exceptional optical design work done by Bausch and Lomb. This resulted in the combining of the spherical components of the optical system—that is, the prime or taking lens in the camera—with the cylindrical or anamorphic components all in one housing, and adjustable for focusing and astigmatism by a single knob. The most important result of the redesgn was the notable improvement in definition, depth of field and the reduction of distortion at the side of the image. The formerly used anamorphic attachments were limited in their use to lenses of 50mm. or more in focal length. The new series of composite lenses presently cover a range of from 35 to 152 millimeters.

The new composite lenses are now in use by all the major producers who are engaged in making CinemaScope pictures, and the resulting improvement in imagery is quite evident in the recent CinemaScope pictures now reaching the theatres.

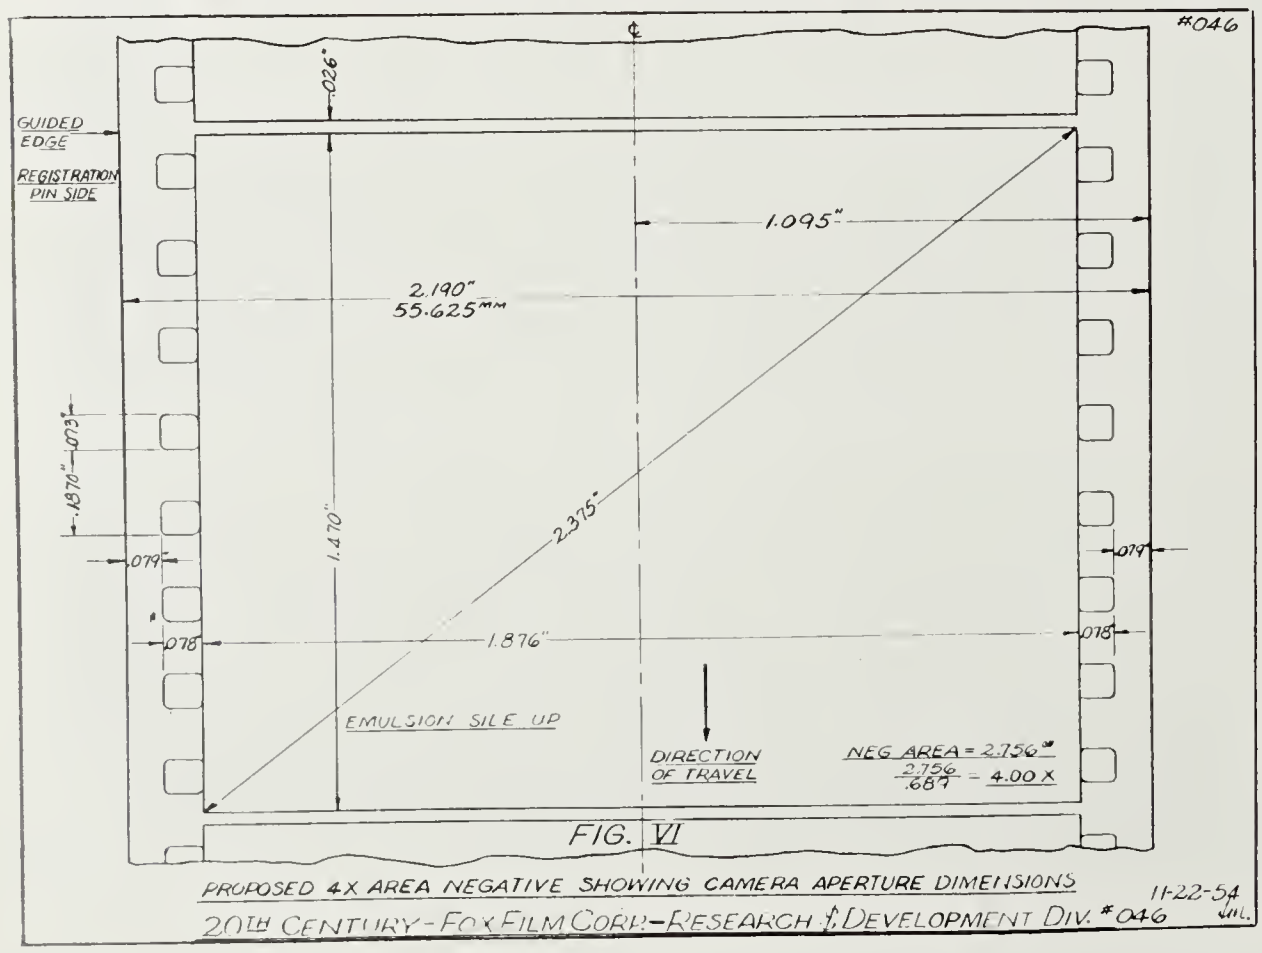
Other Improvements

From the very beginning of CinemaScope there have been certain other apparent lines along which improvements in screen quality might be made in addition to that obtained with the new camera lenses. That this was so was evident even in the days when we were making the initial comparative tests between Henri Chretien's anamorphic lenses and large films.

The most obvious thing which we knew even then would add to CinemaScope quality was improved definition; and it was perfectly evident, then as now, that a larger negative image was one way, at least, to achieve this. To have used a larger negative image on wider films at that time would, however, have involved making entirely new cameras; so instead we used the largest possible area available with standard equipment. This increase frame area of some 32 per cent was of itself a substantial and significant gain over the then standard camera apertures.



The new 152mm lens (above) mounted on the camera is one of the reasons for the improvements to be found in CinemaScope. The diagram (below) explains new 55.625mm negative size that is to be used.



Size Of Negative

As to the size of the negative image, we have reviewed this subject with great care and have asked Eastman Kodak, Bausch & Lomb, and others to advise us in those fields in which they are specially skilled. The Eastman Kodak Research Laboratories have reported on the results of a study made aimed at evaluating what the optimum size of negative image might be, from the point of view of film grain, and information storage capabilities, and where in the laboratory process it would be most efficient to reduce that large negative to a standard 35mm. film.

We had also, in our own laboratories, made a similar analysis, and it is interesting to note that our two results came out essentially alike, and indicated that the most desirable negative image area size would be one having about two times the present linear dimension of the CinemaScope negative in each direction, or four times its area. This figure appears to be one beyond which there is little, if any, commercial gain, and, when weighted against the problems of optical and mechanical design, it seems definitely not worthwhile to exceed. Up to this value of four times area, however, very real improvements in gain and definition are apparent.

Added Advantage

Inasmuch as the problems of correcting photographic lenses, like all optical systems, are higher order functions of the diagonal of the field covered, it is also apparent that the nearly square format of the CinemaScope frame is a further added advantage. Since the diagonal of this 4X frame is substantially equal to that of the old 70mm. Grandeur film, which had an area increase of only about 2.3 times our present CinemaScope negative frame, it will become immediately clear that our proposed new frame has almost twice as much information recording surface as any other suggested large screen process. This extra area is very important indeed

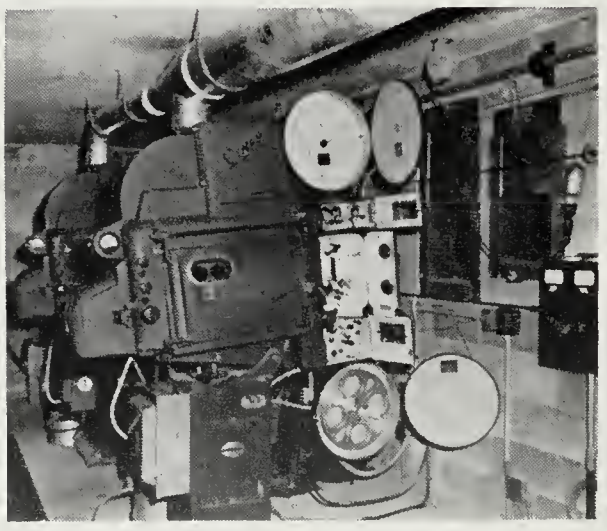
The World's Oldest Manufacturer of Theatre Equipment

New Bay Shore Sunrise Drive-In Offers

ENTERTAINMENT, PLUS

One of the most popular pieces of equipment in the drive-in's playground is the new Miracle Star Gazer motor-driven ferris wheel as seen.



The projection booth is equipped with all of the equipment necessary to properly project a clear and undistorted picture on giant drive-in screen.

Using the cafeteria style of service with four lanes, the concession area is well equipped to handle the 1500-car capacity of the drive-in.

WITH a good part of the theatre industry fighting to hold its own, the drive-in continues to flourish and expand. The reasons for this situation are not difficult to ascertain. Today's modern outdoor theatre offers the public fine film entertainment, plus; and it is that plus which is making the difference. For the price of admission the patron can avail himself of recreational facilities for himself and his family, can get a wide selection of refreshments at attractive and well operated concession stands, and enjoy the program in the privacy of his own automobile. These plus factors, and the steadily mounting number of families moving to suburban locations, seem to hold most of the answer. Of course, the showmanship of the operators of drive-ins cannot be overlooked.

An example of how these elements can be blended to create a successful drive-in can be seen at the new Bay Shore Sunrise Drive-In, located on the Sunrise Highway at Brentwood Road, in Bay Shore, Long Island.

This latest link in the steadily growing number of units in the Prudential Theatres circuit, is ideally located in one of the fastest growing areas of the New York metropolitan district, and adjacent to a flourishing farmers market.

Holds 1500 Cars

Able to accommodate 1500 cars, the Bay Shore Sunrise has two ticket booths capable of handling four cars at a time. In order to get the cars into the theatre and off the heavily traveled Sunrise Highway quickly, a traffic circle has been constructed that permits a free flow of traffic.

Upon entering the drive-in the patron cannot help but be impressed by the huge 135 by 54 foot screen. One of the largest screens ever constructed, it is made of specially extruded and chemically treated aluminum to a design developed by the Motion Picture Research Council, and made by Manco Vision, Butler, Wisc. The tower, which has been made of treated wood, is tilted and curved in order to produce a clear, undistorted picture.

DRIVE-IN THEATRES

Concession Building

The concession building is made of cinder block and occupies over 4500 square feet. Using the cafeteria style of service the refreshment stand employs four lanes, each fully equipped and each with its own cashier. When fully manned there are 16 people employed in serving customers the great variety of items that are available. In addition to the standard refreshments, such as soft drinks and popcorn, the patron may also enjoy such things as turkey rolls, pizza pies, shrimp rolls, potato stixs, hot dogs, etc.

An interesting innovation in the concession building is the wall which directly faces the screen tower. Although a generous use of glass has been made so that the patron may be able to view the screen while he is making his purchases, a large portion of the wall can be rolled up, very much like garage doors, and thus take advantage of the night air on warm evenings. A number of speakers are strategically located in the building so that customers may hear as well as see the film.

The interior of the building has been done in pleasant and cheerful shades of pink, black and green, creating a clean, efficient appearance, without looking antiseptic.

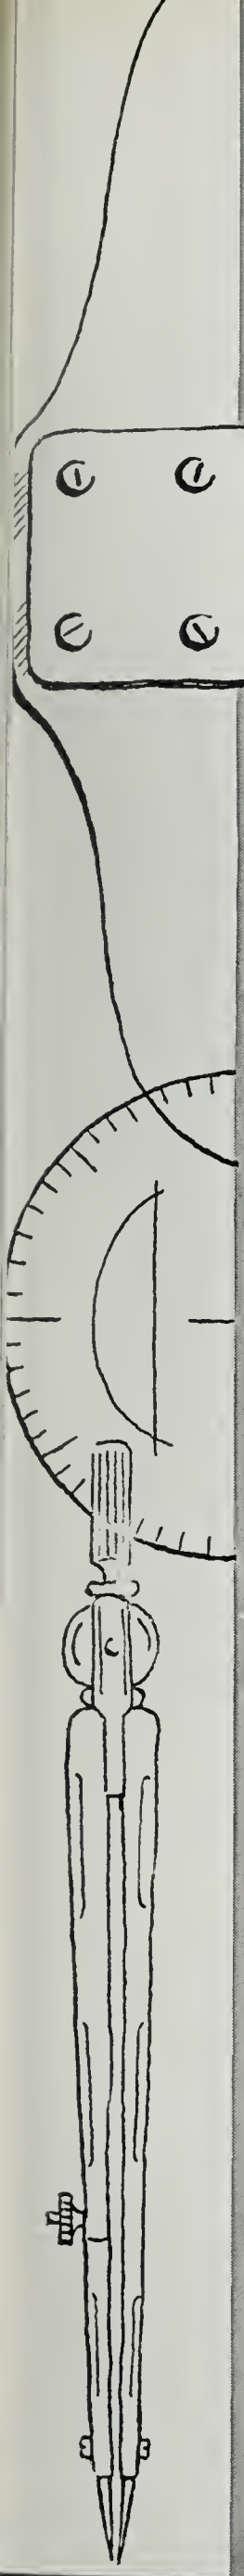
If You Want

BETTER SIDELIGHTING...



If you want to see less drop-off on your screen than you thought possible . . . then you're ready for the new formula Raytone HILUX Screen.

Here's the screen that was conceived on the drawing boards, engineered by men who's business is light reflection and proved in theatres of all sizes and shapes.

No longer an engineer's dream, the new formula Raytone HILUX is a fact . . . proved more effective in installations of small as well as large screens over 80 feet wide!

All of this plus economy, too! Your regular dealer will be pleased to quote Raytone Screen prices . . . much lower than you'd expect them to be for a product of such unequalled quality.

And the Raytone HILUX is unconditionally guaranteed to show a bright picture, will show no seams, will give you complete uniformity without blemishes or streaks and will give you true color rendition with richer, more natural pictures. It is guaranteed to do all this, or you pay nothing for the screen!

Shea Circuit Purchases Its First Drive-In

NEW YORK—Gerald Shea, president of Shea Enterprises, announced that his organization has purchased Pine Island Park, 50-acre combination amusement park and drive-in theatre located a few miles outside of Manchester, N. H.

This acquisition marks the first venture into operations other than four-walled theatres which make up the circuit but it is not the last, Shea opined, the organization having acquired property in the mid-west on which a drive-in will be erected in the future.

The Pine Island drive-in presently holds 400 cars but this is being expanded to hold 1000 vehicles with other renovations in the planning or working stage, such as the installation of a 100-foot wide screen on which CinemaScope films can be shown, changes in equipment, and overhaul of the concession operation.

Shea felt that the combination of amusements was a good one from a business viewpoint since the public is bound to be attracted by either one or the other, with each attracting customers for the other. The amusement area contains numerous rides commercially profitable, a roller-skating rink, a dance area, swimming and boating facilities as well as a junior section for the younger set with miniature rides and attractions.

The drive-in will regularly open Easter and run through October, while the general amusement area will open weekends until Decoration Day, after which it will operate continuously through Labor Day.

Veteran manager Edward Fahey, who has been with the Shea Circuit since 1932, has been named to direct the entire operation and he is expected to make showmanship pay off with special promotions and visitations to schools, organizations, etc., developing picnics, clam bakes, outings, etc.

Shea reported that the drive-in patrons arrive in early daylight hours, park their vehicles on the drive-in ramps, take in the amusement park activities and then return to catch the first show. There is no admission charge to the amusement park at present, but each ride is paid for as desired.

as we call it, a greater "light collecting speed." In fact, the diameter of this rear element is substantially equal to its distance from the film gate, and thus the lens is said to have an f/1 light collecting speed. This lens is shown in (Figure IV) and it can be seen that the construction differs considerably from the older type of double Gauss lens.

An Advantage

One advantage of the new Super Hilux is that there are only six air-glass surfaces, which are practically all curved away from the film gate. This fewer number of air-glass surfaces increases the light transmission by several per cent, and increases the contrast as well. The curvature of all air-glass surfaces, away from the film gate, also helps to increase the light transmission and contrast. This Super Hilux lens is a true Anastigmat (corrected for astigmatism), and basically of the Gauss design, although the central component is made thicker to gain from the aberration standpoint. The thick central crown element is made of high transmission glass of relatively low index, but is cemented between two glasses, which are particularly chosen to function well with low reflecting film, so as to further increase the transmission of the lens.

In September, 1950, Doctor Willy Merte stated in his treatise and Index on Zeiss formulae, that this style lens used in the Super Hilux is probably the best type of lens yet designed. (Dr. Merte was in charge of the Optical Design Department at the Zeiss Works until the sur-

"Second Story" Drive-In To Be Erected

OAKHURST, N. J.—The world's first "second-story" drive-in theatre—the first ever built completely above ground level—will be operated by the Walter Reade Theatres organization at a huge new Dover shopping center, Dover, N. J., Walter Reade, Jr., circuit president, disclosed.

The parking lot at the shopping center will be double-decked, and a drive-in theatre with a capacity of nearly 1,000 cars will be built on the top level. During the day it will serve as a parking area for the shopping center; at night as a drive-in.

A fully-equipped restaurant will be built in the center of the upper deck, to serve shoppers during the day time and drive-in customers at night, Reade said. The same building will also house the projection booths for the theatre. A screen more than 100 feet wide and capable of showing CinemaScope and other new wide-screen projection methods, will be erected at one end of the upper deck, and a kiddie play area, complete with slides, swings, merry-go-rounds, and other playground equipment, will be established at the base of the screen.

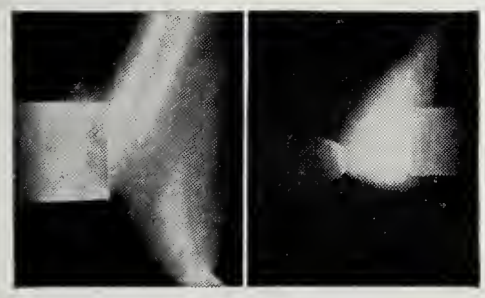
Reade said the new theatre will incorporate all of the latest projection, sound and in-car speaker equipment, and will be equipped with in-car heaters for year-round operation. To his knowledge, he said, it will be the first drive-in theatre ever built which will be above ground.

Dover, about 30 miles from New York City, is one of the fastest growing suburban areas in the east. The shopping center was conceived and is being built by Milton L. Ehrlich, Inc., New York City. Construction has already begun.

The idea of incorporating a drive-in theatre into a shopping center, Reade said, is in keeping with the trend that the nation now "travels on wheels." Whereas conventional theatres have been built in some shopping centers around the country it is his and Ehrlich's belief, Reade declared that because the shoppers will come to the Center by automobile, a drive-in theatre will be more appropriate and of greater convenience to the shoppers.

The Reade organization has signed a long-term lease with the Dover Shopping Center for operation of the theatre. According to present plans it should open at the end of this year.

An artist's conceptian af the "Second Story" drive-in to be erected at the new Daver shopping center, Dover, N. J., and operated by the Walter Reade Theatres. Note how the parking area will be dauble-decked, and the theatre will be constructed on the tap deck to be used during the day as a parking area for the shopping center, and at night as an outdoor theatre. Starlite title on the attraction is the architect's; not actual name.



THE PICTURE IS LIGHT...
GIVE IT ALL YOU CAN with "NATIONAL" CARBONS

THE NEED FOR MORE and better projection light began with the first "flicker" and grew as the industry grew. From the very beginning, "National" carbons have satisfied projectionists' demands for brighter, whiter light and slower, steadier burning.

SINCE "NICKELODEON" DAYS, the brightness of "National" projector carbons has been increased more than 1000 per cent! And, today, with giant screens becoming almost universal, arc-carbon progress continues to meet the challenge.

FOR EXAMPLE, the new "Suprex" 8mm carbon, latest in a long series of recently improved "National" carbons, provides 15% more light and a higher color temperature than its predecessor — at no increase in cost! Yes, the picture is light... and with "National" carbons you are sure of getting it in fullest measure.

The term "National" is a registered trade-mark of Union Carbide and Carbon Corporation at the screen. The standard lens size tables do not apply to double-frame VistaVision.

Projectors

The double-frame projectors take the same floor area and portholes as a standard projector. These projectors can replace standard projectors or they can be installed in any place where a standard projector can be installed. They use standard pedestals, standard lamp houses and standard 5000 foot magazines. The magazines are mounted vertically in the usual manner. The film passes horizontally through the projector.

The projectors are furnished complete with bases, movement, magazines, changeover dousers and sound heads. Normally, they will be supplied less lamp houses and less lenses. Paramount recommends using hy-candescent condenser type lamp houses capable of 180 amperes, although most installations operate at 150 to 160 amperes.

The projector booth will have to be wired to accommodate two horizontal projectors. This shall include the capability of 180 amperes of power for the arc, motor wiring, changeover control, sound head power and speech circuits, plus a 110-volt ac supply for threading and service lights. This wiring should tie in with the booth control wiring so that these machines will start and control on changeover in the same manner and inter-changeability with the standard machines.

T.O.A. Plans Own Tradeshow

NEW YORK—E. D. Martin, President of Theatre Owners of America, announced the finalization of plans for a trade show to be held in conjunction with the National TOA Convention in Los Angeles, Oct. 6, 7, 8, 9.

Space for 135 industry exhibits has been allocated at the Biltmore Hotel where theatre owners will view the latest innovations in theatre equipment and products.

The contract for the management of the trade show has been awarded to William S. Orkin, Orkin Expositions Management Company, of New York.

C. E. Warner Joins Altec

NEW YORK—C. S. Perkins, Altec Service Corporation operating manager, has announced the appointment to the field engineering staff of C. E. Warner. Warner, who replaces Glenn C. Ornstine, following the recent death of the latter, has been assigned to L. J. Patton's eastern division, and will provide technical sound service for theatres in Virginia, Maryland, and Washington, D. C.

SMPTE's Nemec Attends International Meeting in Sweden

NEW YORK—Boyce Nemec, executive secretary of the Society of Motion Picture and Television Engineers, served as secretary of the second meeting of Technical Committee 36 on Cinematography of the International Standardization Organization held in Stockholm, June 11 to 16.

The purpose of this meeting was to establish international standards which will aid in the continued interchangeability of film among various nations of the world. More than 40 delegates from Belgium, Czechoslovakia, France, Germany, Italy, Mexico, the Netherlands, Sweden, the United Kingdom, and the United States attended.

The United States delegation, headed by Dr. Deane R. White of du Pont, offered eight American Standards and proposed standards on cinematography as possible items for the meeting's agenda. These included dimensions for 35mm. motion picture film, alternate standards for either positive or negative raw stock; dimensions for 8mm. motion picture film; dimensions for 35mm. motion picture short-pitch negative film; cutting and perforating dimensions for 35mm. motion picture negative raw stock; dimensions for 200-mil magnetic sound tracks on 35mm. and 17½mm. motion picture film; dimensions for 100-mil magnetic coating on single perforated 16mm. motion picture film; magnetic coating, 16mm. magnetic photographic sound record; and 4-track magnetic sound for 35mm. film.

In addition to attending the meetings in Stockholm, Nemec will visit motion picture studios and equipment manufacturers in England, Holland, Germany, Switzerland and France.

RCA Offering New Junction Box

CAMDEN, N. J.—A loud-speaker junction box designed to enhance the appearance of drive-in theatres as well as provide functional advantages was announced by the Engineering Products division, Radio Corporation of America.

Known as "Circlite," the new junction box can be used with all types of RCA in-car speakers, features modern styling and is available in a choice of red, green, or white beacon lights, according to M. J. Yahr, manager, RCA Theatre and Sound Products.

Other features include: longer terminal units, for easier, faster installation connections; and contoured design.

single type of preamplifier serves for both optical and magnetic sound.

Volume Control

Every combined system contains four-channel magnetic pickup head and cables. Three-channel systems are equipped with three separate magnetic preamplifiers; the fourth preamplifier and 12 kilocycle silencing amplifier are included in a fourth channel kit that is available. After the three or four channels of magnetic sound, or the one channel of optical sound, are amplified by the preamplifiers, in the equipment cabinet, the signal is returned at high level through cables to the control box where the system volume control is located. From here the electrical signal is returned, again through cables, to the power amplifiers in the equipment cabinet.

Equipment Cabinet

All combined optical-magnetic sound systems include an equipment cabinet which may be either of the side opening or back opening type. All connections to and from the front wall, and to ac power sources, are brought to terminal panels inside the equipment cabinet, clearly marked for easy installation and connection.

In each of the equipment racks of the Master series systems is a monitor panel, containing a single loudspeaker, a small power amplifier, and a selector switch on which the operator may select the output of any one of the three stage speaker amplifiers, the fourth channel of magnetic sound, or all channels simultaneously. This monitor functions no matter if the sound is single-channel optical, Perspecta, or three or four channel magnetic. The monitor system has its own volume control, and the panel contains the master power circuit breaker for the system.

Perspecta Sound

Throughout the Master and Deluxe combined sound systems, provision has

NTS Markets Its Own Private Quality Carpet

NEW YORK—To meet the demand of exhibitors for a high quality, low cost, long wearing carpet, National Theatre Supply is offering a new private quality wool and nylon carpet known as Nylwood, according to J. W. Servies, vice president and manager of National's carpet department.

Nylwood, which will be available in private patterns only, is a blend of 20 per cent nylon and 80 per cent wool. Wear tests have indicated that the addition of 20 per cent nylon will double the wear life of most carpets.

when you consider the added grain and loss of definition incidental to the duping process, the introduction of effects of all kinds, and such further definition loss as may be due to dye migration or bleeding in some color processes.

Studies indicate that this four-times area frame can be put on a piece of film 55.625mm. wide, using all the area efficiently, and making use of the CinemaScope perforations. This width figure comes about very simply by taking two times the present CinemaScope camera aperture, adding the widths of two rows of perforations and the standard protective edges outside the perforations, making proper allowances for manufacturing and other tolerances.

Bausch & Lomb has designed new taking lenses to cover this additional frame area, and has delivered the first sample lens; their design considerations have taken into account such very important relationships between focal length, depth of field and camera position. An experimental camera has been built and we have made test photographs that support our conclusions.

A new 2:1 reduction printer lens, has also been designed by Bausch & Lomb, that yields a print from this enlarged negative of excellent quality over the entire frame.

Future Plans

It is our plan, after demonstrating the results, to make available to those making CinemaScope pictures, design information and assistance enabling them to use this optimum size negative, and to make CinemaScope standard release prints of greatly improved quality for all theatres. We are also considering making a limited number of release prints of some special pictures for road-shows of a larger projection frame area, and used under improved projection conditions. These prints may also carry extra magnetic soundtracks.

The General Precision Laboratories, Inc., have made studies, independently, of the optimum size film for handling in the theatre. Considerations of wear in the projector, life of the film, steadiness of the image on the screen, and all such factors were taken into account. Their conclusions, like ours, were that for material like our present motion picture film, a width in the range of approximately 50 to 55mm. was about as much as could be handled with expectations of long film life and good operation under commercial conditions. Further, distributing the light and heat over a larger area frame is advantageous. Improved projector mechanisms and cooling methods would alleviate the problem of maintaining good focus in the theatre. So also would the longer focal length lenses which would be used. Again, the lower magnification of the positive image in the theatre should yield still further improved picture quality.

Trade Show Booth Sales Going At Record Pace

NEW YORK—Rental contracts for booth space for the Allied-TESMA-TEDA-IPA Trade Show to be held by the four organizations at the Morrison Hotel, Chicago, November 6-9 this year is exceeding all expectations, according to Fred Matthews, TESMA president and Jack Kirsch, Allied General Chairman for the event. Contracts for 72 per cent of booth space in the TESMA first floor section of the exhibit space have been signed. About 63 per cent of space in the third floor section of the hotel where IPA will hold forth with concessions equipment items, soft drinks, hot dogs, etc., already have been sold, according to Carl Siegel, Stanley Warner Management Corporation, and exhibit chairman for IPA.

Indications are that the total space of 244 booths on both floors will have been sold out long before the show's opening dates, according to spokesmen for the TESMA and IPA organizations in charge of contracts for booth space. TESMA has 15 per cent additional space in negotiation with manufacturers and IPA reports that 22 per cent of its space additionally is in process of negotiation.

Space in the TESMA section has been contracted for by the following equipment manufacturers:

National Theatre Supply, Automatic Devices, Motiograph, Norpat Sales, International Seating Company, American Selectifier Corporation, Radio Corporation of America, Raytone Screen Company, Projection Optics Company, American Seating Company, Strong Electric Company, Drive-In Theatre Manufacturing Company, Ballantyne Company, Century Projector Corporation, La Vezzi Machine Works, Nehi Corporation, Pepsi-Cola Company, Coca-Cola Company, Wenzel Projector Company, Lorraine Carbons Company, Kollmorgan Optical Company, C. NTS Offering New Rectifier

NEW YORK—Drive-in theatres which must use powerful lamps to project to large screens but which do not have three-phase current readily available can now be supplied with a new single phase selenium plate rectifier by National Theatre Supply, the company announced.

This new single phase rectifier was designed for efficient burning of 10mm. and 11mm. regular carbons and 10mm. Hitex carbons.

Features of this new rectifier include a remote control relay, large fan ventilater, moisture-proof selenium units, air flow protective device, and taps to provide adjustment to compensate for supply voltage variations through a range of 10 per cent above or 10 per cent below the rated a.c. input voltage throughout the output rating range.

Vidoscope Moves To Larger Quarters

NEW YORK—Vidoscope, manufacturers of 35mm. and 16mm. lenses, moved into larger quarters at 730 Fifth Avenue, last week, it was reported by company president Walter Futter.

The new location, Futter said, will offer complete facilities for demonstration, projection, and sales of the complete Vidoscope line of 35mm. projection and anamorphic lenses, and the new 16mm. anamorphic CinemaScope lenses.

been made for easy addition, either on first installation or at any later time, of a Perspecta Sound integrator. The control box contains the necessary switching to feed the optical sound track from a Perspecta Sound print from the output of the preamplifier, to the input of a Perspecta Sound integrator, and to connect the three output channels of the integrator to the system volume control, on the front wall control box. Only the Perspecta Sound integrator and its connecting wires need be added.

Stage Speakers

The packaged price for all combined systems, of both the Master and Deluxe series, include appropriate stage loudspeakers. The 20-watt Master system uses the Altec A-7 speakers that incorporate an all-new high frequency horn capable of wide angle dispersion, and smooth wide-range frequency response. Stereophonic sound especially, requires wide distribution of all frequencies for effective presentation.

The 30-watt Master systems use the Altec A-6 stage loudspeaker, with two separate low frequency units, and flexible arrangement facilities for the baffles to operate satisfactorily on any stage, even crowded circumstances. The speakers are of the same general design as the A-7, but of higher power handling capacity.

The 60-watt Master systems are equipped with either the Altec A-4 stage loudspeakers or with the new Ampex 5050 system. The same option is offered with the Deluxe 30-watt systems.

The 60-watt Deluxe systems are provided with the Altec 4X system while the 120-watt Deluxe systems carry the Altec A-2X systems.

render of Germany at the end of World War II).

The field curvature of this lens is fully corrected, as is the spherical aberration, and the definition, as well as contrast, are very excellent.

The rays of light from the mirror have been determined by measurement and calculation, and are shown in Figure IV to come out of the Super Hilux lens with a separation of 1.56 inches. It will be noted that Ray 2 of Figure IV is the same ray as Ray 2 of Figure III. This ray comes from the upper edge of the mirror.

Ray 1A on Figure IV is a higher ray than Ray 1 on Figure III because the rear element of the Super Hilux is larger and closer to the film gate than is the rear element of the double Gauss. This Ray 1A then exits from the lens in such a way as to make the edge bundle, 1.56 inches, higher than the 1.3 inches of the double Gauss. This shows that the Super Hilux has a larger edge bundle of light, and thus greater illumination on the edge of the screen.

In conclusion, lenses which compensate for the spreading of the light on the tubes of the projectors are helping to solve the problem of more illumination on the screen, and particularly on the edge of the screen.

Low Cost Anamorphic Lens From Projection Optics

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—The availability of a new anamorphic lens, the Hilux 264, designed for use in small neighborhood houses, was announced by Projection Optics.

The Hilux 264 is said to have the same optical features as the Hilux-Val except that it is fixed and usable only with 2 25/32 inch or smaller projection lenses. The mounting portion of the new lens has been designed to fit into any standard 2 25/32 inch projector mount, it is claimed, and will clear all accessories on the face of some projectors. It will thread directly on the prime lens; will not require support brackets or extension tubes.

The Hilux 264 will sell for $395 a pair.

ing is a 60-foot patio. Flanked by a number of colorful pink and yellow chairs, this area also features a juke box and space for dancing before the show.

In addition to this patio area, the management has seen to it that there are plenty of facilities available to make a visit to the theatre a pleasing one. A number of shuffle board courts have been built directly below the screen tower. Tables with colorful beach umbrellas and chairs are also provided so that a patron may use the recreational facilities, or just sit with something good to eat and drink, and be a contented spectator.

For those so inclined, horseshoe pitching pits have been installed, with plans already underway to conduct tournaments. The management also announced that it will, in the near future, build a children's sail boat lake behind the rear ramp.

Playground

Realizing full well the importance of this area, the operators of the Bay Shore Sunrise have built a large playground, occupying over 10,000 square feet behind the concession building, and equipped in a manner that will keep little Johnny and Mary occupied for hours.

All the playground equipment was furnished by the Miracle Equipment Company, Grinnell, Ia., and includes swings, slides, see-saws and other standard pieces of equipment. In addition to this, the youngsters can enjoy themselves on a motor-driven merry-go-round. The largest piece of equipment in the playground is the Miracle Star-Gazer ferris wheel, which, with its bright pink seats and black and white candy stripe design, helps to create a carnival atmosphere.

The playground area fence is made up of wooden cutouts of famous cartoon and story-book characters familiar to all children, and painted in colorful shades of red, white and blue. One of the theatre staff members dresses himself as Mikko the clown and helps amuse the children.

Projection And Sound

The projection booth is located on top of the concession building, and is equipped with the latest projection and sound equipment, making it possible for the theatre to show films in CinemaScope, VistaVision, and other wide screen systems.

The air and water cooled Motiograph projectors and the Ashcraft Cinex 170 arc lamps are able to paint a clear and brightly lighted image on the screen 440 feet away. Power is supplied by a 40 horsepower generator said to be able to deliver a maximum of 400 amperes.

The RCA sound system is able to reproduce either optical or magnetic sound, and pipe it to the Ballantyne speakers

Manco-Vision Screen Gives Good Results

BUTLER, WISC.—The screen at the Bay Shore Sunrise Drive-In Bay Shore, Long Island, is the first installation in the east of the extruded aluminum Manco-Vision screen which was developed by the Motion Picture, Research Council.

White paint when brand new is said to have a light gain of .90, but the Manco-Vision screen, according to company president J. B. Schuyler, has a gain of 2.75 to 3.00.

To obtain the greatest results from the Manco-Vision screen, Schuyler points out that it is of prime importance, due to the reflective quality of the screen, to place it on the proper tilt in respect to the overall area of the drive-in, and the elevation of the projection booth and screen. There may be some instances, Schuyler indicated, where either a vertical or horizontal curvature may be beneficial.

In addition to the installation at the Bay Shore Sunrise, Manco-Vision screens have also been installed in drive-ins located in Texas, Louisiana, North Dakota, Montana, Arizona, Wisconsin, Illinois, and Michigan.

Pictured here is a view of a Manco-Vision screen installed in Tucson, Arizona, in which a white paint has been placed in the center of the screen, thus making it possible to see the difference in picture quality.

that are in the field. Bausch and Lomb lenses are also included in the top quality equipment used.

Promotion

Building a fine drive-in, and equipping it with the best equipment available means very little if the public is not made aware of its existence. This fact was not overlooked by Harry Birkmier, district manager for Prudential Theatres, who organized a full scaled promotion program prior to the opening of the Bay Shore Sunrise.

Heralds announcing the coming of the drive-in were placed in key spots throughout Long Island for weeks prior to the opening. Full use was made of advertisements in the metropolitan New York newspapers, as well as all of the local papers on Long Island.

The well planned program was climaxed by a gala opening night. Many local officials and celebrities were present, and a champion American Legion drum and bugle corp added their talents to the opening ceremonies.

The Seider family, owners and operators of Prudential Theatres, have done everything to make this new drive-in a success, and from the reaction of the patrons who have already attended, their efforts have not been wasted.

A number of shuffleboard courts have been constructed in front of the tower for the use of the drive-in patrons before the program starts.

DIT-MCO Offering Two New D-I Speakers

KANSAS CITY—A new and improved universal speaker and an all-metal concession speaker are now available from DIT-MCO, it was recently announced by F. W. Keilhack, sales manager.

The new DIT-MCO universal speaker is said to achieve excellent reproduction of sound in high and low tones because of the specially designed speaker unit and formed sand cast housing.

The speaker has a two-toned baked enamel finish with a white and silver front and a blue enamel hammertone back. Its speaker bracket is said to fit any make junction box now in use. A specially designed volume control is used that is completely insulated and enclosed, and shuts off completely. The control shaft is knurled so knobs are not necessary.

Included among some of the other features of this new universal speaker are a wide speaker opening that matches the size of the unit to prevent obstruction; venetian type louvres that slant downward to decrease sun and water damage; a perforated steel grill for protection of the speaker unit; a four-inch all-weather speaker unit; and back half of speaker housing and hanger bracket cast in one piece.

The new all-metal concession speaker announced by DIT-MCO was designed for inside and outside coverage of the concession building, the manager's office, the booth, and rest rooms.

This new DIT-MCO speaker may be flush mounted on the wall and the speaker leads may enter either from the rear or sides, the company explained. A special type of louvre has been punched into the face of the housing to allow the sound to pass through freely, and still protect the speaker unit.

An all-weather six by nine inch inside speaker unit is used, and the company's specially designed volume control is employed as well as a line matching transformer that is said to provide for impedence matching.

Raytone To Market Screen Coating

BROOKLYN, N. Y.—The Raytone Screen Corporation and Protective Coatings, Inc., Tampa, Fla., have joined in the marketing of Cinemaplastic screen coating, it was announced jointly by Alfred C. Bergman, president of Protective Coatings, and Leonard Satz, of Raytone. Under the arrangements made by the two companies, Raytone will now offer Cinemaplastic as a regular part of its service to outdoor theatres.

Nearly 100 drive-in theatres from California to New York have used Cinemaplastic screen coating on their towers with excellent results, it was said.

Cinemaplastic is a vinyl plastic that comes in liquid form and can be sprayed on any surface. It then dries to a tough flexible skin which adheres perfectly and expands and contracts with the surface.

According to Satz, Raytone will now back this product with the entire facilities of its own sales and advertising departments and vigorous promotions are planned.

Management Changes Hands In Six Georgia Drive-Ins

AUGUSTA, GA. — The Georgia Theatre Company last fortnight took over management of three more drive-ins, the Sky View, Forest Hills, and Bon Air, bringing all six local ozoners into their field. The company also operates the roofed Miller and the Modjeska.

John H. Stembler, GTC president, announced that the circuit has closed three drive-ins, the Augusta, Bon Air, and the Clover and Leaf temporarily. The others will continue to operate with more frequent program changes and better pictures.

Only the management of the theatres is involved, according to Stembler. Vincent Cassella, Harry Dennis, and John Marcus retain ownership of the Bon Air, and Donald Beard, the Sky View and Forest Hills.

Ira S. Meiselman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Meiselman, has received an award for the highest academic average in the Junior School at Admiral Farragut Academy, Pine Beach, N. J., during the last marking period. . . . Central Avenue Day, a project of the Central Avenue Business Club, is scheduled for June 23 with the stores in that area remaining open from 9 a.m., until 9 p.m. A special feature, according to W. Faison Barnes, president, will be the awarding of a weekend at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel in New York City, three days and two nights with travel via Eastern Air Lines. Another special feature will be free movies in the morning for the children at the Plaza, free ballons, special bargains at the stores, and free return trips on bus tickets which have been validated by stores in which patrons have shopped. The object of the special day which the club hopes to make an annual event is to let the people become acquainted with what they can get in the Central Avenue area. The Plaza is owned and operated by Consolidated Theatres, Inc.

June 4 was Kiddies Day at the Carolina. A crowd of about 700 youngsters, anticipating 13 cartoons, a comedy, popcorn, ice cream on a stick, and candy, overflowed the sidewalks singing "Davy Crockett." Doors were due to open at 9:30 a.m. for the 10 o'clock show. Manager Kermit High stood out front and apprehensively surveyed the bedlam. Emblazoned on the marquee above him were the words, "Violent Saturday, the day all Hell breaks loose."

Nancy Wilson, MGM chairman, service committee, did a bang up job of getting the WOMPI out to Paramount exchange for a sewing bee on the project of making the needed smocks for the girls at the Crittenton Home. Aiding were Mrs. Myrtle Park, president, Paramount; Mrs. Mildred Hoover, recording secretary, Paramount; Mrs. Mildred Warren, treasurer, 20th-Fox; Mrs. Eleanor Helms, Paramount; Mrs. Jerry Wisdom, Paramount; Patsy Griffin, Paramount; Margaret Raines, Theatre Booking Service; Mrs. Rebecca Miller, National Screen Service; Mrs. Mack Wess, Allied Artists; Mrs. Margaret Brown, MGM; Clarinda Craig, MGM; Kathleen Ferrell, U-I; Jo Williams, U-I; Mrs. V. Martin Burnett, Columbus, O., central district supervisor, Loew's Theatres, was here to supervise arrangements in connection with Loew's acquisition of the Normandy twin outdoor, north Florida's largest drive-in, with a capacity of 1,350 cars. Burnett said that James Carey, Evansville, Ind., was expected to take over management of the Normandy for Loew's on June 17. The present manager, C. H. "Danny" Deaver, who has been in charge of the Normandy since it opened more than five years ago, has not yet announced his plans for the future.

The 1955 Florida Legislature passed only two laws which affect motion picture exhibitors, advised LaMar Sarra, legistlative chairman, Motion Picture Exhibitors of Florida, in a lengthy report to Jerry Gold, MPEOF president, and the membership. Beginning July 1, Sarra stated, the State admission tax on "free passes" will be ended and the present exemption from the three per cent state sales tax on candy priced at 50 cents or less has been reduced, so that the exemption will apply only to candy selling for 25 cents or less.

Durham

Mayor J. Garner Bagnal, Statesville, N. C., promised to call a city-wide referendum on legalizing Sunday movies after A. Fuller Sams, president, Statesville Theatre Corporation, announced that he would show a Sunday movie despite an ordinance passed in 1947 prohibiting them. After the mayor agreed to a referendum as "the only fair thing to do," Sams called off the scheduled show. He said plans for the Sunday showing were prompted by suggestions from "numerous people" during the past 18 months. The City Council, at the mayor's request, later set August 9 as the tentative date for the referendum.

Cleveland

Theatre attendance has dropped consistently ever since Easter, local exhibitors say. While they are accustomed to a summer drop, they are feeling it more this year because it started earlier than usual. One exhibitor foresees the closing of several thousand theatres during the coming year, he claims that only the deluxe houses will survive.

In Akron, a Beacon-Journalist, Sydney J. Harrus by name, in a recent column really lit into the motion picture industry. Under the heading NO BUSINESS LIKE SHOW BUSINESS, he says, among other things: "No other business has partners who haven't spoken to each other for years; no other business is so riddled with law-suits, claims and counter claims, broken contracts, dishonored obligations, threats, curses, feuds, and interminable petty bickerings; no other business could treat its customers so cavalierly and get away with it; no other business entrusts its solvency to one personality whose whims can wreck the entire structure of an organization; no other business is so cruel to the people it no longer needs; no other business engages in so much public boasting about its big heart and indulges in so much private malice with its little head; no other business is so frightened of the new, the novel, the different; no other business (with the possible exception of commercialized sports) is so infested with characters who have crawled out of the woodwork to live in rich parasitism on the bodies of talented individuals; no other business tells such extravagant lies about the prices it pays, the salaries it gives, the hardships it endures and the sacrifices it makes for the community; no other business is so chaotically unplanned to meet future contingencies or to anticipate changing public standards and demands; no other business spends so much for propaganda and so little for research into basic needs and defects of the industry; no other business so ruthlessly exploits the young, the ignorant and the emotionally underprivileged, with such bland disregard for the canons of taste and decency; no other business is so impervious to and resentful of even the best intentioned criticism." The article concludes, "There's no business like show business, and it's a good thing there isn't."

The Toledo Drive-In, between Toledo and Sylvania, has resumed, for the third year, it's policy of holding church services every Sunday morning at 8 a.m., under the sponsorship of the Lutheran Men's League of Greater Toledo.

Recent weeks saw a lot of personnel changes along Film Row. After ten years in the exhibition field as owner and manager of theatres in Kenton and Wauseon, Rudy Norton returns to distribution sales; now he is with United Artists, taking over the territory covered by Jack Share, who resigned to take on a less arduous job in another field of endeavor. . . . Virgil Jones has been promoted by Warners from booker here to salesman in the Boston office. But before reporting to his new headquarters, he is taking time out for his marriage to Anne Walker, Columbia office manager and head booker. . . . Lester Dowdell, out of the business the past few months, succeeds Jones at Warners. . . . In another shift, Paul Hartnett resigned as Republic booker. His successor is Tony Reinman, erstwhile with United Artists.

Fess Parker, of Davy Crockett fame, was in town on a personal appearance engagement. In addition to appearing on the RKO Palace stage for two performances, he appeared in the Higbee Company's accessories departments.

From the musicians' convention headquarters in the Statler Hotel, it was learned that a drive to seek the repeal of the 20 per cent cabaret tax has been initiated, and a program is now being worked out for every local to lend its weight to the drive. One of the officials said the union will welcome help from exhibitors, from COMPO, and from anyone who feels the urge or the necessity to wipe this tax off the books because, it is claimed, it has caused great unemployment among musicians.

Lita Stecker, daughter of Sam Stecker, Associated Theatres Circuit, has announced her engagement to Alan Cohen of this city. . . . Funeral services were held last week in Toledo, O., for Miss Matilda Winterhalter, who for some 16 years was connected with the concession stands of the Rivoli and Pantheon. . . . Four Showmen Promoted by SW

PITTSBURGH — Promotion of four Stanley Warner showmen and realignment of theatre districts were announced by M. A. Silver, Pittsburgh area zone chief. The selections are in line with the company's policy of advancement from the ranks and are effective immediately.

In the changes, Henry Burger, advertising director, becomes district manager for the 14 Pittsburgh city houses, the Stanley, downtown, and the deluxe Squirrel Hill art house, Squirrel Hill. A veteran of 21 years' service with the circuit, Burger will continue to serve in an advisory capacity to the advertising department in addition to supervising the in-town theatres. Burger has managed theatres in Pittsburgh and Parkersburg, W. Va., and was district manager for the circuit's Erie territory prior to becoming the advertising-publicity head in 1953.

Phil Katz, Burger's assistant, has moved into the post of advertising-publicity head. Katz has been with the company for 12 years, starting as manager, 375-seat New Oakland, in 1943, and moving in four years to the Enright, largest neighborhood house in America. He was the zone's top showman four years' running and assumed his assistant publicity post in the downtown office the latter part of 1951.

Katz' assistant will be Jules Curley, Haven, Olean, N. Y., a career veteran of 27 years. Along with his managing affiliations, Curley has also been in the advertising departments of the company in Philadelphia and Newark. He is a native of St. Louis.

Byron F. Moore, who had been temporarily overseeing Pittsburgh theatres, in addition to supervising his own 11 Main Line theatres, takes on Stanley Warner houses in Washington, Ambridge, and Donora. Among theatres he will continue to head are Stanley Warner situations in State College, Johnstown, McKeesport, and Greensburg, Pa.

Chicago

Variety Club will hold its annual golf tournament and outing Aug. 12 at St. Andrews Country Club. . . . The Oakland, Oakland, Ill., closed for an indefinite time . . . Adolph Wertheimer, sales head, Radiant Manufacturing Company, returned from a six-week business trip abroad.

An inspiring sight in front of the Granada was the procession of 662 black-robed graduates of Loyola University, filing into the theatre for commencement exercises. . . . Wally Dort was named to the Buena Vista sales staff. . . . Alex Harrison, 20th-Fox western sales manager, visited.

Among industry men serving on the Richard J. Finnegan memorial committee are John Balaban, Tom Flannery, William Hollander, Johnny Jones, Jack Kirsch, Irving Mack, Nat Nathanson, Edwin Silverman, and Manny Smerling. . . . Sylvia Friedlen, B and K purchasing department, cruised in the West Indies on vacation.

Pleased as they were with the patronage from conventioneers attending the International Rotary, theatremen were looking forward to more good boxoffice when Shriners crowd in, beginning July 11, 50,000 strong. . . . Jim O'Riley, Kling Films director, and Cecilia Fox were wed at Holy Name Cathedral.

The big headline in the Balaban and Katz offices was that Virginia, wife of Eddie Seguin, publicity staffer, had presented him with an eight-pound son, Robert, after 15 years of marriage. . . . Winds of tornado proportions leveled the fence at the 67 Drive-In, Jacksonville, Ill. The tower and concessions building escaped damage.

The Balaban brothers have divergent views on the pay-as-you-see television controversy. John, president, Balaban and Katz, is opposed to it. Barney, in New York, who is president, Paramount, leans toward it. . . . Mrs. Cray R. Bell, who had been operating her Pix, Blue Mound, Ill., part time, closed the house.

Lester Stepner, manager, Evanston, which will be reopened July 1, will pay particular attention to youth patronage from the Northshore communities. One night a week will be designated as "Teen-Age Nite" and on Saturdays selected programs will be presented for children's matinees. Reduced admission prices will be adopted for children in certain age groups. The theatre is being modernized.

Dave Davidson, formerly with the B and K press staff, came from Los Angeles to renew acquaintances. . . . Harry R. Davis inherited a half-interest in the building which houses the Majestic, East St. Louis, Ill., left to him by his mother and an aunt. The theatre is leased by Publix Great States. . . . Nate Smith, Chicago truck driver, saw himself in "Mad at the World." Months ago he stopped to watch a local Filmakers take. The director asked him to fill in for a dice shooting scene in an alley. . . . Robert O. Deimel was named Gold Coast manager with Bert Cooper as assistant.

Good news for theatre owners is that convention attendance, 97,445 in June according to the Convention Bureau, will be up 44 per cent above that of the same month last year. Wives go to the movies while their husbands are conventionering. . . . Scenes for the Benny Goodman life story will be made here in July. Gilbert Kurland of U-I scouted the town for sites.

The police censor board finally refused to okeh "Son of Sinbad," after long deliberation. . . . The price of raw popcorn on farms, $1.38 a bushel, is down 10 cents from last year, according to the latest report from the Illinois Cooperative Crop Reporting Service.

Louis Novy, president, Trans-Texas Theatres, Inc., acting for the corporation, purchased the stock interest of William O'Donnell, vice-president and general manager, and Torrance Hudgins, assistant secretary, who have resigned their positions. Novy assumed complete and active control of the company. O'Donnell and Hudgins will announce their plans at a later date. . . . Davy Crockett, in the person of Fess Parker, came to Dallas but could hardly land in the plane at Love Field because of nearly 4,000 youngsters waiting on the ramps. Parker and his co-star, Buddy Ebsen, made five stage appearances during the opening day run. Besides an overcrowded theatre, sevearl downtown department stores were reported to have exhausted their stock of coon-skin caps by the eve of Davy's arrival.

Denver

Paul Campbell, manager, Knox Drive-In, Durango, Colo., has resigned and gone to Texas to take another theatre job. Elsie Knox is managing the drive-in until son Rodney finishes a CinemaScope installation at Monte Vista, Colo., after which he will manage the ozoner. . . . Bill Prass, free lance publicity man, was seeing that Ernest Borgnine, star of "Marty," was kept busy with personal appearances. Prass is now publicizing "Not As A Stranger," which will unwind at the Paramount. . . . Paul Lyday, Fox Inter-Mountain publicity chief, went to Los Angeles to put some interest and life in the National Theatres house organ. During his absence, Alberta Pike will perform the duties of that office.

Independent Exhibitors, Inc., New England, a unit of National Allied, is conducting an extensive membership drive in an effort to sign every independent theatre owner in the five New England states. Edward Lider, president, and Carl Goldman, executive secretary, are making plans to travel up and down the states to contact exhibitors personally on the advantages of joining the organization. In his office, Lider stated, "Only through a strong exhibitor organization can we hope to survive in the face of higher film rentals, fewer pictures, print shortages, adverse legislation, the threat of toll-TV, and other serious ills confronting exhibitors. It is only through one big voice that the little exhibitor can make himself heard." Recent Massachusetts circuits which have joined are the R and W Circuit, owned and operated by Roy Burroughs, including the Strand, Amesbury; the Strand, Belmont; and the Strand, Newburyport; and the Ray Feeley Circuit, including the Fairmont, Hyde Park; the Egleston, Roxbury; the Lexington, Lexington; and the Weymouth, Weymouth.

Joseph G. Cohen is now handling the buying and booking for the Uptown, West Lynn, Mass., owned by Louis Richmond, who also operates the first-run Kenmore, here. . . . Hoodlumism has been rampant in the district lately. Within a period of three weeks six exchanges have been broken into and wrecked. National Theatre Supply Company has been entered twice by thieves, and 20th-Fox, Republic, Allied Artists, Warners, and Keen Advertising have all been forcibly entered. Extra details of police have been put on the film district area.

The winners of the "Gangbusters" managerial contest have been announced by Joseph E. Levine, president, Embassy Pictures Corporation, and Terry Turner, General Tele-Radio, Inc. The six winners in the New England exploitation contest are, alphabetically, Carl Baird, Scenic, Rochester, N. H., for Interstate Theatres; Stephen Barbett, Warner, Lawrence, Mass., for Stanley Warner Theatres; John Blass, Fenway, Boston, for New England Theatres; William S. Canning, Empire, Fall River, Mass., for Yamins Theatres; Arthur Morton, Paramount, Boston, for New England Theatres; and James R. Randall, Palace, Cranston, R. I., for Snider Theatres. Judges for the contest were Turner, Robert A. Schmidt, vice-president, Mutual Broadcasting Company; and Frank Zuzulo, director of press information, MBC. The prizes were awarded on an overall campaign basis. Each winner may select either one of the two trips to Honolulu or one of the four trips to Europe. Each wife will receive a cosmetic and jewelry case; each couple will receive a wrist watch and two pieces of traveling luggage, plus one camera. Carl Baird, the only bachelor winner, has been appointed manager, White River Drive-In, N. H., for Interstate for the summer. Following the successful saturation campaign on "Gangbusters," "Sins Of Pompeii" will be launched by General Tele-Radio throughout the New England area with a similar saturation campaign, with a strong radio and TV backing. This campaign will be in full force during the month of July, according to Turner.

In an effort to get more space for motion picture news in the local newspapers, theatres are negotiating with the publishers of the papers to try to rectify the present situation. Theatre interests are requesting a better representation of motion pictures, pictures of stars, more reviews and interviews with important film personalities in the Sunday papers and in the weekday sheets. As the result of two meetings with top executives of The Boston Globe, which has a morning and afternoon edition daily plus a Sunday edition, the film representation has increased in size with more editorial space devoted to motion pictures and two-column cuts of stars instead of the former one-column cuts.

The new Midway Drive-In for 280 cars is nearing completion in Detroit, Maine, between Pittsfield and Newport, and is scheduled to open late in June. It is owned by Mr. and Mrs. B. L. Superior Court Judge James C. Shannon last week named attorney Michael Radin, Hartford, temporary receiver of the Turnpike Theatre Corporation, operators of the Pike Drive-In, Newington, at the request of Louis B. Rogow. The latter, an officer of the theatre corporation, charged that the other two officers, Philip Simon and Robert Gloth, have exceeded their powers and are guilty of "gross mismanagement" of the corporate funds. Under the judge's order, Radin will take possession of the company books and take steps to collect all monies owed by the corporation. Rogow claimed the firm is solvent at present, but added that mishandling of monies by his two partners indicates danger of waste. A hearing will be held later for the purpose of appointing an appraisal committee to determine the sales price of the theatre, if this becomes necessary.

New Refrigeration Code Means More Air-Conditioning

NEW YORK — The out-dated city refrigeration code, adapted in 1927, which prevents many theatres and other public places from installing efficient air-conditioning equipment, may soon be replaced with a modern code covering new types of cooling systems and eliminating the requirement to hire union operators to superintend air-conditioning units in small places.

A bill introduced to the City Council by majority leader Joseph T. Sharkey has received the full support of fire commissioner Edward F. Cavanaugh, Jr., and is backed by the Commerce and Industry Association, Arnold Witte, manager. The bill would delete sections of the present code, enacted when refrigerants were poisonous and explosive, requiring a union operator for equipment using more than 50 pounds of refrigerant, which has cost business men up to $10,000 annually for salaries, and has prevented wider installation of commercial air-conditioning. New equipment uses harmless chemicals, and has foolproof safety devices; the proposed code would require an operator to tend only old units.

A novel setting was chosen for the local preview of United Artists' prize-winning "Marty," the patio of Neil Hellman's new Town House. Viewers were guests staying at the beautiful motor court, and representatives of press, radio, and television, numbering in all about 150. The idea was to obtain an accurate cross-section of opinion on a slightly off-beat film in an establishment patronized by business men, salesmen, and others from various sections of the country, instead of from the groups regularly attending the local houses. The Hellman interests, which also own and operate theatres, including three drive-ins, were said to be hopeful of arranging motel previews with other major distributors. John Turner, UA district manager, and Stanley Kositsky, Albany-Buffalo manager, approved the "Marty" screening, Film Row heard. While favorable comments were heard on the fresh approach to previewing and exploitation, unfavorable reactions, in the theatre field, were also noted. A brief story on the preview in a newspaper did not cause any huzzahs at the Strand, which had the picture booked for a first-run showing.

The quintet were quizzed, and photographed, at annual Variety Club golf tournament.

An anti-trust action against Schine Chain Theatres, Inc., and the eight major distributors was begun by Smalley Chain Theatres, Inc., and Smalley Johnstown Theatre Corporation, for treble damages of $1,500,000. The complaint was filed in United States District Court, Utica, by Leonard L. Rosenthal, attorney for plaintiffs, alleging that the defendants have restrained commerce in the distribution and exhibition of films in violation of the law, citing the Paramount case and the Schine consent judgment. Specifically, the complaint alleged that the combinations and conspiracies of the defendants have deprived the plaintiffs of the film product of the producer and distributor defendants for its Smalley Theatre, Johnstown, and that they have consequently sustained losses on the theatre. The Smalley interests, headed by Mrs. Hazel Smalley, widow of William C. Smalley, long-time competitor of the Schine brothers, operate nine upstate situations. They brought a $2,250,000 anti-trust suit last summer against four Schine corporations and the major distributors, involving Smalley's Norwich theatre, which is pending.

Buffalo

Albert C. Behling, 75, died unexpectedly at his summer home, Rose Hill, Ontario, Canada. Behling and his wife, the former Lydia J. Weber, owned and operated the Ellen Terry, Grant, and Potomac, and formerly the Fillmore Palace and Sylvia on Fillmore Avenue. He was a member of Tent 7, Variety Club of Buffalo, and Ismailia Temple, Nobles of the Mystic Shrine. Besides his wife, he is survived by a sister. The Behlings recently celebrated their 28th anniversary as owners of the Ellen Terry.

"The Seven Little Foys," which is coming to the Paramount on July 1, got some splendid plugs in several large Penney store ads last week; Bob Hope's selection by the Penney stores as "Father of the Year" was tied in with the local showing of the picture. The theatre, in return, used a poster in lobby calling attention to the Penney angle.

Mrs. Elmer F. Lux, wife of the head of Elmart Theatres, and Buffalo Common Council president, has been endorsed by the 23rd Ward Democratic Committee for the post of councilman-at-large. Mrs. Lux last month was elected president of the Democratic Club of 1,000 Women. Political observers recall that at least one woman has run, unsuccessfully, for a council seat, but none has ever been endorsed by a major party.

Utica

The Stanley Warner Avon, managed by Mrs. Ottilie Fearing, closed for two weeks, during which the staff took vacations and minor renovations were made. . . . Mayor Boyd Golder was among those attending a recent preview of "The Private War of Major Benson," at the Stanley. Exhibitors also were present, along with U-I's Albany manager, Norman Weitman, and U-I salesman Gene Lowe. . . . Morris Klein, operator, Hi-Way Drive-In, Coxsackie, and Mountain Drive-In, Hunter, received a bachelor of science degree from the Albany College of Pharmacy, and a certificate of membership in the New York State Pharmaceutical Association.

Censorship Snaps Back In House Resurrection Bill

HARRISBURG, PA. — The House last week approved and sent to the Senate a bill to give the Pennsylvania State Board of Censors the authority to ban films it considers "obscene."

The legislation, resulting from a U. S. Supreme Court decision which said such State agencies can not disapprove films, gives the Pennsylvania Board the right to reject any scenes it considers "obscene or incites to crimes of violence, or advocates the use of narcotics or habit-forming drugs."

Theatre Installations and Maintenance

RKO-KEITH'S — Jerry Baker, managing director, managed to capitalize on street ballyhoo in connection with U-I's "Revenge of the Creature," in 3-D Horrorscope. Baker promoted a medical display, complete with receiving table and instruments, from the A. S. Aloe Company, and dressed a girl up like a nurse. The nurse gave out envelopes imprinted with playdate copy, containing fainting pills. A sign in front of the display read: "If you feel like you are going to faint while seeing 'Revenge of the Creature,' our nurse will be on duty to serve you."

Edge Moor

Dan Cudone's Edge Moor cooperated with the Edge Moor Gardens Civic Association in providing a theatre party and refreshments free to children of Edge Moor Gardens and Edge Moor Terrace. The program included a western feature and five cartoons.

Wilmington

Two theatres are affected by the establishment of a new central office by the Diamond State Telephone Company to serve its customers in part of suburban Wilmington. They are the Crest, Woodcrest, where the new telephone number is WYman 4-3371, and the Pleasant Hill Drive-In, now WYman 4-4212. Numbers on the new WYman exchange are reached from Hockessin, Holly Oak, New Castle, and Wilmington telephones by dialing 99, and then the five figures of the number.

Trust Suit Filed For Midway, Allentown

ALLENTOWN, PA.—Irving Rossheim, Midway, filed an anti-trust suit last fortnight in U. S. District Court against other area exhibitors and the major distributors charging conspiracy to deprive him of product. Rossheim had leased the theatre to John Scully, but had re-acquired it some time ago. The theatre figured in a $100,000 general alarm fire recently.

in and the building contractor last month by Mr. and Mrs. Clarence H. Reinhold, who operate a farm in East Hempfield Township. The suit charged that the By-Pass Theatres, Inc., and Martin Brothers, contractors, had built a ditch for a storm drainage pipe across their land to a stream. They demand that the pipe be removed and their property restored to pastureland. Their allegations were denied. The case was scheduled for argument in Argument Court on June 20, two days before the scheduled opening of the drive-in.

Norristown

The Sablosky interests, operating the Norris, finally obtained from Buena Vista Film Distributing Company, Inc., playdates on "Davy Crockett, King of the Wild Frontier," but not before they rushed into U. S. District Court and filed an action demanding that the Disney distribution subsidiary be ordered to furnish them with the picture. The Honorable Judge Lord granted leave to the plaintiffs to take depositions of defendant's employees within 20 days of commencement of the action and set June 21 as the date for a hearing on the plaintiff's motion for a preliminary injunction. However, the entire matter was finally settled out of court and the Norris gets "Davy."

Reading

The Astor, J. Lester Stallman, manager, drew a surprisingly big attendance at the opening of its Reading Gas Company cooking school. This was the most ambitious cooking school ever attempted in a theatre here, with about 40 merchants and business concerns cooperating with the theatres and the gas company. The lobby display of kitchen and other household appliances, most of them gas-operated, was enormous, and attracted large numbers of women.

Manager Al Plough, SW Stanton, Philadelphia, recently utilized a current newspaper story to plug Filmakers' "Mad At The World." A blow-up of the clipping on a 40 by 60 sidewalk frame did the trick. That's Plough standing beside the sign.

The Colonial front was dolled up by manager Diem with bamboo and tropical effects for its run of "Naked Amazon." Diem tied in with Pomeroy, Inc., a big department store, for display advertising of aquarium fish and fauna from the tropics, as shown in the picture. An acquarium was awarded to a gold fish fan through the distribution of free tickets by the store and the theatre.

Official records kept by Paul E. Glase, manager, Embassy, and other Fabian interests, show that Walter Hampden, stage and screen star who died recently, appeared here in person six times, first in 1909 in "Servant in the House," with Tyrone Power, Sr. In 1920 he filled a two-day engagement in Shakespearean plays here. His next appearances were in 1932, 1933, and 1934, the last in the Capitol, which is now a furniture store.

Miss Pegi Stallman, daughter of J. Lester Stallman, manager Schad interests, and Mrs. Stallman was graduated with high honors from Goucher College. She received a bachelor of arts degree, was secretary of her class, and received the Wall Street Journal prize for excellence in studies of corporate finance. She received also a fellowship from Goucher, and will begin post-graduate studies in the fall.

Lewis G. Yost, projectionist, Astor, and president of the Central Labor Union, Berks County, endorsed a proposal, now being pressed by many welfare organizations, to provide more public swimming pools for children, and adults as well, in densely populated parts of the city.

The Clarabelle Saturday morning shows at Loew's Colonial, Bob Diem, manager, and at the Assembly, Paul E. Glase, manager, attracted large crowds of children at both houses. Many business houses, stores and supply firms tied in with the management to sponsor the shows and to furnish souvenirs and refreshments of many kinds for the youngsters. A big bill of cartoons was screened at each theatre.

Local 93, International Ladies Garment Workers Union, staged a benefit show, to help the March of Dimes fund. . . . Continuous wet and cold weather hurt early June records in theatre attendance, as well as at baseball and other events. . . . Theatre managers are getting an influx of applications for jobs from 1955 school grads.

"INTERRUPTED MELODY"

Awaits Your Showmanship Presentation To The Public Who Has Heard So Much About It!

A RARE OPPORTUNITY!

When a picture of the rare calibre of "INTERRUPTED MELODY" is preceded by enthusiastic penetration, it is indeed a rich opportunity for live-wire showmanship. Here is just part of the acclaim:

"Best Picture"—(LIFE, REDBOOK, COSMOPOLITAN) • Nationwide TV presentation on "THIS IS YOUR LIFE" • Nationally syndicated columnists: "One of the screen's great movies"—Louella Parsons • "A wonderful love story"—Hedda Hopper • "A great motion picture"—Sheilah Graham • Advertised and promoted in a giant M-G-M campaign.

Until you see this enthralling picture for yourself you cannot know the entertainment thrill that awaits your patrons.

With "Blackboard Jungle" continuing its meteoric box-office career, with "Love Me Or Leave Me" packing theatres everywhere, M-G-M is indeed happy to add another outstanding entertainment to the screens of America.

M-G-M Presents In CinemaScope • "INTERRUPTED MELODY" starring GLENN FORD ELEANOR PARKER • With Roger Moore • Cecil Kellaway • Written by William Ludwig and Sonya Levien • Based On Her Life Story by Marjorie Lawrence • Photographed in Eastman Color • Directed by Curtis Bernhardt • Produced by Jack Cummings

YOU'RE DAMNED IF YOU DO, AND . . .

While Eric Johnston's "We'll make 'em our way!" speeches are just dandy, and may need to be said in order to save the production fraternity from complete domination from the Legion of Decency and a dozen or more other pressure groups, the exhibition fraternity must wonder who is going to make the speech that saves them from the militant clergymen, organized boycotts, picketing patriotic and social groups, and even overemphasis on police and fire inspections at the local level? All of these latter have been used in the past and, whether legally or illegally, they hurt just as much.

The average theatreman finds himself in the unenviable position of being repeatedly spanked for something over which he has no control.

Oh, sure! He can refuse to play any picture which the Legion, or some other pressure group, condemn. If they don't condemn too many, he can possibly still operate without loss. But, in these days of an uncertain and scarce supply of film entertainment, should one or more groups condemn a total of even as many as 15 or 20 in any one year, he will be choked to economic death.

So it could be that the average theatreman will find himself in the same position as the martyrs of old. Not guilty of harming anyone, they had their choice of the Coliseum full of lions in front, or the spears of the Centurians in back. Also, not guilty of producing a single picture, the theatreman may have his choice of the probable economic ruin resulting from playing condemned pictures, or the certain economic ruin resulting from playing no pictures.

Should open warfare eventuate from the present skirmishes between the Production Code Authority and the Legion of Decency, the theatres of the nation will be the unwilling battlefield that will remain scarred and torn long after the eventual victor, and the vanquished, will have marched away.

We are afraid that this industry needs more than a speech. And more than an east coast re-editing service, however reachable the "specialist."

BEST STORY OF THE WEEK

Where he gets them we don't know, but that glib peddler of Universal-International pictures, Pete Rosian, can usually be relied on for the most industry-wise humorous stories that you'll hear in a month of Sundays.

Latest in his repertoire deals with the theatre owner who was caught "bicycling" prints of a serial over the mountain trail from his A Theatre in one valley to his B Theatre in the other. Submitting to Arbitration, he adopted a pose of righteous indignation and based his successful defense on the fact that no other vehicle could navigate the goat track, and that he didn't own a bicycle. Discharged for lack of positive proof, he was told to "keep his nose clean" for he was going to be checked in the future.

Leaving the Arbitration Board, he went directly to the film exchange that had preferred the charges and said he didn't want any bad feelings to result; that they had been wrong, for he was an honest man who never stooped to chicanery of any kind, and always played his cards face up and on top of the table for all to see; but that he harbored no grudge, and to prove it he was willing to buy the serial for the second house—"starting with Episode 7!"

If you let him, Pete will convince you that this actually happened "in a little situation up-state." But he never specifies what state!

Business Better After Slump

NEW YORK—Radio City Music Hall, the Roxy, the Astor, and Loew's State lead the Broadway hit parade over the week-end, with most of the other houses trying to pull out of serious slump.

According to usually reliable sources reaching MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR, the breakdown was as follows:

"The Sea Chase" (Warners). Paramount anticipated the third week at $29,000.

"Lady And The Tramp" (Disney-Buena Vista). Roxy claimed $58,000 for Friday through Sunday, with $88,000 expected on the opening week.

"Love Me Or Leave Me" (MGM). Radio City Music Hall, with stage show, reported $89,500 for Thursday through Sunday, with the fifth week okeh at $143,000.

"Chicago Syndicate" (Columbia). Criterion opened to a $16,000 first week.

"Davy Crockett, King Of The Wild Frontier" (Disney-Buena Vista). Globe claimed this would hit $10,000 on the fifth week.

"The Purple Mask" (U-I). Victoria anticipated $9,000 for the second week.

"Summertime" (UA). Astor opening was heading toward a $55,000 week.

"This Island Earth" (U-I). Victoria dropped to $18,500 on the second week.

"The Prodigal" (MGM). Capitol was down to $10,000 on the seventh, and last, week.

"The Seven Year Itch" (20th-Fox). Loew's State expected the third session to hit $42,000.

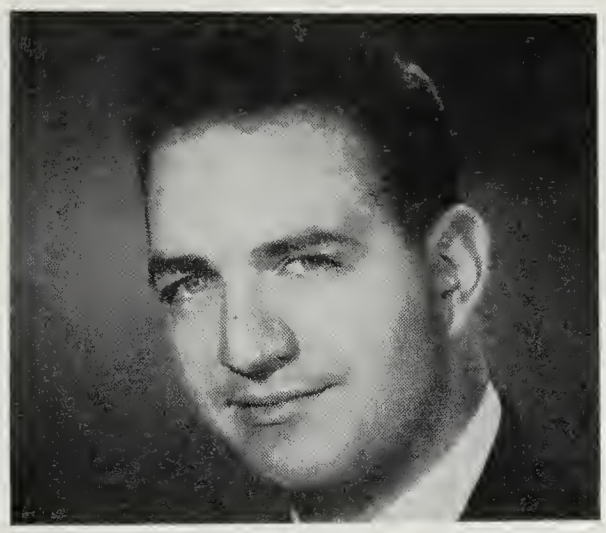
TOA Offers No-Royalty Music

NEW YORK—The Theatre Owners of America bulletin revealed last week that a special package of music in the public domain, especially suitable for use in theatres, without royalty and performance payments, is being offered to the membership of the organization.

The set-up includes 10 45 rpm. unbreakable records with a total of 20 selections, available immediately to all members at the wholesale price of $6. The bulletin stressed that no license fee of any kind is required in using the records.

RKO Ups Three

NEW YORK—Walter Branson, RKO worldwide general sales manager, announced last week the promotion of three home office employes long associated with RKO's foreign operations. Arthur Herskovitz has been designated manager of Peru. As sales assistants to Edwin J. Smith, Jr., assistant foreign sales manager, appointments have been made as follows, Melvin Danheiser, in charge of Latin America, the Far East and Australasia, and Milford I. Rydell, in charge of the United Kingdom and Europe.



Martin S. Davis has been appointed to the new post of eastern advertising and publicity manager for Allied Artists, according to a recent announcement by John C. Flinn, national publicity and advertising director.

NEW YORK
By Mel Konecoff

TIMES SQUARE was once again treated to hulabaloo, music, girls in costume and partially out of costume, attractive floats, and all the attendant activities that go into the launching of the Summer Movie Festival by Loew's Theatres.

KONECOFF

Lunch time crowds were treated to seeing movie starlet Jarma Lewis, featured in MGM's "The Cobweb," man one of the colorful floats in the caravan that was to tour the theatres in the circuit and the city in general. She was surrounded by pretty models in appropriate costume who will ride the floats, and newspaper fotogs had a fine time recording all this for posterity as well as their papers.

Ernie Emerling and Carl Fishman and staff put in some hard work to make the event the success that it was.

BITS AND TRIVIA: RKO press agent thought you would be interested in the fact that Virginia Mayo was off to St. Louis for a week-long celebration in honor of her latest film "Pearl Of The South Pacific," which opened June 28. . . . Also that Dick Powell moved over 120 tons of sand, 80 tons of rock, and three 10-ton trailer-truckloads of desert greenery for his "The Conqueror" (we could use some of that greenery if he wants to ship it prepaid). . . . Also a "panung" is not a sneeze but "a sarong with a built-in leer" in which Virginia Mayo cavorts in "Pearl Of The South Pacific." . . . Also, he who said "all that glitters is not gold" was right, because in one scene in "Treasure Of Pancho Villa" gold coins are supposed to spill from a ripped bag and director George Sherman decided that shiny Mexican 20 centavo pieces would double nicely. He ordered $3,000 worth. Shows you, you can't trust nobody. . . . Also, Virginia Mayo would wear an

Producers Rapped For Silence On Toll-TV

Starr And Rembusch Charge Paramount Controls MPAA; Asks Reasons Why Comment Was Not Filed With FCC

WASHINGTON — Following a two-day policy meeting last week of the Committee against Pay-As-You-See TV at the offices of the organization's general counsel, Cohn and Marks, co-chairmen Alfred Starr and Trueman T. Rembusch issued a joint statement assailing Hollywood producers for their failure to file comments with the Federal Communications Commission stating their position on proposals pending before that body for approval of subscription television.

The statement pointed out that the FCC specifically requested comments from "all interested parties" in connection with its examination of the question of toll-TV, and that information about the role to be played by the film industry in the event of approval was particularly requested by the commission.

The co-chairmen cited the silence of the Motion Picture Association of America, the producers' own organization, as "utterly fantastic," and said that exhibition is entitled to an explanation of the reasons why production has chosen to stand aloof. They charged that the inescapable conclusion to be reached by exhibitors is that Paramount, a proponent of toll-TV, dominates the MPAA. The exhibitor spokesmen noted that film produced today for theatres, most of it in the new processes, is unsuitable for television because of technical problems, and that the only possibility of profit for production in the toll-TV proposal to show first-run pictures in the home would lie in a plot among producers to design a product not suitable for theatres.

Turning to distribution, the statement discussed current litigation in Federal Courts over matters primarily involving run and clearance. "It is obvious," the exhibitors said, "that any . . . system that contemplates licensing first-run motion pictures to Pay-To-See-TV will find itself the target . . . of endless litigation." They pointed out that Paramount, through Telemeter, would once again become both producer and exhibitor which, "in an historic decree," is a double function prohibited by law.

Starr and Rembusch closed their comments with the observation that the motion picture industry is unique in that it is the only industry in which "suppliers of product have consistently shown such blatant disregard for the welfare" of the consumer.

MPAA Seeks New Bill To Kill Kansas Censorship

NEW YORK—A new bill seeking to abolish film censorship in Kansas will be sought by the Motion Picture Association of America, it was announced last week by a spokesman, who expressed disappointment that the Kansas Supreme Court recently ruled unconstitutional, on a technicality, a 1955 law which would have abolished the censorship this month.

Netter Joins Todd-AO

NEW YORK—L. Douglas Netter, Jr., has been named vice-president, Todd-AO, theatre equipment division, according to an announcement last week by president Henry S. Woodbridge. His resignation as sales manager, Altec Service Corporation, which he joined in 1947, and where he inaugurated sales promotion drives which spearheaded CinemaScope installations in several thousand houses, was confirmed by Harry M. MGM Enters TV Field With Half-Hour Show

NEW YORK—MGM has entered the television field. This announcement was made last week by Nicholas M. Schenck, president, Loew's, Inc., which is the parent company producing MGM pictures.

An agreement has been signed with the American Broadcasting Company whereby the MGM studios will present a weekly half-hour program entitled "The MGM Parade." It will start in the fall.

Schenck made the following statement: "Here at MGM we have made a study of television and have in mind the point-of-view of motion picture exhibitors. We are now evolving a type of program which will be good popular entertainment and will serve the mutual interests of our customers and ourselves. A portion . . . will be devoted to information about the studio's forthcoming pictures to be played exclusively in motion picture theatres."

Leonard H. Goldenson, president, American Broadcasting-Paramount Theatres, Inc., which is the holding company of which ABC is a division, made the following comment, "The entrance of MGM into television marks an advance in the motion picture as well as the television industry. MGM will bring to television, I am sure, an outstanding program consistent with its reputation. By devoting a portion of each program to exciting behind-the-scenes stories on forthcoming MGM pictures, the public's interest will be stimulated to see these pictures in motion picture theatres. We are looking forward with enthusiasm to the advent of MGM on the ABC-TV network."

Public Wants Movie News

NEW YORK—The 46th in the series of COMPO ads in Editor and Publisher publicizes a letter received by COMPO from Norman Shavin, feature and Sunday editor, Jackson (Miss.) State Times, in which he says the paper gives movies the full treatment because "we think newspaper readers want it that way. We give movies the full treatment—something which is not done anywhere else in this state. We feel people are devoted to their theatres and interested in the folk that occupy stages, screens, and managers' offices."

U-I Income Rises

NEW YORK—Universal Pictures Company, Inc., and subsidiary companies report earnings for the 26 weeks ending April 30, 1955, of $2,014,960 after providing $1,830,000 for Federal taxes on income. After dividends on the preferred stock, this is equivalent to $1.87 per share on the 1,015,709 shares of common stock outstanding in the hands of the public at April 30, 1955. For the 26 weeks ending May 1, 1954, earnings were $1,721,063 after providing $1,845,000 for Federal taxes on income, equivalent to $1.57 per share.

Film Role In Juvenile Behavior Assailed, Defended At Hearings

HOLLYWOOD—A Senate judiciary subcommittee investigating juvenile delinquency, headed by Senator Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.), last fortnight held hearings on the adequacy of the industry's advertising and production codes as they affect juvenile behavior. Following testimony from executives of the Motion Picture Association of America, who defended the codes and maintained they are strictly adhered to, committee members heard a vigorous attack on producers in hour-long testimony by William H. Mooring, who described himself as film and television editor, "Tidings," the local Catholic Archdiocesan weekly which, he said, is nationally syndicated.

Mooring paid high tribute to the Production Code and its administrator Geoffrey Shurlock, but he said that code enforcement during the last two years has been relaxed to allow some material approaching obscenity to pass inspection. The editor named films containing what he termed "injurious material," including "Blackboard Jungle," "Cell 2455, Death Row," "East Of Eden," and "Son Of Sinbad," among others. We went back to "Johnny Belinda," attributing to that picture the probable effect on a named individual, who committed murder after viewing it. Mooring suggested that competition resulting from television, which is not regulated by restraints like that of the code, has prompted producers to offer films of violence and brutality. Questioned by Kefauver, he explained that the television code lacks an administration to enforce it, and that it is therefore ignored. Equivalent TV standards, they agreed, might eliminate the problem.

Ronald Reagan, representing the Screen Actors Guild, pointed out that a certain amount of violence is inherent in action films designed to prove the superiority of right over wrong, which portray both to dramatize the contrast. The actor took a strong stand against external censorship, and said that he feels current protests about film content are not deeply founded.

Fred J. Hacker, a psychiatrist, followed on the witness stand, accusing "social-scapegoat-ism" of trying to blame juvenile delinquency on whatever cause, no matter how remote, that is readily available. He asserted that media of communication have only a "trigger" role in unstable cases, and are not causes in themselves.

Later testimony from Dore Schary, MGM; Y. Frank Freeman, Paramount; Jack L. Warner, Jerry Wald, Harry Joe Brown, and George Murphy upheld the motion picture industry as wielding a beneficial influence on behavior. Schary defended "Blackboard Jungle" as an important report on a serious condition, which he regards as a function of the industry, and said that that film should "insulate" against, rather than provoke, juvenile crime. Freeman described professional industryites as "honest citizens, working for the common good," and Warner blamed the history of the last 30 years, starting with Prohibition, for current juvenile problems. The Production Code, Warner said, is doing a monumental job.

Wald maintained that "Johnny Belinda" served to make the deaf mute problem understandable around the world, but admitted that violence plays too big a role in current product. Brown, testifying about Westerns in general, said that children who watch them invariably associate themselves with the right, or the hero's, side. Murphy, in turn, related to the Senators his observations and experiences during a tour across the country as head of the MGM public relations department.

Oklahoma Allied, TOA Units Merge In First Such Action

OKLAHOMA CITY—A merger was effected last week of the TOA-affiliated Theatre Owners of Oklahoma and Allied Theatre Owners of Oklahoma, a National Allied affiliate, into United Theatre Owners of Oklahoma, which was the first of its kind. It was not determined, however, whether or not the new UTO, with a membership of 200 to 250, will affiliate with one or the other of the national organizations. Plans now call for UTO delegates to attend national conventions of both groups and to decide on action immediately following.

Officers elected in the new organization are Ed Thorne, Oklahoma City, president; Bernard McKenna, Jr., Norman, vice-president; Claude F. Motley, Oklahoma City, treasurer, and Earl Snyder, Jr., Tulsa, board chairman.

The 39 directors of the two original groups will continue to serve as UTO directors until the first annual convention.

Schwalberg Appoints Two

NEW YORK—Monroe R. Goodman, who recently resigned from Paramount distribution after 25 years' service, last week assumed new duties as vice-president, Artists-Producers Associates, it was announced by Alfred W. Schwalberg, president, with whom he will work on all policy matters for the new company. Schwalberg later announced the appointment of Maybelle Oldenhage, formerly contract manager, Lopert Film Productions, to the post of contract department manager.

Academy Elects Seton

HOLLYWOOD—George Seton was elected president, Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, last fortnight at the initial meeting of the new board of governors, succeeding Charles Brackett.

Other officers elected by the newly-instated board are Samuel G. Engel, first vice-president; Edward B. Powell, secretary; Hal Elias, assistant secretary; John O. Aalberg, treasurer; Jacob H. Karp, assistant treasurer, and Mrs. Margaret Herrick, executive director.

VC Representives Named By Hoover

PHILADELPHIA—International Variety Club chief barker George C. Hoover, Miami, Fla., last week announced the reorganization of the crew of international representatives.

Murray Weiss, Boston, will be international representative for tents in Boston, Buffalo, Toronto, Canada, Albany, Detroit, and Grand Rapids, Ia.; Ralph Preis, Philadelphia, will be international representative of Zone 2, and will represent New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Md., Washington, Pittsburgh, and Cleveland; Zone 3 will be headed by John Jones, Chicago, including Chicago, Indianapolis, Milwaukee, Cincinnati, and Dayton, O.; Bob Hoff, Omaha, heads Zone 4, with his representation including the tents in Omaha, Des Moines, St. Louis, Minneapolis, and Denver; Zone 5 is represented by C. A. Dolson, Dallas, with tents located in Dallas, Houston, Tex., Memphis, Oklahoma City, and New Orleans; E. A. Whitaker, Atlanta, a new appointment to the board of international representatives, heads Zone 6, which includes Charlotte, Jacksonville, Atlanta, and Miami, Fla.; and Al Grubstick, San Francisco, will handle Zone 7. His tents are San Francisco, Los Angeles, Salt Lake City, Las Vegas, and Seattle.

Rotus Harvey, San Francisco, has been reappointed to the position of international representative at large.

RKO Launches Four

HOLLYWOOD—Marking the highest production activity at RKO for the past three years, four major productions for RKO release will go before the cameras in the month of July, C. J. Tevlin, vice-president in charge of studio operations, announced last week.

Three films which will start July 6 are the David Butler production, "Glory," starring Margaret O'Brien, Charlotte Greenwood, Arthur Hunnicutt, John Lupton, and Bryon Palmer, to be directed by Butler and filmed in Superscope and Technicolor; Todon Productions' "The Way Out," starring Gene Nelson and Mona Freeman, to be directed by Montgomery Tully; and Benedict Bogeaus Productions' "Counterfeit," starring Barbara Stanwyck, to be filmed in Superscope and Technicolor and directed by Kurt Neumann. The fourth RKO release, to start July 11, is Edmund Grainger Productions' "Great Day In The Morning," to be filmed in Superscope and Technicolor.

Cinerama Consolidates

NEW YORK—Hazard E. Reeves, president, Cinerama, Inc., equipment producing firm for the film process, announced last week the acquisition of Vitarama Corporation, Cinerama patent licensing company. "The move is a step in consolidating Cinerama operations and simplifying corporate structure," Reeves said.

"A careful study of all Vitarama patents will be undertaken, including those unrelated to Cinerama. We expect to continue to further develop the Cinerama process through the Vitarama Corporation," he declared.

Odeon Prize Winners Share Cash Awards

TORONTO—Imagination, ingenuity, and initiative paid off for Wannie Tyers, manager, Hyland, Toronto, in Operation 26, The Odeon Better Management Contest, as he steamed into first place in league "A" of the contest to win a $350 prize. The end of the 26-week cruise also gave a prize of $200 to Frank Lawson, Danforth, Toronto, while Barry Carnon, Fairlawn, Toronto, won third prize of $125.

Toronto District Theatres swept the "League "A" prizes in the contest which saw awards made also to the assistant manager, such as G. Spratley, now manager, Odeon, Guelph; F. Kennedy, G. C. Jones, and D. G. Robertson.

One effect of the contest was a big boost in sales in the confection operations of the circuit, with Bill Britt, Roxy, Newmarket, winning first prize of $300 in League "B" for confectionery sales. Willard Fawcett, McCarthy, Belleville, and Jim MacLaggan, Strand, Sydney Mines, received second prize of $175 and third prize of $100, respectively. Assistant manager's prize of $40 went to T. Kerwin.

Part of the contest was theatre operation and maintenance with, you guessed it, a woman taking first place, but sharing the position with a man. Ann Thompson, Park, Vancouver, earned herself a prize of $150 when she tied with Bob Fraser, Odeon, West Vancouver, who receives a like amount. Marcel Desjardins, Rex, St. Jerome, won third prize, while R. Gagnon won the assistant manager's prize of $20.

League "D," described by executive officer in charge of the contest James Hardiman as the highest proportionate standing in all leagues combined, was topped by Frank Lawson, Toronton-Danforth, who puts away first prize of $400, with an additional $150 for his crew. Frank Haylett, Toronto-Humber, pocketed $225 for second position, as well as $100 for his staff. The Montreal flagship, the Champlain, skippered by J. P. Legris, captured third prize of $150 and an additional $75 for his staff. Assistant managers' prizes were awarded to G. Spratley, G. Jones, K. Roberts, and J. A. Fortin.

A District Managers' League was headed by supervisor Chris Holmes for a reward of $350, followed closely by G. A. Sutherland, B. C. district manager, and A. P. Bahen, Montreal district manager.

Canadian Comment

The British Columbia Exhibitors Association is establishing a committee to look into the matter of shortening clearances, speeding up of film playoffs, and the working out of zoning problems. This followed a resolution by Owen Bird, Port Moody and Ladner, and D. MacFarlane, Vancouver. The committee will first study a report on how the controversial matters function in Toronto, it was decided by the new executive headed by Owen Bird. The annual meeting of the association also discussed the matters of amusement tax, bingo, unfair 16mm. competition, exorbitant rentals, Capac fees, creation of a booking and buying committee to discuss abuses with the distributors, and the MPICC public relations institute proposal. Other members of the executive include Max Chechik, Gerry Sutherland, and Earl Hayter, all of Vancouver, while the members of the executive board include P. Gauthier, Quesnel; M. McLeod, Powell River; F. Walsh, Vancouver; Frank Soltice, Penticton; and Frank Gow, Vancouver.

Work by exhibitors' associations to have the amusement taxes lowered is having its effect, slowly but surely, with the province of Nova Scotia falling into line. The reduction, effective June 20, sees the tax of five cents on tickets costing from 26 cents to 55 cents extended to tickets to 70 cents, representing a reduction at the top of six per cent, from 18 per cent to 12 per cent. The rest of the amusement tax reduction remains undisturbed. The last change in the province was effective in 1951.

UA Release In Every Theatre Set As Goal Of July 1-7 Observance

NEW YORK—United Artists Week, aimed at placing a UA release in every theatre in the United States and Canada, will be observed July 1-7, it was announced last week by William J. Heineman, United Artists vice-president in charge of distribution.

The celebration of UA Week, which climaxes months of intensive preparation involving every division, district, and branch, will launch the booking program for the greatest lineup of top quality product in United Artists history.

The campaign, designed to present at least one UA feature on each of America's 16,000 movie screens, highlights the company's rise this year into the front rank of the industry's major organizations. Backing the wide variety of films that will be shown during UA Week and throughout the year is a record advertising-publicity-exploitation budget of $6,000,000.

Enthusiastic support for the UA Week effort is indicated by thousands of pledge cards sent in by exhibitors and circuit heads throughout the United States and Canada.

To carry the United Artists Week story to the public, a variety of special theatre accessories have been prepared, including banners, posters, marquee decorations and window cards.

Heineman Reports On Business Abroad

NEW YORK—The supply of top-quality pictures in the past months, together with prospects for the future, will assist United Artists in boosting its foreign grosses over those of last year by at least 40 per cent, it was predicted by William J. Heineman, domestic distribution vice-president, when he returned last week from two months spent in Europe. The UA world wide sales gross for 1954 was well over $43 million.

According to Heineman, exhibition business, as evidenced by crowds waiting at boxoffices, "is very good" throughout western Europe and parts of Austria. He attributed the favorable situation to top attractions such as "Limelight," "Marty," and "The Barefoot Contessa," and declared that while theatremen in Europe are prosperous, they are demanding more good comedies because there is a particular lack of such films, and those currently on the market do top business. The UA executive asserted that he found people and industry prosperous wherever he went on the continent, including production and exhibition. The film industry he found to be looking forward to a healthy future and to be seeking a global market for its product.

Asked to comment on United Artists' domestic business, Heineman said that the current New York engagement of "Marty," in its eleventh week at the Sutton, may pay off negative costs of the Cannes prize-winning Hecht-Lancaster production, the find rental of 10 weeks having been $100,000. Representatives of the producers stated earlier that the production cost was somewhere over $300,000. Correspondingly high grosses have been recorded in other situations playing the film.

Samuel J. Briskin, producer, Paramount's "Strategic Air Command," recently received Southern California Motion Picture Council citation hailing the film "a picture of outstanding merit and entertainment of the highest order." Mrs. William A. Burk, Council president, made the presentation at a luncheon of the group which has 46 affiliated national organizations.

AA Executives Meet On Upcoming Product

NEW YORK—A two-day meeting of Allied Artists sales executives, called by Morey R. Goldstein, vice-president and general sales manager, to discuss policies on four upcoming releases, was held last week.

The films involved are two CinemaScope productions, "Wichita" and "The Warriors," "The Body Snatchers," starring Kevin McCarthy and Dana Wynter, and "The Phenix City Story," with Richard Kiley, Kathryn Grant, and John McIntire in the top roles.

Those attending the sessions at which Goldstein presided were Edward Morey and Arthur Crown, vice-presidents; William F. (Bill) Rodgers, who serves the company as a special consultant; L. E. Goldhammer, eastern division sales manager; James Prichard, southern division sales manager; Nat Nathanson, midwestern district sales manager; Arthur Greenblatt, special sales representative; Manny Goodman, eastern contract department; D. V. (Doug) Rosen, general manager, Allied Artists Pictures of Canada, Ltd. and International Film Distributors, Ltd.; and Jack Bernstein, manager, Toronto office.

At Columbia International's New York home office, Ernesto Rufino, center, Philippine exhibitor, was greeted recently by Michael Bergher, Far East supervisor; and Lacy Kastner, president.

Ohio Censor Hassle Causes Senate Walkout

COLUMBUS, O.—Displeased with demands from pressure groups for early action on a film censorship bill, Ohio Senate education committee chairman Charles A. Mosher last week adjourned hearings on the measure and said that there would be resumption when an orderly procedure can be arrived at. Efforts of Senate minority leader Joseph W. Bartunek to proceed after Mosher walked out were unsuccessful.

Mosher previously declared that he would ask Governor Frank Lausche and chief film censor R. M. Eyman to investigate a collection of some "pornographic" film clips alleged to have been made by employes of the division, and that he would demand information from state auditor James A. Rhodes as to whether or not salaries of censorship employes have been "properly" paid in the last six months.

Three censor board operators were invited by registered mail, the Senator said, to appear voluntarily before the committee to testify regarding the screening of censored clips to members of the House judiciary committee, which has approved the proposed censorship bill. Having received no answer, Mosher said he would not subpoena them.

In his final testimony before the education committee, Robert Wile, secretary, Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, remarked that he could not understand how MGM's "The Blackboard Jungle" could be banned under the proposed bill, but the co-author, Representative Andrew Putka, maintained that the film constituted "jeopardy to public safety," as defined in the bill.

It was later learned that the industry fight had been successful. No new censorship bill was passed.

Buena Vista Alters Schedule

NEW YORK—A change in the Buena Vista release schedule for the coming year will bring "The African Lion," Walt Disney's newest full feature-length True-Life Adventure to theatre screens months earlier than originally planned. Instead of release during the Christmas-New Year holiday season, distribution will start in September.

Another change is the release date of Disney's "The Littlest Outlaw." Originally scheduled for August-September of this year, the live-action production is now set for release in January and February of next year.

Cinerama To Process Film

NEW YORK—Cinerama, Inc., will set up its own processing plant for Cinerama film in a move to improve the quality of prints, it was announced last week by Hazard Reeves, president, who said the plant would be located within the city and that construction would start within the next six months. He explained that the company heretofore has not been able to control quality in dealing with an outside laboratory, and then revealed that Cinerama will soon have several mobile units to show film in areas where theatre installation is impossible.

Skiatron's Landis Says Exhibitors Too "Jittery" Over Toll-TV Okeh

NEW YORK—The filing of final briefs with the Federal Communications Commission last fortnight arguing for and against that body's approval of the subscription television plan by no means buried the subject pending final decision.

At a luncheon in the Hotel Pierre tendered by the Skiatron Electronics and Television Corporation for financial writers, the company's chief counsel, James M. Landis, former dean of the Harvard Law School, who is also a director of several circuits, asserted that exhibitor interests are "too jittery" about the possible consequences of an FCC go-ahead on toll-TV. He observed that theatres have always had to compete for the amusement dollar, and that all forms of amusement have their own distinct advantages. Conceding that the theatres' opposition is legitimate, Landis stated that he thinks the networks' opposition is better founded. In the counsel's opinion, the FCC has the necessary authority to authorize toll-TV and is of that opinion itself. Landis said he expected the FCC to consider the material filed for three or four months and then hold limited hearings. He predicted that in about a year the Commission will reach a decision, in favor of subscription television.

Also present at the Pierre luncheon were Skiatron president William Levey, the presiding officer; William Shanahan, Skiatron chief engineer; and Dr. James H. Laub, research director. The financial writers were shown the Skiatron decoder, developed jointly with IBM, which, according to Levey, is impossible to counterfeit; he challenged, with the support of Shanahan, claims by the Jerrold Electronics Corporation that it was an easy matter to unscramble coded broadcasts, regardless of the method used to encode.

Public Vetos Toll-TV

Meanwhile, the Columbia Broadcasting System revealed the results of a survey made last month in Columbus, O., by Elmo Roper and Associates, showing that 62 per cent of those interviewed were against the fee system, 27 per cent were for it, 10 per cent were undecided, and one per cent had no opinion. When the possibility was advanced that all programs on Columbus channels might be charged for, only seven per cent were still in favor. Of those interested in toll-TV, 28 per cent estimated they would spend an average of $3.75 a week between 8 and 10 p.m. to watch programs. The survey found that 70 per cent of those interviewed are satisfied with television as it is, and 28 per cent wanted some changes made. Only five per cent said they wanted better movies.

FCC Extension Sought In Toll-TV Rebuttal

WASHINGTON—A two-month extension of the July 11 deadline for filing rebuttal briefs with the Federal Communications Commission in the subscription television controversy now pending was sought last week by the Committee Against Toll-Television.

The committee's report, filed by counsel Marcus Cohn, said that the comments filed on June 9 by the various proponents of the toll system who are seeking its approval by the FCC are so voluminous and varied that additional time is required to prepare adequate answers. The request was endorsed by attorneys for the National Association of Radio and Television Broadcasters, the American Broadcasting Company, and the Columbia Broadcasting System.

Zenith Radio Corporation, one of the three companies advocating acceptance of their subscription gadgets, advised the FCC that it had examined the request and determined the fairness of its statements, offering no objection to the extension. The three toll-TV proponents, in their briefs to the FCC, agreed that the service should be authorized, but each took a different point of view about the circumstances for the approval and the limitations to be placed on it, and each proposed different techniques for transmitting the broadcast signal.

New England Heart Award Presented To Rudolph King

BOSTON—The Great Heart Award dinner, sponsored by the Variety Club at the Statler Hotel last week, had as its principal speaker Arthur Lockwood, a prominent exhibitor, and a member of the executive committee, Theatre Owners of America. He replaced R. J. O'Donnell, Interstate Circuit, Dallas, who was unable to attend.

Several hundred prominent guests, including Joe Cronin and members of the Boston Red Sox ball club, saw the heart award presented to Rudolph F. King, Massachusetts registrar of motor vehicles, and treasurer, Children's Cancer Research Foundation, for his work in behalf of the latter organization.

Mrs. Rogers Mourned

NEW YORK—Funeral services were held in Riverside Memorial Chapel last week for Mrs. Budd Rogers, 59, wife of the motion picture producers' representative.

Celler Introduces Bill To Ban All Toll-TV

WASHINGTON—House Judiciary Committee chairman Celler (D., N. Y.), introduced to Congress last week a bill calling for Federal legislation prohibiting government approval of the subscription television systems now pending before the Federal Communications Commission. The bill will be referred to the House Commerce Committee, and it calls for an amendment to the Communications Act of 1934, to the effect that the FCC would be prohibited to authorize any toll proposal imposing a fee on the home television viewer, providing a stiff fine and a jail sentence for violation.

Celler asserted that in addition to the high cost of toll TV, it would reduce television viewing by blacking out, for those who do not wish to or cannot pay, channels now carrying free programs; that it would take over the best programs now received without cost, and that it would divide TV audiences along economic lines.

The Congressman estimated that a week's programming of fee telecasts would cost the average household between $3 and $5, noting that while many shows might charge only 25 cents, before long some, like baseball, would go up to a dollar or more, and that closed circuit fight telecasts are already costing viewers several dollars and up. He charged that the price for a specific program would be determined not by the cost of the product, but set at the figure most likely to bring the pay TV operator the biggest return.

Detroit Manager Honored

DETROIT—J. J. Lee, 20th-Fox Detroit branch manager, will be honored on his 30th anniversary of association with the film company with a week-long sales drive, July 10-16, during which a record number of 2,000 bookings are expected to be cleared through his office.

All exhibitors in the Detroit area are being invited to participate in "Joe Lee Week," and a series of activities are being arranged for the celebration period. Included in plans are a reception at the Fox exchange on July 13, at which theatremen, state and local political leaders, mercantile executives and civic leaders will pay tribute to the veteran film distributor.

Detroit Mayor Albert E. Cobo has submitted an ordinance to the Common Council commemorating Lee's association with 20th Century-Fox; while Governor G. Mennen Williams is expected to issue a gubernatorial order signalling the event.

Caesar Gains BOTV Control

NEW YORK—Announcement was made last week that Sid Caesar has acquired control of Box Office Television, Inc., and will succeed W. P. Rosensohn as president of the company, which produces closed circuit television programs. Previously Caesar was a vice-president and director.

William A. Ross and Edgar A. Rosenberg, for some time associated with the firm, were elected vice-presidents, and Arthur Knorr, executive producer, Roxy stage presentations, joined the firm as a vice-president. Milton N. Mound, an attorney, continues as board chairman.

20th-Fox Executives Address Sales Meet

NEW YORK—Convening the two-day 20th-Fox sales convention last fortnight, William C. Gehring, executive assistant general sales manager, told 200-odd executive delegates that they will have, during the next six months, an unprecedented roster of major CinemaScope attractions, for the promotion of which "creative merchandising" will be followed. He emphasized the company's position that what is good for the exhibitor is good for the distributor and film producer, and the convention took as its slogan, "The organization that works hardest for the exhibitor."

President Spyros P. Skouras, addressing the conclave on its second day, urged high standards in serving the needs of exhibitors and the public, calling on the sales force to maintain their reputations as respected and effective members of their communities. He discussed the increasing growth of the CinemaScope process and the constant work to improve the medium. Production head Darryl Zanuck outlined the important theatrical properties set for CinemaScope lensing, and vice-president Charles Einfield and his staff gave the distribution men a complete briefing on dynamic and comprehensive merchandising plans.

Emblazened across the home office platform, which served as a dais for the leaders of the meeting, were the words "Al Lichtman Appreciation." Throughout the course of the talks, the distribution director, who was unable to attend because of illness, received many words in praise of his sales innovations and efforts to bring harmony to the industry.

Southern Sales Area Realignment Announced

NEW YORK—One of the results of the 20th-Fox sales convention last fortnight was a realignment of the southern sales territory and concomitant personnel adjustments, according to an announcement by executive assistant general sales manager William C. Gehring and southern division sales manager Harry G. Ballance.

Ballance's eight southern branches, including the new one in Houston, have been divided into two sections, with four offices in each. Paul Wilson, currently southern division manager, will head the southeast district, with headquarters in Atlanta, and including Charlotte, Jacksonville, and New Orleans.

The southwest district, with headquarters in Dallas, will supervise the Houston, Oklahoma City, and Memphis exchanges, under the direction of Mark M. Sheridan, Jr., presently Dallas branch manager, who will be promoted to district manager.

Henry F. Harrell, new assistant to Ballance, will become branch manager, Houston, and New Orleans salesman Lloyd Edwards will take his place in the division offices. Replacing Sheridan in Dallas will be William B. Williams, now a salesman.

New England Delivery Pact Ends Wage Dispute Walkout

BOSTON—The film delivery drivers of Local 25 Teamsters Union, went back to work last week following the walkout in a wage dispute with truck operators. The Film Exchange Transfer Company, largest of New England's film delivery services, agreed to a 15 cent hourly increase, pending the signing of final contracts, and resumed operations. Meetings between the union and owners continued in an effort to reach an agreement on fringe benefits, retroactive pay, and other matters.

The three-day strike forced some exhibitors to pick up their own prints or juggle them from theatre to theatre. In anticipation of the stoppage, however, the exchanges sent out prints in advance, and no theatre was reported without a show during the emergency.

AB-PT Names Record Firm

NEW YORK—AM-PAR Record Corporation has been selected as the corporate name of the new phonograph record company which was established last fortnight as a subsidiary of American Broadcasting-Paramount Theatres, Inc. Samuel H. Clark, president, said AM-PAR will also be used as the label designation on the three speeds of records it is planned to record, manufacture, and distribute.

Colbert Heads U-I Branch

NEW YORK—The promotion of Richard Colbert to the post of U-I branch manager in Portland to replace Ernest J. Piro, who has resigned, was announced last week by Charles J. Feldman, vice-president and general sales manager.

Sabre Productions Duo Reveals Release Plans

NEW YORK—Vic Orsatti, president, newly formed Sabre Productions, and producer-director Joseph Newman last week revealed plans for their future releases. The present schedule calls for shooting to take place on the next Sabre production in September. The film, "Flight From Hong Kong," which is being produced for United Artists release, will be shot on location in Hong Kong, Macao, Formosa, Southeast Asia, London, and parts of continental Europe. "Flight," based on an original screen play by Newman and Edward G. O'Callaghan, will be filmed for wide-screen. Newman and Orsatti are presently en route to Europe to scout a filming site.

Sabre Productions was first organized a few years ago when the film rights to "This Island Earth" were purchased. After preparatory work and cost estimates were figured, it was decided to sell the rights to Universal-International, who subsequently completed production of the film.

Sabre expects to produce two films a year for United Artists, contemplated productions including "In The Depths Of Space," a science fiction entry; "Prelude To Murder," scheduled for filming in Yugoslavia and with a screen play by Newman and Orsatti; and "Sir Pagan," a chase story set in the time of the Crusades.

Newman, when questioned as to the advantages of being an independent director, stated that it was easier since he could now work with more freedom and there was no problem of a huge overhead.

Columbia Splits Stock

NEW YORK—A decision by the board of directors of Columbia Pictures at a meeting last fortnight will split the company's common stock on a five for four basis, it was announced. New shares will be put on a regular quarterly dividend basis, with an initial dividend of 30 cents a share. The directors said that the company's earnings in the current fiscal year are anticipated to be the largest on record.

The record date for the split will be June 30, with the delivery of the additional shares scheduled for July 29. The first quarterly dividend on all the shares involved in the split is payable the same date, to holders of record June 30.

2,000 Theatres Join In Audience Poll Plan

NEW YORK—Nearly 2,000 theatres have already indicated they will take part in the Audience Awards campaign, it was revealed last week by Robert W. Coyne, special counsel for COMPO.

Leading the list of participating theatres are the various chains of the American Broadcasting-Paramount Theatres circuit, with 624 theatres; the Stanley Warner Corporation with 302; Fox West Coast, 202; Loew's, 95; and RKO Theatres, 87. Others participating include American Theatres Corporation of Boston, Commonwealth Amusement Company of Kansas City, Fabian Theatres of New York, Fox Inter-Mountain Theatres of Denver, Fox Midwest of Kansas City, Fox Wisconsin of Milwaukee, Gibraltar Theatres of Colorado; Talgar Theatres of Florida, the Neighborhood Group of Theatres of Virginia, Wallace Theatres of Texas.

Thousands of additional theatres are expected to join the plan, Coyne said, following a series of meetings explaining the program which will be held this month and next in all exchange areas. All pledges received to date have been voluntary, Coyne explained, as COMPO desired all exhibitors to become familiar with the plan by reading the brochure and campaign book and attending the exchange area meetings before actively soliciting their participation.

Regional Meetings Win Added Exhib Interest

NEW YORK—Exchange area meetings between managers and exhibitors to organize the Audience Awards campaign were being arranged last week, according to an announcement by Robert W. Coyne, COMPO special counsel, who is coordinating the poll under national campaign chairman Elmer C. Rhoden.

Meetings have been set for Denver this week and New York next week, with subsequent talks in other exchange cities as soon as they can be arranged. Coyne addressed the annual convention of the Virginia Theatre Owners Association last week at Old Point Comfort, Va., urging the membership to participate in the poll and to attend the Washington exchange area meeting. A. Julian Brylawski, president, Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Washington, is planning the talks there.

Proof of the success of past regional public polls for the selection of best pictures and best performances in attracting widespread public interest is given by Frank H. Ricketson, Jr., president of the Fox Inter-Mountain Circuit of Denver, Colo., and Ralph W. Russell, advertising director of the Palace Theatre, Canton, O., in statements published in the COMPO brochure on the campaign, which have been distributed to exhibitors across the country through National Screen Service. Press books on the poll are in production.

Others at the meeting were Gil Golden of Warner Brothers, committee chairman, who presided; R. P. Braus, president of Fox Midwest Theatres; Harry Goldstein of Allied Artists; Abe Montague of Columbia pictures; Oscar Doob, Emery Austin and Dan Terrell of MGM; Sid Bluemenstock of Paramount; Steve Edwards of Republic; Ben Grimm and Al Stern of RKO; Rodney Bush, Abe Goodman and Ed Solomon of 20th Century-Fox; Francis Winikus of United Artists; Jeff Livingston of Universal; Charles Steinberg of Warner Brothers; Taylor Mills and Miss Sarah Siegel of MPA, and Charles E. McCarthy of COMPO.

AB-PT Business Tops '54; Goldenson Sees Good Summer

NEW YORK—Higher theatre earnings by American Broadcasting-Paramount Theatres for this year were predicted last week by president Leonard H. Goldenson, who disclosed that circuit business so far this year is running ahead of last year.

Goldenson stated that he expects a "big summer" for the theatre business, compared to 1954, because product scheduled for release exceeds that of last year in boxoffice strength. He regarded as significant a 22 per cent increase over last year in circuit business for a specific weekend early this month, and with prospects for a highly successful summer, the AB-PT executive felt that higher revenues for 1955 were almost assured.

This Was The Week When.....

MGM star Jarma Lewis arrived in New York to promote Loew's Summer Movie Festival and "The Cobweb." . . . Broadway's benefit premiere of Paramount's "The Seven Little Foys" was slated to have Bob Hope and the seven youngsters of the film on hand, at the Criterion. . . . United Artists scheduled "Not As A Stranger" for 136 key cities in the first two weeks of July, following its tri-city world premiere. . . . Columbia opened an exhibit at New York's Museum of Modern Art featuring United Productions of America's animated films. . . . Warners declared a dividend of 30 cents a share on common stock, payable August 5 to holders of record July 15.

Columbus, Ohio's Grand, and Omaha's Brandeis were given the first dates of RKO's release "Wakamba!" . . . New York's Victoria was slated for the world premiere of U-I's "The Shrike" on July 7. . . . 20th-Fox actor Charles Coburn was honored with an award on his 78th birthday by the National Theatre Arts Council, publishers of Theatre Arts Magazine. . . . John Huston made the Congressional Record when he was cited by California's Representative Gordon L. McDonough for good press relations abroad, especially while making Warner's "Moby Dick" in the Canary Islands. . . . The American premiere for Sweden's international prize-winner, "Thirst," was set by Arthur Davis, importer and distributor, for the Roosevelt, Miami Beach, Fla., early in August.

"Summertime" Bows With Ballyhoo Variety

NEW YORK—A lively, all-media campaign blanketing the area with store promotions, contests, radio-TV plugs, fashion shows, a beautiful girl contest, etc., heralded the Astor premiere of UA's "Summertime."

The picture was saluted by Macy's department store with jumbo window displays, full-page ads in the New York Times and New York Post, and a variety of in-the-store promotions. The co-op spotlighting the film was pegged on summer fashions as inspired by Katharine Hepburn's wardrobe for her starring role. Four full Macy's windows featured fashion displays and eight foot by 12 foot blow-ups of scene stills from "Summertime," plus prominent credits for the Astor premiere. The swim suit and summer dress departments also beat the drums for the Ilya Lopert production with counter materials, cutouts, and standees. Thirty thousand heralds plugging the picture were distributed to Macy's customers.

Rossano Brazzi, who co-stars in the film, earned many mentions for "Summertime" in a nine-day slate of radio-TV and press interviews, climaxed by his appearance as guest of honor at the Astor premiere. Brazzi also served as judge at a beauty contest that netted solid news and picture breaks for the film. The contest was won by Georgia Faye Kennedy, named "Miss Summertime." She won a two-week flying vacation for herself and a companion to Venice, Italy, where the picture was filmed in its entirety.

Another contest, requiring entrants to submit letters explaining why they would like to go to Venice, offers entrants eight free vacations in Italy. Working the fashion tie-up from another angle, UA publicity and exploitation departments scored a showmanship beat by utilizing a store in Times Square where daily fashion shows to the public were held. Called the "Summertime Exhibit," the store was equipped with beach tables and umbrellas and drew thousands of passers-by daily as models displayed the beach and swim styles inspired by "Summertime." Cinzano Vermouth tied into the exhibit by supplying lettered umbrellas and placing newspaper ads saluting the picture.

The fashion campaign also took to the air when "Summertime" styles specially designed by Fontana were modeled on six video programs with approprite plugs. The Childs chain of restaurants carried the "Summertime" campaign to additional thousands with a concoction called the "Summertime Sundae." Window and counter displays featured a photograph of Brazzi and playdate credits.

Cleary Named Canadian Pioneer

MONTREAL—The Canadian Motion Picture Pioneers last week announced that Thomas Cleary, Consolidated Theatres advertising-publicity director, has been elected Mr. Showbusiness of Montreal and will be honored as pioneer of the year. In other business, L. E. Ouimet was elected honorary president, while Fred E. Peters is president.

Valuable Exploitation Keys To Profitable Merchandising

Columbia Offers $500 Cash Prize To Sweepstakes For "It" Ballyhoo

PHILADELPHIA—In addition to attracting entries from hundreds of exhibitors and managers, and a truly formidable list of judges willing to cooperate, MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR'S SHOWMANSHIP SWEEPSTAKES has now won the attention of the film companies, who see in it an excellent medium to focus skilled showmanship attention on, and to get additional ideas on the exploitation of some of their pictures.

To accomplish this they are offering additional cash prizes to augment SHOWMANSHIP SWEEPSTAKES' $100 weekly prize. Columbia is the first to do this, with Vice-President Paul N. Lazarus, Jr., offering $500 for the best campaign on their science-fiction thriller, "It Came From Beneath The Sea." In order to win both Columbia's $500 and the SHOWMANSHIP SWEEPSTAKES $100, however, an entry on this picture must place FIRST in one of the weekly judgings during the 13-week period from July 13 to Oct. 5.

"It" is a feature loaded with exploitation potentials and for this reason was selected by Columbia as the proper production to inaugurate film company participation in SHOWMANSHIP SWEEPSTAKES. It was also selected by Columbia as the proper production to undergo a saturation of multiple openings in 27 exchange areas with more than 2,200 theatres participating.

Because of its great "shock" value, this film about a giant monster that threatens the sea lanes of the Pacific and attacks San Francisco, is also an ideal subject for old-fashioned showmanship. It just screams for ballyhoo, stunts, and special attention-getters.

Enterprising showmen will find a wealth of material to work with in the Columbia press book which features suggested stunts for tie-ins and bally. Columbia has also prepared a pamphlet containing 12 stunts that can be easily pulled off to bring attention to the film.

All of this has been done to help you, but knowing that "It" is ripe for a rock 'em, sock 'em type of exhibitor showmanship, Columbia was quick to join in MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR'S SHOWMANSHIP SWEEPSTAKES with the knowledge that this may result in the kind of advertising-promotion campaign destined for big grosses down the line.

So, $600 is on the line.

In connection with the over-all exploitation campaign on the opening of U-I's "This Island Earth," Victoria, New York City, Jack Cusack, Victoria manager, used model Janet Wilde, winner of a contest to find "the most beautiful girl on This Island Earth" to distribute trick balloons in front of the theatre.

SWEEPSTAKES Spreads North

PHILADELPHIA—Dan E. Krendel, head, Ontario "B" district, Famous Players Theatres, Canada, in a recent issue of his "B"allyhoo bulletin, told his managers of MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR'S SHOWMANSHIP SWEEPSTAKES, as follows: "This is the first periodical in the trade paper field to back up its emphasis on the importance of real showmanship with real folding money. Get in there and WIN!"

SW Joins Parade

PHILADELPHIA—Stanley Warner Theatres both here and in Washington have through special bulletins called to the attention of their managers MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR'S SHOWMANSHIP SWEEPSTAKES.

Birk Binnard, advertising-publicity-exploitation head in the Philadelphia zone, stated: "This contest pays off $100 each week, 52 weeks a year. With all the showmanship in our zone, we are looking forward to a weekly $100 windfall from our good friend, publisher Jay Emanuel. If any of our zone managers have entries to submit, they may send them to me and I will forward them to MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR."

Frank La Falce, Washington zone, said, "MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR'S SHOWMANSHIP SWEEPSTAKES opens additional revenue for alert theatremen because $5,200 will be awarded by the publication during the first year of the contest. Here is a great opportunity for SW managers in the Washington zone not only to keep ringing the boxoffice bell on their pictures; but also to submit their campaigns for the showmanship money. Let's see how many Washington zone men can carry off this $100 weekly cash prize."

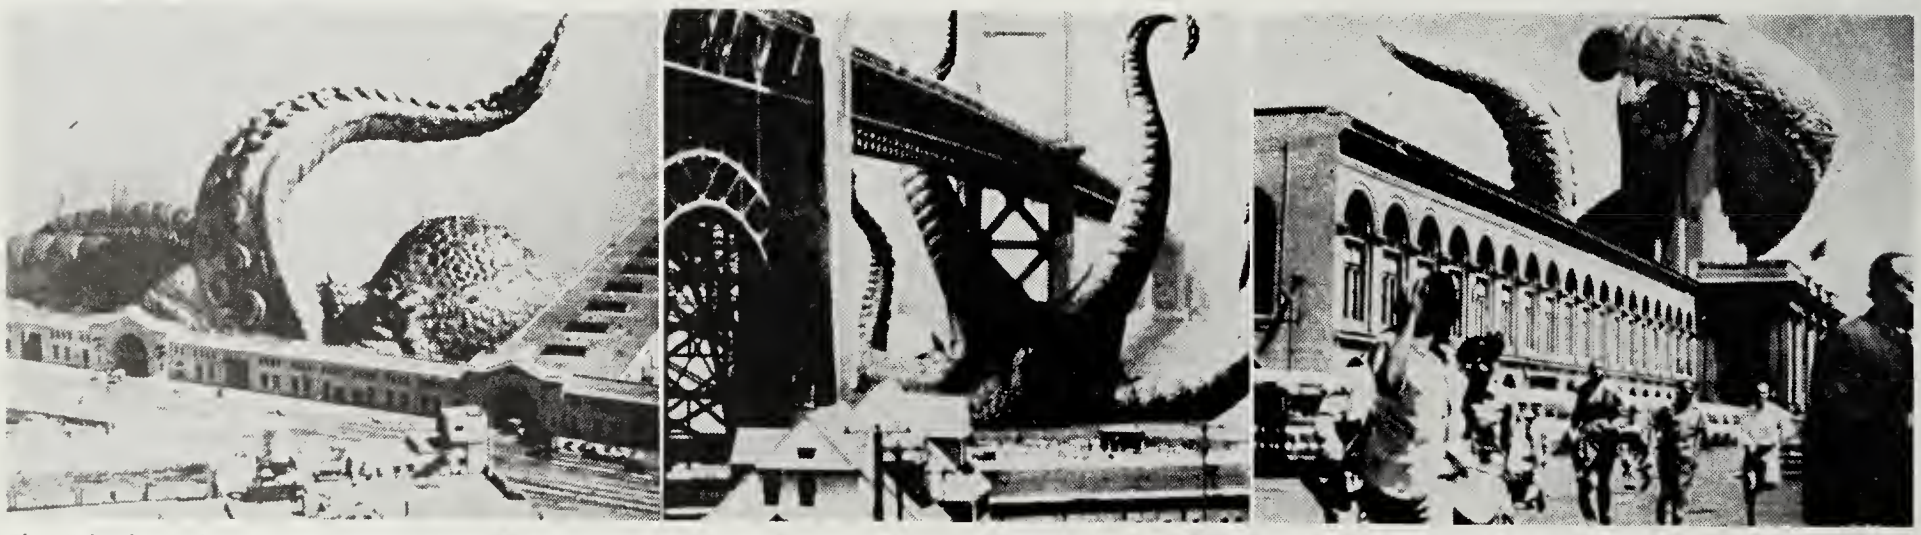
No Strangers Here

NEW YORK—Visitors to New York are being welcomed "Not As A Stranger But As A Friend" as a result of a campaign launched jointly last week by the New York City Summer Festival and the Capitol, where UA's "Not As A Stranger" had its gala preview yesterday (June 28).

As proof of the sincerity of the welcome, every 100th visitor to the city each day will receive two tickets to the Capitol to see "Not As A Stranger."

All 23 points of entry to the city, bridges, tunnels, roads, airports, railroad, and bus terminals have been covered with posters proclaiming, "Welcome To New York Summer Festival, Not As A Stranger But As A Friend."

Another greeting stretches across Broadway at 51st Street, where a huge banner announces a similar welcome.



The "shock" value of Columbia's science fiction film, "It Came From Beneath The Sea," is illustrated from the three shots from the film shown above. With this picture, Columbia joins MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR'S SHOWMANSHIP SWEEPSTAKES by offering a $500 award for the best campaign on the thriller which also wins first prize of $100 in the weekly SWEEPSTAKES judging for the 13 week period from July 13 to Oct. 5.

GREAT TALENT MAKES GREAT PICTURES!

Gary Cooper stands inspection for Director Otto Preminger and Producer Milton Sperling in World War I uniform he'll wear as aviation hero in production "The Court-Martial of Billy Mitchell." Shooting starts next week in Washington, D.C. In another World War I uniform, "Sergeant York," Cooper won the Academy Award. (In CinemaScope and WarnerColor.)

WE'RE DOING THINGS HERE AT WARNER BROS.

Above are scenes from forthcoming 20th-Fox releases, all in CinemaScope and color, with one exception. In the usual order, Robert Stack, Robert Ryan, and Shirley Yamaguchi in "House Of Bamboo"; Gene Tierney and Humphrey Bogart in "The Left Hand Of God"; Marilyn Monroe and Tom Ewell in "The Seven Year Itch," and Orson Bean and Sheree North, ignoring Tommy Noonan in "How To Be Very, Very Popular." In the second row, Robert Ryan and Jane Russell in "The Tall Men"; Jose Perez and Ricardo Montalban in the Panoramic black and white film, "A Life In The Balance"; William Holden, a foreign correspondent, and Jennifer Jones, a Eurasian woman, in "Love Is A Many Splendored Thing," and Richard Todd as Raleigh opposite Bette Davis' Queen Elizabeth in "The Virgin Queen." This represents a product increase over previously announced plans.

Variety, Top Stars, Pre-Selling Highlight 20th-Fox Product Lineup

Variety of subjects, important players, and nationally pre-sold literary and stage properties combine in the 20th-Fox line-up for the June to October period to form one of the company's strongest rosters of attractions in its history. Nearly half of the year's releases will appear during these important summer and fall months, 12 in CinemaScope and color, and one in standard black and white. Behind the pictures, all of which have already been given advance buildup and promotion, will be an intensive and comprehensive campaign embracing every aspect of advertising, publicity, and exploitation.

Leading off the parade of June releases is Charles K. Feldman's Group Productions presentation of "The Seven Year Itch," starring Marilyn Monroe and Tom Ewell, adapted from George Axelrod's Broadway play. Also in June the company is offering "Soldier Of Fortune," starring Clark Gable, Susan Hayward, Michael Rennie, and Gene Barry, which Edward Dmytryk directed from a screen play by Ernest K. Gann, based on his popular novel. "The Magnificent Matador," with Maureen O'Hara and Anthony Quinn, rounds out the month's releases.

July releases are "House Of Bamboo," starring Robert Stack, Robert Ryan and Shirley Yamaguchi; "How To Be Very, Very Popular," with Betty Grable, Sheree North, and Robert Cummings; Panoramic Productions' "A Life In The Balance," starring Ricardo Montalban, Anne Bancroft, and Lee Marvin, and the first CinemaScope featurette, "The Living Swamp."

"The Virgin Queen," a vehicle for Bette Davis, with Richard Todd, Joan Collins, and Jay Robinson, will bow in August, together with "The Left Hand Of God," starring Humphrey Bogart and Gene Tierney.

Leading September releases is "Love Is A Many Splendored Thing," starring William Holden, Jennifer Jones, and Gloria Grahame, followed by "The Tall Men," with Clark Gable, Jane Russell, and Guy Madison. In October, "Seven Cities Of Gold," featuring Richard Egan, Michael Rennie, Rita Moreno, and Cameron Mitchell, and "The Girl In The Red Velvet Swing," starring Ray Milland and Joan Collins, will offer boxoffice potential.

Among the many other imposing CinemaScope productions forthcoming from 20th-Fox are "The View From Pompey's Head," "The Greatest Story Ever Told," "Lord Vanity," "Katherine," "The Sixth Of June," "The Rains Of Ranchipur," "The Day The Century Ended," "Tigrero!," "Good Morning Miss Dove," "Anastasia," "Can-Can," "Bus Stop," and "The King And I."

Vivien Leigh Returns In "The Deep Blue Sea"

Vivien Leigh, co-starring this time with Kenneth More, will return to the screen for the first time since her Oscar-winning performance in "A Streetcar Named Desire" with the release shortly of Anatole Litvak's London Films Production for 20th-Fox of "The Deep Blue Sea," in which she portrays the tragic heroine of Terence Rattigan's highly successful West End and Broadway play.

At the right, Miss Leigh is shown in a scene from the picture with Kenneth More. Eric Pertman, a relative newcomer to films, plays the supporting role of a psychiatrist. Emlyn Williams, the eminent playwright and author, appears as the wealthy husband.

"Oasis" Is Success Story In International Relations

With the American release of "Oasis," the first European production in CinemaScope, 20th-Fox will reveal the results of a unique experiment in international relations, with a picture filmed in Morocco on which French and German stars, writers, producers, directors, and technicians collaborated.

Starring in the Ludwig Waldleitner and Gerd Oswald production, to be released in English, French, and German language versions, are Michelle Morgan, Pierre Brasseur, Cornell Borchers, Carl Raddatz, Gregoire Aslan, Giles Galion, and Jean Hevey.

Beginning with location shooting in Africa, 20th-Fox began a long-range promotional campaign to make "Oasis" one of the Most pre-sold attractions ever offered. When "Oasis" bows in the United States, plans call for the assemblage of the cast at the New York premiere, which will be staged as one of the most glittering and news-winning openings of the year.

New Faces Plentiful In Top 20th-Fox Films

One of the pronounced signs of vigor in a motion picture studio is its accent on the discovery and build-up of new talent. Twentieth-Fox has always been exceptionally strong in this particular enterprise, through the unerring eye of Darryl F. Zanuck, vice-president in charge of production.

It was under Zanuck's aegis that Betty Grable was brought back from Broadway, after another studio had abandoned her, and developed into one of the all-time great musical comedy stars. The buildup of Marilyn Monroe was accomplished at Fox. The process has never been limited to the fairer sex, either, with Zanuck's guidance leading to the success of such actors as Dan Dailey, Richard Widmark, Dana Andrews, Richard Burton, Gregory Peck, Tyrone Power, Victor Mature, and others.

21,000 Theatres Show CinemaScope Pictures

This month, throughout the world, a total of more than 21,000 theatres are equipped to show CinemaScope films. This installation total involving tremendous investments of time, money, and energy represents the remarkable attraction of a film medium which two years ago was virtually unknown.

The wider the horizon for CinemaScope, the further assurance that a greater roster of films will be forthcoming for exhibition. At the moment, some 7,000 theatres in all parts of the globe, other than the U.S. and Canada, are showing CinemaScope film. This includes all of Europe, major centers of South and Central America, Australia, Africa, the Near East, and the Orient.

The growth of CinemaScope-equipped theatres and the increase in production of pictures in the new medium has also resulted in technical advances which have provided finer entertainment for the moviegoing public. At first, there were only the few lenses produced by Professor Chretien which could be used in production, but over the months, following the first few CinemaScope pictures, finer improved lenses were produced in a variety of sizes to give greater fluidity to the director and cinematographer. With the growth of the medium, and its clarity and width of image, came a commensurate improvement in the various color processes. Current technical aspects of photography and color are rapidly approaching perfection.

CinemaScope has provided the inspiration for many business improvements in the industry. It has reawakened public interest in motion pictures, and drawn back to the fold many who strayed to television and other competitive entertainment, and has revitalized aspects of showmanship, providing incentive for greater selling of individual films, as well as the industry to the public.

Many new and exciting developments are promised for the near future, opening up even wider vistas for CinemaScope production. Greater use of the medium is expected, and as it grows it will serve to establish CinemaScope even further as one of the major entertainment developments of this industry.

Joe Huber, retiring 20th Century-Fax Winnipeg branch manager, was hanared recently at a testimonial dinner held at the Marlborough Hotel. Head table guests included Bob Cringan, 20th-Fax Calgary branch manager; Phil Geller, 20th-Fax Winnipeg branch manager; Peter S. Myers, 20th-Fox Canadian general manager; Huber; Harry Gray, Lyceum, Winnipeg, chairman af the affair; Richard Miles, Famous Players; Haskell Masters, Warners Canadian general manager; and Harry Hurwitz, Odeon-Mortan Theatres, Winnipeg. Huber was gifted with a 16mm projectar.

Phone Comes Back

NEW YORK—A frequently neglected promotional gimmick was utilized by Columbia recently in 10 cities when the telephone system was pressed into service with a campaign to "Call Jimmy Stewart," designed to exploit "The Man From Laramie." The novel method urged patrons, through newspaper advertising, to call the actor at a listed number which, when reached, played a recording over the wire of a sales message from Stewart. The gratifying result was more than 1,500 calls an hour, exceeding capacity, in half the cities.

U-I Sets TV Spots

NEW YORK—David Lipton, U-I vice-president, announced last week that the first national TV spot campaign in motion picture history will launch the pre-selling of the company's "To Hell And Back."

Plans have now been completed for the use of continuous spot time on 67 TV stations throughout the country during July, August, and September. Lipton emphasized that the TV time would be used solely for pre-selling purposes as part of the most comprehensive national pre-selling campaign ever given a U-I picture.

"Itch" Prizes Offered

NEW YORK—In conjunction with engagements of 20th-Fox's "The Seven Year Itch," National Theatres announced it is conducting a showmanship contest among its theatre managers for the seven best and most provocative campaigns. A total of $325 in prize money will be offered in U. S. Savings Bonds.

Judging will be based equally on the quality of the campaign and boxoffice results achieved and entries should be sent to "Seven Year Itch" Campaign Contest, 1837 S. Vermont Ave., Los Angeles, Cal., before Aug. 31.

Calling All Gamblers

PROVIDENCE—William Trambukis, manager, Loew's State, got into the gambling groove when he played Columbia's "5 Against The House," story of five collegians who attempt to rob the largest gambling casino in Reno. Trambukis obtained a number of miniature slot machines and sent them to newspaper contacts and disc jockeys in advance of playdate tagged, "You'll be a sure winner when you see '5 Against The House'."

He reported that the novelties turned out to be highly successful.

CANDYDLY SPEAKING

THE DISPENSING and handling of soft drinks in theatres, both conventional and drive-in, present to the exhibitor problems peculiar to his situation. However, certain considerations are fundamental whether carbonated and non-carbonated beverages are handled by the popular vending machines or dispensed manually.

A RECENT COMPO survey indicates that the hot summer months which used to be a signal for boxoffice slumps are now drawing crowds to the air-conditioned comfort of indoor houses or the relaxed, informal atmosphere of the drive-in in greatly increased numbers.

NO ITEM is more welcome to a patron "beating the heat" than a cold soft drink, and care in dispensing, strict observance of rules and cleanliness and sanitation, and proper maintenance of vending machines can spiral the profit curve on concession operation upward.

IN SITUATIONS where the "silent salesmen" handle the drink sales, such important matters as rate of carbonation, temperature, and proper mixing ratio of syrup and soda are handled automatically, with skilled maintenance men available from equipment manufacturers to handle emergencies with which theatremen are not prepared to cope. A pericdic check and merchandising aids such as proper location, dramatic lighting, and other features that fall into the showmen's realm will insure maximum returns.

WHERE DRINKS are manually dispensed, it is imperative that attendants be familiar with and follow to the letter the hints concerning temperature and carbonation provided by all beverage companies. Again, scrupulous attention to cleanliness is required, for the public may return if the drink is good, but that all-important first sale will never be made if the concession area is not spotlessly attractive.

Proper Planning, Clean Operation Boost Profits

Cooperation between exhibitor and equipment dealer, coupled with conscientious application of principles of sanitation on the part of aides, make for ideal candy stand.

ONLY space and imagination can possibly limit the choice of equipment in planning a modern concession stand, inasmuch as almost any device or piece of equipment required is readily available.

The arrangement and placement of candy counters is something that requires detailed study because they are the core or hub around which the entire refreshment stand is to be built. There are many and varied handsome, sturdy cabinet lines on sale through the theatre equipment and restaurant supply companies, and a check on these products offers the most convenient solution to any problem concerning the selection of the proper cabinets. Where the specific layout is a unique one, the concessionaire can generally secure the services of carpenters and technicians to design and build cabinets according to requirements.

Manufacturers of equipment to make popcorn, to warm nuts and butter, to keep ice cream cold, and to dispense beverages are already familiar to exhibitors. The local layout will determine the exact equipment best suited and most valuable for the planned concession stand to promote extra profits. The representatives of reputable equipment houses and the service agents for dealers and suppliers are authorities in their fields, and they can and will give indispensable advice in the selection of proper equipment.

Adequate Facilities Necessary

In the planning stage of the stand, it is advisable to make certain in advance of the adequacy of power, drainage, and water facilities. For example, the refreshment stand will require an electrical system capable of taking peak loads at a time when all other machinery is also in operation. It is frequently necessary to have both 110 and 220 volt circuits able to carry loads up to 60 amperes. It is a wise move to install a separate switch panel for the concession stand equipment to prevent, for instance, the accidental turning off of the refrigeration equipment over night.

This is something which will happen over and over again, and it cannot be prevented. The efficient operator, however, will have the know-how to clean up completely and immediately.

It will prove profitable to the manager of the concession operation to be entirely familiar with the general workings of all his refreshment equipment. The modern installation will most likely include beverage dispensers, popcorn machines, an ice cream box, candy machines operated with coins, coin changers, carbonators, and refrigeration units, in addition to heating, water, wiring, and drainage systems. A thorough layman's knowledge of each of the individual parts of the operations will result in the saving of repair bills, to say nothing of profit. The "out of order" sign, certainly one of the most irritating of annoyances to the customer with his money in hand, should go up only when serious trouble occurs, and then for only the shortest period of time possible.

In the interest of protecting his equipment, the conscientious concession operator will arrange for regular periodic inspection of all operations, where possible by representatives of the manufacturers. He will make sure that cleaning schedules are strictly enforced, and will teach the counter personnel as much of the basic equipment operation as they are able to absorb. Well-planned emergency procedures in case of unit failures should be worked out in advance and posted in an accessible spot.

Cleanliness Vital

As vital as the equipment itself is the cleanliness of the concession stand's operation. Every employe working behind the counter must be made to realize and to appreciate the necessity that he be held responsible for his share of the cleaning duties, and must be further impressed with the general requirements of keeping counters and all equipment ship-shape at all times.

Glass-topped counters can be kept fresh and shining throughout the day and evening with only an occasional wiping off with a damp cloth, and they should be thoroughly scrubbed after closing every night, with an application following of any one of many new products designed to polish and restore glass. Shelves inside the counter should be stripped and washed not less than once a week, with a change of shelf paper, if it is used, made at the same time. The facing and trim of the refreshment booth itself should likewise be cleaned frequently and with a damp rag. High gloss or sheen surfaces are the easiest to clean and maintain.

The kettle and pan of the popcorn machine should be wired with clean paper napkins as often as the press of business will allow, and washed every night

The general service area of Century's Prospect, Flushing, L. I., N. Y., is noteworthy for convenient arrangement and dramatic lighting. The refuse receptacle is an inducement to the patron to help the operator keep order. Practical and pleasing in appearance, the plastic flooring is easily cleaned.

The large concession stand of the United Detroit Theatre circuit's Cinderella, Detroit, occupies a prominent position where potential customer traffic passes going both in and out of the house. Again, dramatic lighting and interesting decoration add to the good appearance of the operation.

Simonin's Ryan Offers 10 Checks For Buying Popping, Cooking Oils

THEATRE AND CONCESSION operators, as well as drive-in and carnival operators, were offered recently a special checklist of 10 all-important features to look for when surveying the market to buy popping and cooking oils.

The 10 checkpoints were introduced and discussed at length by James A. Ryan, president, C. F. Simonin's Sons, Inc., at a meeting of the company's salesmen. Simonin is the manufacturer of Popsit Plus, which is the largest selling popping and cooking oil of its kind in the field.

The executive's first important point is pure peanut oil, not only because of its innate qualities but also because it is easily the most digestible of all vegetable oils and will, of course, assure a finer product at nominal additional cost, if any. The product can be no better than its ingredients, and the distributor offering the best for perhaps even a slightly higher cost is likely to find his sales more noteworthy than those of a competitor offering a standard or sub-standard item at a lower figure. Together with the necessity of pure peanut oil, Ryan insisted on butterlike flavor, which imparts a deliciously different taste to popcorn and foods; a fresher and more wholesome taste, free from the all-too-frequent greasy and fatty taste of second-rate cooking oils, which can destroy the flavor of the best ingredients. The softer and more delicate butter flavor is impossible to achieve without using a pure oil as a base, but any additional expense involved in the use of the finer oil will, Ryan believes, be counteracted by a corresponding increase in volume, and prove in the long run the most economical method of popcorn production.

Ryan went on to elaborate on the visual appeal of the product for the third point. Golden color, he pointed out, is an almost foolproof appeal to the customer. The better something looks, the more likely he is to buy, and buy in larger quantity than he might if the merchandise were unattractive to the eye. With the proper oil, flavor, and cooking, the product will, of course, appeal to still another sense—that of smell which, combined with the visual golden effect, makes the purchase almost irresistible to all but the established cynic or the person who simply has no taste of any kind for the item. In other words, by increasing the appeal to the senses, sales will surely be made to many in-between theatre customers who would neglect to buy the ordinary concession foods or, if they did, show little interest and be unlikely to buy in any quantity or with any deliberateness.

As a fourth checkpoint, the Simonin president mentioned that the oil always should be a liquid one, requiring no melting. The advantages of the liquid oil are manifest, in that it requires no melting and therefore saves the operator precious time in the preparation of the article to be sold. In liquid form, too, the possibility of burning the oil over high heat is minimized because it is ready for use after only a moment on the fire. Together with the liquid requirement, Ryan introduced point number five, that oil should be easy to measure for the very good reason that it will not be wasted so easily and, again, will save time. And with points four and five, the sixth and seventh go hand-in-hand, namely, that the oil should always be ready to use (i.e., no pre-heating or melting) and never require refrigeration or any other special treatment; and that the flash point must be over 650 degrees to pop the corn and to fry foods evenly, completely, and attractively.

Important with inexperienced help especially, but always to be considered even with the veteran attendant, particularly at times of heavy demand and the concomitant rush, is the fire hazard, the oil must be uninflammable, and also smokeproof. The smokeproof oil makes cleaning up easy and fast and, above all, eliminates the carrying of cooking odors through the house which might have the effect, in quantity, of dulling the consumer appetite rather than whetting it. In any case, a smoking or burning food smell is associated generally with an inefficient cook.

As his final point, Ryan said the oil should be an all-purpose one which will fry hamburgers, potatoes, shrimp, chicken parts, and the whole range of refreshment stand offerings with the same delicious flavor and appealing color.

Hamburger Heaven Built By Successful Lady Farmer

ST. LOUIS—Maude Jefferis, Piedmont, Mo., is a lady farmer who knows how to handle a mower or a reaper like a professional. Before coming to St. Louis with her husband, A. B. Jefferis, president, Mid-Central Allied Independent Theatre Owners, she put in three tons of fine alfalfa hay grown on their 42-acre tract back of their Pine Hill Drive-In. The alfalfa will be used to feed their herd of Black Angus cattle which provide hamburger for the patrons of the nearby ozoner. Mrs. Jefferis reveals that the concession stand there sells more hamburgers than frankfurters, the ratio being far above the national average.

One corner of the refreshery building at the Walter Reade Eatontown Drive-In, Eatontown, N. J., recently looked like an appliance shop, after manager Fred Bartholdi set up the merchandise he had accumulated for a six-week giveaway, in a tiein with a local appliance firm.

Ice Cream Stand Operation Discussed

NEW YORK—The Port Morris Machine and Tool Works, Inc., manufacturers of the Electro Freeze soft ice cream machines have announced the publication of a new booklet on the construction, operation, and maintenance of a soft ice cream stand. The pamphlet is entitled "What Insures a Profitable Soft Ice Cream Stand?"

Many theatre operators, both conventional and drive-in, have found that concession profits can be increased through the installation of such an ice-cream stand. The importance of location is stressed in the booklet, and some theatremen have found their best bet to be stands that cater at the same time to moviegoers and passersby on the street through a double serving window setup.

Ice cream is playing an increasingly important part in theatre extra profits, and the item is making its appearance in various forms in both conventional and outdoor houses through the medium of the stand or vending machines where the installation of an ice cream stand is impractical.

The booklet includes information on the material used in the construction of the stand, the outlook for the soft ice cream business, and the requirements necessary for efficient equipment. It is a reprint of an article run in a national trade publication and it was written by Charles Nasif, an actual operator who has 12 years experience in this field. An outline of the plans used by Nasif in his outstanding 24 by 40 feet drive-in stand are also included.

This booklet is free and can be obtained by simply writing to Port Morris Machine and Tool Works, Inc.

Candy Sales Rise

WASHINGTON—Reversing the discouraging negative trend of at least several years' standing, candy sales showed a positive, desirable increase in the early part of this year, according to a report issued by the Bureau of Census, Department of Commerce, estimating the sales of confectioners' products and competitive items on the market. How much of the increase can be accredited to aggressive merchandising by exhibitors alert to the potential profits in the item, one can only guess.

February sales are reported to total $85,256,000, representing a jump of seven per cent over the corresponding period last year, and a jump of one per cent over January, 1954. For the first two months of the current year, sales averaged two per cent higher than for the same months last year.

The three industry branches tabulated in the Census Bureau report registered increases up six per cent with the manufacturer-wholesalers; manufacturer-retailers and chocolate manufacturers gaining 24 per cent and two per cent, respectively. Bar goods remained the same in value but were seven per cent lower in poundage, bulk goods were up six per cent in poundage but down one per cent in value, and five-and-ten cent specialties went up nine per cent in value and two per cent in poundage.

Dear Don:

Today more than ever -- the profit-minded theatre merchandiser whose sales depend on limited time and space should consider only nationally-known profit makers.

Because Pepsi is such a product, we switched to it five years ago!

We chose Pepsi in preference to any other nationally advertised cola for three very good reasons:

1. Its Quality...a fast-selling refreshment liked by every member of the family!
2. For our Fountain and Automatic Machine operation, its cost per gallon is less than any comparable Cola.
3. We were aware of something that is not generally realized...that Pepsi-Cola syrup produces 13 more 10¢ drinks per gallon!

If you see fit to convey our experience to those exhibitors who are also quality and profit-minded, you are at liberty to use the foregoing information in any manner you see fit.

With all good wishes for Pepsi's continued success...

Cordially,

ClubBar Dispensers Offered

NEW YORK—For those exhibitors and concession operators eager to convert beverage profits from pennies into dollers, helpful and detailed suggestions are advanced by Temprite, ClubBar, Inc., manufacturers of ClubBar dispensers, in two publications designed to promote sales of the company's mechanical vendors. By using a convincing and easily-understood series of charts and diagrams, Temprite offers elaborate explanations of methods to build extra profits, save space, lower labor costs, and reduce overhead by installing the ClubBar. Extensive information is offered also on the unit's dimensions, its operation, and its specifications. The all-electric ClubBars are designed to dispense as many as four different soft drinks with plain carbonated water, at a rate of 240 glasses per hour.

Spiro J. Papas, head, Automatic Vending Corporation, Chicago, was recently appointed general convention chairman for the 1955 Popcorn and Concession Industries convention and exhibition to be held November 6-9 at the Morrison Hotel, Chicago.

Proper Planning

without fail. Other sections receive weekly cleaning, and still others get attention at longer intervals. If a dispenser for soft beverages is used, the cleaning job becomes a weekly operation, covering the cleaning of the syrup tank, the ice compartment, lines, and drains.

In actual practice, each individual piece of equipment presents a separate cleaning problem. As a general rule, complete instructions for cleaning and maintaining a piece of equipment can be found attached to it, or its box or crate, on delivery. If such instructions are not attached at the time of delivery, they are always available from the manufacturer on request.

These cleaning schedules, once established, should be carefully posted where the personnel will have them always available. They should be followed to the letter and, if they are, they will add to the long life and to the highly effective service of the machines in question.

Stand Area Must Be Cleaned

The area immediately surrounding the snack bar is just as important as the stand itself, and should also be the responsibility of the concession personnel. A two or three foot strip of easily cleaned and maintained special flooring surrounding the counter and installed in the general service area will keep cleaning work to a minimum. Vinyl plastic, terrazzo, ceramic tile, and other materials have been used frequently and successfully for this purpose. A similar section of special flooring should be placed around the drink dispensing machine, if it has been removed from the immediate stand area.

Although the cleaning up of refreshment items is not, strictly speaking, an actual part of the concession business, such problems have arisen in recent years along that line that a few suggestions should be helpful and profitable to the alert manager.

To remove chewing gum from hard surfaces, a long-handled scraper should be used if the deposit is a day or more old; if it is fresher, sprinkle some kind of dry powder, like whiting, on it and it can then be scraped off. In removing gum from a carpet, saturate the pile surrounding it with a solvable tetrachloride. To remove gum from fabrics, either carpeting or upholstery, apply a piece of dry ice to the deposit long enough for the gum to flake off. A few minutes should be sufficient.

To remove popcorn, use a broom on waxed floors, and a vacuum cleaner on other surfaces.

To remove trash and refuse, detach the vacuum hose from its intake connection, and attach it to the exhaust, using the blowing action to push trash between seats to a central point of collection.

To remove mashed candy on a hard floor, wait until it hardens, and then scrape it off. In small spots on carpets, use alcohol or hot water. Clear warm water in large spots is most effective, feathering out the wet area to make it less conspicuous.

To remove ice cream spilled on carpets, wipe up with a rag saturated with ammoniated water, unless a grease spot has appeared, in which case use a solvent.

To remove beverage spots from a hard surface, mopping up with clear water will suffice, except in the case of marble or terrazze, where immediate action with water is required to prevent permanent stains from developing because of acids. From carpeting, mop up with wet rag and clear water if the job can be done before the spot dries; otherwise, apply hot glycerine and rub with a small, stiff hand brush and wash off with clear water, feathering out to avoid lines of stain.

Cleanliness of the entire concession operation, including the theatre seats and floors, is just as much a matter of preservation of business and materials as it is of pride. Edibles of any kind imbedded in carpeting or upholstering attract mice and vermin.

Dime "Jujyfruits" Set

NEW YORK—A large package of the ever-popular "Jujyfruits" candy is now being offered by manufacturers Henry Heide, Inc., which will sell for 10 cents. The design of the new package is a facsimile of the well-known, small size selling for five cents, which is intended to take advantage of identity built up through the years in the consumer's mind with the product.

The dime-size "Jujyfruits" are available in 24-count boxes and in 100-count cases. According to early reports from the company, the response to date to the new package has been very successful, with the result that it can be depended upon to profitably supplement the nickel item.

W. E. Sala, national advertising director, Dad's Root Beer Company, Chicago, recently told midwest bottlers about the company's 1955 promotional plans.

Hobby and Picture Tieups Provide Extra Revenue At Concession Area

NEW YORK—Motion picture exhibitors all over the country have taken to collecting plastic models of airplanes, ships, automobiles, stage coaches, and other vehicles, and all of them report they are making money as a result.

The movie men are not fooling. They are using authentic plastic models made from Revell hobby kits to dress up theatre lobbies and marquees and to use as contest prizes, gifts to radio and TV personalities, and in various other ways.

For instance, Paramount's "Strategic Air Command," starring James Stewart, is getting top promotion in thousands of windows and on counters across the country by the use of Revell models from its "Strategic Air Command" kit.

The models are authentically scaled and have been praised by top Army and Navy officers including General Curtis Le May and Admiral Robert B. Carney.

Revell, with distributors throughout the country, does a fabulous job of cooperating with exhibitors. Displays plugging the tie-in movie are set up in variety, hobby, and toy store windows. News releases, ad mats, and coop. advertising all add to the joint promotions.

The "Strategic Air Command" poster, for example, shows a picture of Stewart examining an authentic plastic model of the Boeing B-47 Stratojet. The text says, "Everyone in my family enjoys building Revell exact-scale bombers." Underneath that in large letters the poster says, "Starring in 'Strategic Air Command,' a Paramount Picture, Color by Technicolor."

Revell plane kits were sold at the candy counter in New York's Paramount during the recent showing of "Strategic Air Command," with brisk sales reported among adult and youth customers.

Other recent Revell tie-ins include "The Annapolis Story" (Allied Artists), "Sabre Jet" (United Artists), "Red Garters" (Paramount), "Genevieve" (J. Arthur Rank), "The Eternal Sea" (Republic), and "Victory At Sea" (United Artists).

Revell is the country's largest manufacturer of hobby kits, including antique and modern cars, ships, planes, stage coaches, and other vehicles, as well as guns and other authentic replicas. Theatre operators who wish to use Revell models can contact their local Revell representative through local stores handling Revell kits, or by writing Henry Blankfort, Revell, Inc., 4223 Ocean Park Avenue, Venice, Cal.

Display Cases Featured

New all-metal display cases with a capacity of 170 packs of regular and king-sized cigarettes are being offered free of charge now to drive-ins by the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company. The cases, specifically designed to promote on-the-spot, impulse buying when the patron is likely to have change in his hand, can be attached to the top of all makes of upright cash registers. A convenient feature of the unit is a system whereby the packages are stored vertically and are allowed to slip down and forward by gravity for rapid and easy dispensing by the concessions stand cashier, who is the only person who has access to the item.

Two other units also are being offered by Reynolds without cost to the retailer. One particularly suited to the refreshment stand operation is a Cavalier menu board with space enough to display up to twelve different food selections. Another unit is a highly efficient and useful counter or shelf display case.

Drive-In Offers Novel Concession Attractions

SACO, MAINE—One of the most attractive new concession buildings in the state of Maine is at the Saco Drive-In. When Eugene Boragine took over the ownership in 1948, the Saco had space for 275 cars. Today it accommodates 600. The Saco was the first to be built in the state, and Boragine believes it to be the second in New England. First honors go to the Weymouth, Mass., drive-in, built in 1936, the third in the country.

The new concession building is Boragine's pride and joy. It is placed in the center of the ramp area; previously, he had a wooden building at the extreme right of the theatre. The decor is the outstanding feature. It has huge floral murals painted by Boragine himself, who is a graduate of the Rhode Island School of Design.

There are two two-lane curved counters for serving food and, on weekends, eight persons are on the working staff. Theatre Candy Company installed much of the concession equipment, including the large pizza ovens for making and serving "Family Size Pizzas." There is a Manley Aristocrat machine, a Star Frankfurt steamer, Orange Crush dispensers, and all stainless steel and formica counters.

Four Catholic lay groups of the diocese lodged strong protests with the Academy circuit against the showing of RKO's "Son of Sinbad," condemned by the Legion of Decency but approved by the industry's Production Code authority, which opened last week at eight neighborhood houses and four drive-ins. The groups singled out the Academy Circuit, but the film was shown also at two of Fred Rowland's theatres and at drive-ins operated here by Frank Yassenoff. A letter from Mrs. Frank H. Vogel, president, Diocesan Council of Catholic Women, asked Leo Yassenoff, Academy circuit, to cancel the showings, which were held as scheduled. Ads for the attraction carried the statements: "'Son of Sinbad' has the seal of approval of the motion picture production authority," and "Not recommended for children." The Catholic Times also editorially called for a boycott of theatres showing "Son of Sinbad" not only during this attraction but for all subsequent pictures.

Final Hearings Set On Censorship Bill

COLUMBUS — Opposing forces on Ohio film censorship met before the Senate Education Committee in the final week before the scheduled June 23 adjournment date for the legislature. Final hearings on the bill, backed by Governor Lausche's administration and approved by the House of Representatives, were scheduled for June 21.

Norman Nadel, theatre editor, Columbus Citizen, took issue with a statement by Rep. James P. Kilbane, Democrat, Cleveland, that "a lot of objectionable movies had been shown in Ohio" since the present law became ineffective because of court decisions. Most Ohio exhibitors are responsible citizens and have not shown objectionable films," said Nadel. He added, "You cannot say that one field of expression should be censored and another should not."

Rep. Edmund James, chairman, House Judiciary subcommittee which drafted the censorship bill, castigated the Ohio censor board for its "star chamber" proceedings in the past. He said the board acted erroneously on many occasions. He criticized the $3 per reel fee as "excessive," and said that the proposed bill would save the industry some $200,000 per year. James praised cooperation of the film industry in the House committee hearings, singling out John Harlor and Harry Wright, MPA attorneys, and Robert Wile, secretary, Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, for special praise.

Sen. Mosher said his chief objection to censorship is that it shifts responsibility from parent, exhibitors, producers, and the public to a "politically-appointed" board as guardians of morals.

Rev. A. W. Wright, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, Columbus, said the Presbytery of the Columbus area voted to urge film censorship but not necessarily the bill under discussion. Robert Newlon, Columbus attorney and legislative representative of the Ohio Council of Churches, said the council favors censorship as a "proper exercise of the state's police power." Rep. Andrew Putka and Rep. Harry Corkwell, two of the bill's co-authors, urged the Senate committee to report the bill favorably. Mrs. John Phillips, Columbus, chairman of the legislative committee of the Child Conservation League, and Judge Clayton Rose of Franklin County Domestic Relations Court, urged passage of the bill.

NEWS OF THE Territory

Chicago

The long court fight over "The Miracle," an Italian film banned by the police censor board, is now before Judge William J. Touhy, having been referred to him by Judge Harry M. Fisher, who disqualified himself from the case. Fisher heard the first suit, brought by the American Civil Liberties Union, which sought an injunction against the censor ruling, and he decided against ACLU, which took the suit to the Illinois Supreme Court. The court decided that the only ground for censorship was "obscenity," and referred the case back to the lower court for a decision by Judge Fisher. In the event that Judge Touhy rules negatively, ACLU attorneys believe that the way will be opened to challenge the entire film censorship setup in Chicago.

It is the first outdoor stand in the area with in-car speakers equipped to handle full four-track stereophonic sound.

Norm Levinson, MGM publicist here, got a nice plug on "Interrupted Melody" in Cedric Adams' "In This Corner" column of the Minneapolis Star. Said Adams, "Victims of infantile paralysis or any other physical handicap should make a special point of seeing "Interrupted Melody," a movie based on the inspiring life story of Metropolitan Opera singer Marjorie Lawrence. It's one of the most sensational true-to-life yarns in years. Take an extra hanky with you, you'll need it." Levinson says since everybody listens to Adams on his TV broadcasts and reads his column in the mid-west states, he has suggested that theatre managers in their "Interrupted Melody" ads, plus snipe lobby posters, use part of Adams' quote.

Three branch managers who recently received promotions were to be honored at an industry luncheon at the Hotel Bradford Roof Garden: William Kumins, Warners', Al Levy, 20th-Fox, and Gaspar Urban, Paramount. The Variety Club of New England sponsored the affair, with a large turnout expected.

The opening for the new Clinton Drive-In, Clinton, Mass., was tentatively set, according to owners Si Queen and Frank Calvi. The ozoner has complete Century booth equipment, installed by Massachusetts Theatre Equipment Company, and the booth area is large enough to take the two extra VistaVision projectors, should the owners desire to install them for another season.

Hy Young is buying and booking for the new Midway Drive-In, Detroit, Maine. Samuel Lowe, Jr., Theatre Candy Company, who installed the concession equipment, and Eddie Hosmer, Independent Theatre Supply, who installed the projection equipment, journeyed to Maine for the opening of the theatre, owned by Mr. and Mrs. Ken Bishop.

A record 75 golfers participated in the second annual industry golf tourney at the Woodland Country Club. Later that evening, another 50 industryites joined them for cocktails and dinner. The low gross score was won by Jerry Govan, New England Theatres, Inc., who repeated his win of last year. Michael Redstone, president, Redstone Drive-In Theatres, and Malcolm Green, Interstate Theatres, tied for the low net score. Other prizes were distributed and door prizes were given to lucky winners during the stag dinner. Everyone present received a Zippo lighter as a gift from Lyman O. Seley, Manley, Inc., manager, and other novelty prizes were distributed to all by Keene Advertising Company. The committee in charge was James Mahoney, Joseph Cohen, Ken Douglass, Ralph Iannuzzi, Larry Herman, Mel Green, and Dick Dobbyn.

Two anti-trust cases were filed in the U. S. District Court of Rhode Island, each claiming trebled damages of two million dollars. The first involves the Elsa Amusement Co., Raymond F. Murphy, president, operating the Park, Woonsocket, R. I., against the RKO Rhode Island Corporation, Loew's Theatre and Realty Corporation, C and F Theatre Company, and the following distributors: RKO, Loew's, Paramount, 20th-Fox, Warners, United Artists, Universal, Columbia, Republic, and Allied Artists. The second suit involves the Bijou Amusement Company, Raymond F. Murphy, president, and is directed against the same defendants. In the first case, the plaintiff is charging improper runs and clearances, monopoly, conspiracy, etc., from 1945 to the present time. The charges are the same in the second except that the complaint charges damages from

Funeral services for James Winn, former branch manager, United Artists, were held at Waterman's Funeral Chapel. In attendance were many of his industry friends as well as his former colleagues at United Artists.

Joseph P. Liss, 43, district manager, Stanley Warner's Massachusetts theatres, was critically injured in a serious automobile accident on the Worcester Turnpike. His car and one driven by Arnold Bjorklund of Waltham collided at an intersection on the Worcester cut-off at Granite Street. Both cars were completely demolished and both men were rushed to the Worcester City Hospital where Liss's name was placed on the danger list. He underwent a complicated operation for multiple head injuries. Liss was en route to visit the circuit's New Haven theatres when the accident occured. Mrs. Liss and their three children left their Lawrence home for the hospital immediately on receiving word of the accident.

Although no agreement has been reached in the dispute between truck drivers and operators in the Local 25 Teamsters strike, the drivers for film deliveries have returned to their jobs on an hour-to-hour basis. The dispute is over a pay raise, and affects drivers in Massachusetts, Rhode Island, and Connecticut. When the shut-down became effective it was feared that theatres would be in a confused condition. Shippers and bookers in the exchanges, however, had sent out ahead as many prints as possible in anticipation of a lengthy tieup. Theatres in the three states lost only two days of film servicing, and during that time no theatre was reported without a show. Many exhibitors and managers near the exchanges drove into town to pick up and return film prints themselves, in an effort to alleviate the situation.

Richard Smith, right, and Melvin R. Wintman, left, home office executives, Smith Management Company, Boston, are seen as they recently looked over blueprints for Meadows Drive-In, Hartford, Conn., with Israel Bregman, partner, North Meadows Realty Corporation, which is building the $500,000 project for Smith interests.

Dick Dobbyn, treasurer, Maine and New Hampshire Theatres, became a grandfather for the 12th time when his daughter, Mrs. Ethel Toomey, had a son at St. Elizabeth's Hospital, Brighton. . . . Contracts are expected to be signed transferring the Suffolk, Holyoke, Mass., from Rifkin Theatres to Western Massachusetts Theatres, Samuel Goldstein, president, taking a long term lease on the property. Papers will be signed in Springfield shortly for a June 29 transference date. . . . Everything was in readiness to make the opening of the new Watertown Drive-In an auspicious event. The new drive-in will take care of 1,000 cars and has many new innovations. Particularly interesting was the food service. The snack bar will be able to take care of 1,000 people in 15 minutes through the six lane setup. Regular chicken dinners and other full dinners will be served at the Cuisine Lounge. The Terrace Restaurant has umbrellas and tables, regular waitress service, and is set in such a manner that the patrons may see the movies while they eat. A colorful arrangement of stone has been made to add to the beauty of the setting of the restaurant. A highlight of the setting is a large mural on the wall with Walt Disney characters painted in various eating poses with different morsels of food. This mural was painted with the permission of Walt Disney. The restaurant equipment is of Simar, a non-rust stainless steel composition. Fred Quatrano is manager of the new theatre. The Siricas are associated with Quatrano in the theatre corporation. Among the invited guests at the opening, in addition to theatre people, newspaper and radio folk, will be U. S. Senator Prescott Bush, who will cut the ribbon to open the theatre; Governor of Connecticut Abe Ribicoff; Congressman James Patterson; Watertown First Selectman Stuart Atwood; Thomaston First Selectman Charles Eggleston; Waterbury Mayor Raymond Snyder, and others.

Ernie Grecula, former Hartford exhibitor, is reported manager, Poquonock Bridge Drive-In. . . . Ken Kirby and his hillbilly show was on the roof stage, Bridge Drive-In.

A story of courage, intelligence, and cooperation can best be told in the person of Miss Marcia Katz, teen-age daughter of Morty Katz, Connecticut Theatre Circuit executive. Morty's daughter has been in and out of the hospital with a serious illness, and the pretty young lady has had to spend many days home. However, despite this handicap, she didn't give up. She studied and tried to keep up with her high school class work. Then, a two-way speaker system was hooked up from the Katz homestead to the Hillhouse High School, and an experiment period was maintained with Marcia being in the main role. Marcia was able to continue her studies and "go along" like she was in the classroom. The Sunday Register had an educational feature on her work and the climax of the arrangement was Marcia's graduating from Hillhouse High School with her regular class and her getting the Prentiss Hall Award for her achievement in scholarship, citizenship and courage." She will enter Martha Washington College in the fall to take a medical technology course.

Raymond J. Squer, U-I salesman, will be married to Miss Elaine Messer, Waterbury, Conn., July 23. . . . Shep Bloom, 20th-Fox branch manager, and salesman Sam Germaine, returned from the 20th-Fox convention enthusiastic about new product. . . . The new girl at 20th-Fox is Grace Vellaca, who replaced Mary Lou Cohen, who resigned for domestic duties.

William Hutchins, former National Theatre Supply manager, and now in charge of the Philly office, was at his shore cottage recently getting it ready for the summer. . . . Sal Popolizio, 20th-Fox, may go to Pennsylvania for his vacation. . . . MGM assistant shipper Raniero Pantani has left and Richard Iaguessa, previous temporary shipper, has taken his position.

Mrs. Nora Kendall, Republic, left on June 24 for domestic duties. . . . Herb Schaefer, district manager, Buena-Vista, was in town, as was Mike Feloney, Connecticut and Massachusetts representative. . . . Harry Rogovin, Columbia executive, was in town. . . . Walter Silverman, Jack Sanson, SW Strand, Hartford, Conn., recently screened RKO's short subject, "Devil Take Us," prior to its opening, for state and city police and press. From his left are State Police Officer Frank Dowling; City Police Sergeant David Deming; State Police Inspector Thomas Wilson; City Police Captain F. J. Gunshanan; and Mayor Dominick J. DeLucco.

Columbia branch manager, now out ill, was reported progressing, and is expected back on Meadow Street soon.

Music Box, New Britain, Conn., planned on staying open this summer. . . . Ridgeway, Stamford, gave free boutonnieres to dads attending to see "Marty" on Father's Day. Ridgeway had a contest on a makeup list of movie titles with men's names in it. The 25 longest lists were to receive guest tickets to see "Marty."

Crown, Hartford, installed new air conditioning system. . . . Strand, New Britain, received extra publicity for films with lobby display of Dumont TV.

The first drive-in within city limits, 2,070-car Meadows, shifted its completion date to July 8, with Richard Smith, Smith Management Company, which will operate the project under a 30-year lease from the A. J. Bronstein interests, extending an invitation to Broadway and Hollywood figures to attend opening ceremonies. It is believed to be the largest drive-in project in the world, and will have a screen measuring 126 by 50 plus augmented playground facilities. Bronstein, who is building the Meadows under the corporate title of North Meadows Realty Corporation, said that he and his associates are negotiating for additional drive-in sites in Connecticut.

"The Seven Year Itch" gave Lou Cohen, Loew's Poli, a number of impressive breaks. He set up newspaper interviews for Hartford's own Rita Morley, who happened to be visiting between Broadway assignments, a week ahead of film's opening. Miss Morley appeared with Tom Ewell in both the Broadway and the road version of the George Axelrod comedy, on which 20th-Fox based the Marilyn Monroe film.

Some family-appeal ad copy was used by Hector Frascadore, E. M. Loew's Farmington Drive-In: "We have arranged an ideal program for young and old! Shown on our giant wide screen! Make the Farmington Drive-In, the original family drive-in, an entertainment habit for yourself and your friends!" . . . Mike Adorno, assistant general manager, M and D Theatres, ran a caricature of Gina Lollobrigida in a "Bread, Love and Dreams" ad for the Capitol, Middletown, with these lines adjoining: "Dont just stare at me! Peter Perakos, president, and Sperie Perakos, general manager, addressed the annual summer managers' meeting of Perakos Theatre Associates in the Palace Theatre Building, New Britain. Sperie also attended the Yale Alumni Club of New Britain's annual dinner and meeting with Mrs. Perakos. . . . Joseph Bronstein, son of A. J. Bronstein, principal stockholder of the East Hartford Family Drive-In, South Windsor, has been named general manager, succeeding Miss Teresa Locatelli, resigned. . . . A mid-July opening now is slated for E. M. Loew's Candlelight Drive-In, Bridgeport, according to George E. Landers, Loew's Hartford division manager. . . . Herb Schloss, Columbia exploitation department, was in town ahead of "Chicago Syndicate" at E. M. Loew's. . . . Russ Barrett, Stanley Warner Capitol, Williamantic, stressed Eileen Farrell promotion for "Interrupted Melody." Miss Farrell's voice is dubbed in for Eleanor Parker on the MGM sound track. The Williamantic singer was subject of several newspaper breaks. . . . Sal Adorno, Jr., general manager, Middletown Drive-In, has been named to the health and welfare committee of the Middletown Lions Club.

Harry Browning, district manager, New England Theatres, Inc., received a certificate of merit from the Air Force in conjunction with the showing of Paramount's "Strategic Air Command," at the Allyn. . . . The trade extended best wishes to Morris Jacobson, Strand Amusement Company, and Mrs. Jacobson on the graduation of their son, Eugene, from the Medical College of the University of Vermont. . . . Lou Cohen, Loew's Poli, sneak-previewed MGM's "Love Me or Leave Me." Floyd Fitzsimmons, MGM exploitation department, conferred with Cohen and his aide, Al Coury, prior to the screening. . . . Ray McNamara, Allyn, scheduled a sneak preview of Paramount's "The Seven Little Foys."

An obstacle to the proposed construction of a drive-in on Hebron Avenue, Glastonbury, by Jack Leitao of East Hartford, was removed by a decision of Common Pleas Judge John Clark FitzGerald, who dismissed an appeal by two Hebron Avenue property owners, objecting to the installation.

At Berlin, a property owner, Howard M. Culver, started an action in the Court of Common Pleas, appealing from a May decision of the Berlin Zoning Commission. Culver wants a judgment directing the Commission to deny the application of attorney George LeWitt, New Britain theatre owner, to build a drive-in theatre near his Wethersfield Road property.

Bernie Menschell, Community Amusement Corporation, promoted Mrs. Marjorie Mineau, assistant, to manager of the Plainfield, Plainfield, succeeding William Coleman, who has left the circuit. . . . When the Victory's automatic answering service recently handled 800 calls in one day, the management called it quits. By that time seven machines had been worn out and been replaced by the N. E. Telephone Company. Neil O'Brien, manager, reported most of the calls were from children, who found the device amusing. The answering service features a tape recording which tells the times and some of the highlights of the films being shown. O'Brien said that children found calling the service so much fun that legitimate customers almost always found the line busy. The theatre has returned to conventional phone service. The Strand is now the only local film theatre using the automatic service.

Newport

On Father's Day the Newport Family Drive-In gave away cigars to all fathers in attendance. Also, the father bringing in the most children received a box of 50 cigars. Harry Minassio, manager, also advises that the screen is being enlarged for CinemaScope, adding on 16 feet both ends to give a picture 104 feet by 45 feet.

Providence

The Pike Drive-In, seeking to attract early arrivals, recently inaugurated big-time professional wrestling matches as an extra added feature on the Wednesday night shows. . . . Radio station WHIM, one of the most popular dusk-to-dawn stations in this area, will soon change hands. Robert T. Engles and Richard C. Taylor, present co-owners, will turn over their holdings to a company headed by Frank W. Miller, Jr., New York. Because of their affiliations with this city's newest TV station, WPRO-TV, Engles and Taylor are obliged to relinquish their radio station to comply with FCC rulings. . . . The Providence Sunday Journal devoted the entire front page of the feature amusement section to art and glowing reports on "Marty."

The Hill-Top Drive-In, located in nearby East Greenwich, is making a big play for juvenile attendance. Latest give-away was a 26-inch bicycle. . . . Gabby Hayes, hero of many western films, made a personal appearance at nearby Lincoln Park. Needless to say, droves of youngsters turned out to greet the grizzled film-player. . . . The Uptown is running a series of special Saturday afternoon kiddie shows, offering a feature, cartoons, and a serial. . . . The Bay State Drive-In, just across the Massachusetts border, in Seekonk, complete with kiddieland and other customary attractions, is bidding for the patronage of the young at Friday night shows, with cartoon carnivals, lollipops, and other gimmicks.

The Metropolitan has reopened, offering re-runs, and second and third runs. Current policy calls for continuous performances 11 A.M. to 11 P.M., with all seats 25 cents until 1 P.M.

Bayonne

Theatres create traffic, traffic creates trade, and a healthy movie business is good for the economic health of any city, said Nyman Kessler, manager, DeWitt, in a talk before the Bayonne Rotary Club. "The recent finding of the special economic committee of the National Association of Real Estate Boards is most convincing," he continued. "They said that closed film theatres cut realty values and become a community problem. The theatres are in fact segments of neighborhood life and important means of cultural communication."

Newark

The winners for May in the Stanley Warner Spring Movie Festival Drive were first prize, Frank Costa, Warner, Ridgewood; second prize, Adolph Finkelstein, Embassy Orange, and third prize, Jack Conhaim, Stanley, Newark.

Frank Costa, manager, Warner, Ridgewood, presented a "Juvenile Dance Review" on the stage of his theatre. . . . Diane Gordon, manager, Oritani, Hackensack, will present an electric motor driven Thunder-Bird Junior child's car to a lucky child during August. Miss Gordon has also arranged to present a series of 10 summer kiddie shows starting on June 30, with special giveaways at each. She recently arranged with the Fred Astaire Studios to present a Mambo contest in the front of the theatre, under the marquee, in conjunction with the showing of the picture "Mambo."

William Clark, booker, Stanley Warner Jersey zone, is vacationing. . . . Eleanor Bennett, Marge Higgins, and Hannah Bailin, Stanley Warner Jersey office, celebrated birthdays.

Helen Keiser, known to thousands of local movie patrons as the obliging cashier of the Warner, Ridgewood, is resting comfortably in the Valley Hospital, where she underwent a complicated operation. Mrs. Keiser has endeared herself to the public through her helpfulness at the theatre, where she fell in the lobby five weeks ago, fracturing her hip. Frank Costa, manager, said that he has yet to meet anyone as loyal or reliable as she has been in her assistance at the theatre.

"Little Miss Ridgewood" turned out to be twins at the bathing beauty contest held at the Warner, Ridgewood. Bonnie Lynn and Donna Lee MacGregor were hands-down first-prize winners. . . . Sam Roth, manager, Baker, Dover, is vacationing, as is Jack Barrett, manager, Wellmont, Montclair.

But Was It Serge?

NEW YORK — Maurice Seidlitz, manager, 167th Street, in the Bronx, received a call from an anxious patron the other day, who asked him what he had on. The manager replied, "A blue suit." The woman said she had never heard of it, and who was in it. "I am," replied Seidlitz; and it was only after she explained she wanted to know what show was playing that he gave her the information she sought.

Golf Tournament Prizes Awarded

NEW YORK — Close to 200 industrites attended the fourth annual Film Industry Golf Tournament sponsored by Cinema Lodge of B'nai B'rith at Tuckahoe, N. Y.

More than 60 industry organizations and individuals donated the wide variety of beautiful prizes with William German, Inc., posting the money for the leather-encased golf-umbrellas awarded the foursome winners, and Coca-Cola and Pepsi-Cola provided the thermo carrying bags given to the foursome runners-up. Foursomes were filmed as they teed off through the efforts of Irwin Young of Du-Art Film Laboratories, who donated the film and provided the quick developing job to return the film for showing at the banquet. However, the length of the evening's program necessitated a special screening.

Len Gruenberg, RKO, was the winner of the low net gross Film Daily trophy. William Cochrane won the Cinema Lodge Trophy for low gross, while Irving Sochin won the Joe Hornstein Trophy for low net runner-up and Al Fitter won the Jack Alicoate Trophy for low gross runner-up.

The putting contest was won by Sol Strausberg, Milton Mendelwager taking second place, and Jack Hoffberg third. The longest drive contest was won by Milton Salzburg, with Jim Ippolito taking second. The hole-in-one contest was won by Dave Dash, with Phil taking second, and Gordon Craddock third. The birdie contest was won by Gordon Hedwig, with Bill White taking second. Stanley Kolbert was best-dressed golfer and Martin Schiff was the worst golfer. The exhibitors' low gross score was awarded to Ed Fabian and low net to Sid Pearle.

Foursome winners were Jack Hoffberg, George Hornstein, Milton Salzburg, Mort Holland, Wolfe Charney, Murray Strausberg, Marty Friendman, Herman Wintrich, Keith Goldsmith, Max A. Cohen, Jack Trop, Len Gruenberg, Harold Lasser, Al Fitter, Mort Sweig, Harry Lowe, John Bergen, Jr., William Cochrane, Arthur McGuiness, James Ippolito, Sidney Weil, David V. Senft, Larry Pfaff, and Lou Golding.

Foursome runners-up were Mark Finkelstein, Dave Dash, Carl Lovgren, Gordon Hedwig, Sol Strausberg, Herman Sheffler, Clem Perry, Herman Ripps, Frank Marshall, Lou Allerhand, Harold Rinzler, Ben Lorber, William Fabricant, Arthur Gray, Robert Sherman, Charles Alicoate, Perry Wachtel, and Jerry Edwards.

Cinema president Max E. Youngstein presided at the awarding of the prizes with Martin Levine, tournament chairman. Committee members who helped make this year's tournament a success included Herb Berg, Dave Bader, Cy Seymour, Don Mersereau, Charles Alicoate, Jack Hoffberg, Milton Salzberg, Burton Robbins, Alan Robbins, Lou Vorzimmer, Norman Robbins, Robert K. Shapiro, and Milt Livingston.

Lou Allerhand, MGM, won the $200 set of golf clubs posted as the prize of the day. Among the guests of Cinema Lodge at the banquet were Arnold Foster, one of the heads of B'nai B'rith Anti-Defamation League, and Dr. Arthur Lelyveld, national director, B'nai B'rith Hillel Foundations. The Film Industry Golf Tournaments are sponsored by Cinema Lodge as a means of bringing industryites of all faiths together for a day of good fellowship and sport.

division, was in for a conference with branch manager Arthur Newman, and for a call on Charles Hunter, Hunter Film Service. . . . Mrs. Ottilie Fearing won second prize in the first month of the Stanley Warner spring festival campaign, for her promotions at the Avon, Utica. She took it over a few months ago when Al Swett was promoted to the Ritz, Albany, as successor to Jack Swartout, retired. Mrs. Fearing had been a valued aide of Andrew Roy, Stanley, Utica.

Car giveaways marked early-summer promotions in the Fabian Jubilee of Hits campaign. Manager Richard Murphy held one, with merchants cooperating, at Proctor's, Troy. Drive-In supervisor Irwin Ullman arranged another for Mohawk and Saratoga Drive-Ins. City manager Guy A. Graves, with Plaza manager Phil Rapp, and State-Erie manager Lou Rapp, set up another.

With the slogan, "Worship Before You Travel," the Greenbush Drive-In Church held its first services at Alan Iselin's Auto-Vision Theatre. . . . George Bulugeorgas entered Albany Veteran's Hospital for treatment and terminated his brief service as assistant booker, U-I. Anthony Lombardo succeeds him. . . . James Bracken, Stanley Warner contract manager, New Haven and Newark zones, stopped for a periodic visit.

Fabian's Palace manager William With arranged a Davy Crockett Mystery Card Hunt with McManus and Riley clothing store and The Knickerbocker News, to focus attention on the Disney picture. Youngsters under 13 were eligible to compete. They obtained a mystery card during show hours at the theatre, and took it to the "Davy Crockett Trading Post," on the third floor of the large downtown store, where contestants dipped the cards in "magic liquid." A special code appeared on 50 of the cards, indicating the winners' prizes. The News illustrated it with a two-column picture of copy girl Maxine Allen wearing the familiar coonskin hat.

Urging all exhibitor and theatre managers to give their cooperation to the COMPO Audience Awards poll, Harry Lamont, co-chairman with Ray Smith, Warners manager, and Louis W. Schine, Schine Circuit, announced that an area meeting probably will be held at the 20th-Fox screening room.

A plan to screen RKO's "Son of Sinbad" at a group of drive-ins around Albany temporarily snagged.

Plans for the Will Rogers Memorial Hospital audience collection drive in August are moving smoothly in the exchange territory, according to local co-chairmen Ray Smith and Harry Lamont. Salesmen are contacting theatres for pledges, many of which have been received. Lamont predicted that patrons of his and other drive-ins would contribute generously, as would customers of indoor theatres.

Buffalo

Joseph E. DeSilva, for the last two years manager of the Schine Playhouse, Canandaigua, has been appointed city manager for Schine in Rochester, to supervise the operation of eleven houses. DeSilva has worked in Auburn and Canandaigua since joining the circuit three years ago. Formerly, he was with Fox Midwest for 18 years. . . . Paul Johnson, former manager, Eckel, Syra-

Impressed by the reception accorded the highway safety film, "Devil Take Us," manager Robert T. Murphy, Century, began issuing Buffalo Evening News Drivers Club emblems to patrons. Following a private showing of the short for the police and other traffic advisory officials, Police Commissioner DeCillis lauded the highway safety message of the film.

Edward L. Hyman, vice-president, American Broadcasting - Paramount Theatres, was here two days to inspect the local UPT houses, the Paramount, Center, Seneca, and Niagara, and he presided at a meeting in district manager Arthur Krolick's offices, which also was attended by Al Sicignano, home booking offices, among others.

After weighing the pro and con arguments about licensing pay-as-you-see television, George L. David, in his column in The Rochester Democrat and Chronicle, concluded that it is not desirable, particularly because it might eventually establish a monopoly of professional entertainment.

"Theatre and Film" is the subject of a new exhibition at the Dryden Gallery, George Eastman House, Rochester. The staff has combed the local libraries and private collections for sets of pictures to show the relationship of motion pictures to the stage, and some strange and amusing evolutions between stage and movie productions. The exhibit will precede a series of films entitled "Film and Theatre," a reversal of the picture exhibit title.

Eugene Pleahette, managing director, Brooklyn Paramount, was recently presented an award for exceptional service by the Brooklyn Chapter of the National Foundation for Muscular Dystrophy, in the effort to raise funds for Medical Research; and Mimi Benzell, Metropolitan Opera star, was honored for the same effort. The presentations were made by Hon. Paul G. DeMuro, president, N.F.M.D., left, and Mrs. Ida Kastein, president, Brooklyn Chapter, N.F.M.D., right, at a Waldorf-Astoria luncheon.

Harold Bennett, branch manager, National Screen Service, is recuperating from a heart attack in Sisters Hospital, and will be confined several weeks more. The National Screen office staff urges exhibitors in the area to send him cheer up cards. . . . Jeremiah E. Cavanaugh, 77, whose acting career included appearances with Lloyd Nolan, George Arliss and Minnie Maddern Fiske, died in Buffalo General Hospital. Cavanaugh retired from the stage in 1931 and worked as a checker, MGM, Buffalo, for ten years. Later, he was house manager, Century, until 1949, when he retired. . . . Mrs. Elmer F. Lux, wife of the head, Elmart Theatres, who was recently recommended by the 23rd Ward Democratic Committee for endorsement for councilman-at-large, has now eliminated herself from consideration. . . . Bill Carroll, for many years, assistant, Shea Theatres publicity department, has resigned. . . . Clint Young resigned as Schine district manager, Geneva, and has been succeeded by Lou Hart, formerly district manager, Watertown, who will make his headquarters in Albany. Jack Mitchell is the new district manager, Watertown. . . . Church services have started for the third season at the Empire Drive-In, West Webster.

In connection with the presentation of MGM's "Interrupted Melody," Shea's Buffalo, Ed Meade, publicity chief, sent out postcards to a list of music lovers, calling attention to the wonderful melodies featured in the film story of Marjorie Lawrence.

Holland-Wegman Productions announced that it is expanding its business to include the production of 35 motion pictures for television and industry. Jack R. Davis, who previously had his own industry and TV film company in Pittsburgh, has joined the staff to head the new operation. . . . John R. Oshei, who was a prominent theatre manager at one time, has been awarded an honorary doctor of laws degree by Canisius College. Oshei is president of Trico Products Corporation, of which the late Dr. C. Cornell, father of Katharine Cornell, was an officer for many years.

Ben Kulick, president, Faysan Distributors, held a three-day exhibition of the 1956 Admiral TV and radio models the other day at the showrooms. Noted at the exhibition on opening day were Murray Whiteman, former chief barker, Variety Club, Tent 7; Arthur Krolick, district manager, UPT, Buffalo and Rochester; Charles B. Taylor, associate district manager, UPT; Edward Miller, manager, Paramount, and Ben J. Dargush, manager, Center.

A vast color film program to tell the story of the Niagara frontier's industrial might has been launched by the Buffalo Junior Chamber of Commerce. The film, when completed, will be shown on TV for local and national consumption.

A. M. Ellis turned over his Castor in the Northeast on Sunday mornings to the Rev. Paul Larkin. Masses are now said in the air conditioned theatre from eight a.m. until one o'clock Father Larkin, recently at St. Martin of Tours, was assigned by the Archdiocese to start a new parish, Our Lady of Ransom, in the neighborhood of the theatre. Ground has been purchased for the new church and Ellis loaned the Castor to Father Larkin for Sunday services until he is finished building. This good will gesture exemplifies everything those in the industry are trying to do to win over friends for the movies. The Daily News gave a page of pictures to the event.

Norman Beckett, remembered as proprietor of the 13th and Vine Street corner cigar store, continued on Father's Day the practice he established years ago of visiting old men's homes of all denominations and passing out cigars, cigarettes and smoking tobacco to the inmates in honor of his late father.

Doob, manager, Loew's Aldine, for Times Film Corporation's "Naked Amazon" included newspaper space more than tripled; extra radio time purchased; teaser announcements with special sound effects followed by run-of-show announcements, also with special sound effects, all prepared by station WDEL; one-sheets, three-sheets, and six-sheets posted throughout the area; a teaser trailer two weeks in advance of the show and a regular trailer the week preceding the opening; five thousand tabloid heralds, made up in New York; a local coloring contest herald with food fairs and department store cooperating; about 750-to-1,000 gummer teaser stickers that "Naked Amazon is coming." A male fashion show tied in with father's day and produced by Brait's stores which furnished professional models and music. Prizes for the city's father-of-the-year, furnished by Brait's, included a year's wardrobe for the winner and a six-months' wardrobe for the runner-up. The News-Journal papers carried fashion show co-op ads, two half-page ads, and a quarter-page ad. News stories about the event made the fashion pages of both the morning and afternoon papers. Stage show was emceed by Harvey C. Smith, manager, WDEL, who is the station's "Mr. Goodwill," heard daily by thousands of women listeners. Event got plenty advance mention on the air as a result.

The Ellis Drive-In will formally reopen today (June 29) with accommodations for more than 1,000 automobiles, twice its former size. The Ellis, formerly the Brandywine, will be under direction of A. M. Ellis Theatres Company, Philadelphia. The management announced the spot is under the supervision of Larry Ruch, district manager. Don Warner, at present manager, Chester Pike Drive-In, Chester, Pa., will be manager, Ellis Drive-In. The management also announced that it will provide first run pictures to run for a full week. When shorter films are booked there will be two features, the announcement said. The management also stated that the theatre would be in year-round operation, open at least on week-ends during the winter. The boxoffice has been relocated, new roads have been built, and a fence put around the property. Baffles have been built to keep outside noises out of the theatre area. The new screen is 100 feet wide and adaptable for CinemaScope with stereophonic sound. The projection equipment has been increased to 130 ampheres to show new kinds of film. The theatre will provide a cafeteria, besides a snack bar. One part in the area has been set aside for children's recreation, with rides and other equipment for youngsters up to 6 years old. An attendant will be provided. Reopening plans of the Ellis were given a half-column story in the Wilmington Journal-Every Evening recently.

The Hon. William C. Hunt, operator of a south Jersey chain, was honored by the citizenry of Wildwood, of which he is a resident. At a dinner in the Manor Hotel, Hunt was presented with a special achievement award by the Chamber of Commerce for 50 years of "aggressive leadership and community service." As publisher of the Wildwood Leader and other enterprises, Hunt led the fight for modern roads and bridges, elimination of railroad grade crossings, bulkheads to stop beach erosion, construction of board-walks, and community buildings. He was a pioneer in the building of Burdette Tomlin Hospital, Wildwood, and led the successful fight to have the Garden State Parkway circle the seaside of Cape May County. Construction and operation of Cape May-Lewes, Del., ocean-going ferry, due to start this year, was one of the many other civic achievements of the former Senator. The dinner honoring Hunt was attended by 450 men and women of Wildwood and nearby municipalities.

home economists from the gas office division staff and another girl from Radio Station WEEU staged the cooking lessons. Nine business firms cooperated in big display advertising in newspapers, and in displays of home supplies, materials, and novelties at the theare. The school followed another highly successful cooking demonstration, also for three mornings, in the Astor.

The Astor, J. Lester Stallman, manager, launched a Davy Crockett exploitation campaign that will run into July, when prizes will be awarded to at least ten youngsters competing in a "Grin the B'ar Down" contest. A log cabin and a Boy Scout tent, with other displays, were set up in the lobby, and every boy attending the picture received a blank entitling him to get into the contest. Pomeroy, Inc., a deparment store a block from the theatre, is cooperating with the Astor in the contest and the awards of prizes. Pomeroy's also cooperated in display, newspaper advertising, and in store-window exploitation of Davy Crockett novelties.

Theatre men here will support the national move against toll TV. It's the television industry's own headache, they agree, but they don't like the idea in general because of the way that theatres may become involved in subscription productions later, if the plan is adopted on any scale.

Religious services in the Plaza, rented by a faith-healing lecturer, have not drawn as well as religious campaigns in theatres here in previous years. Weather conditions are blamed, in part. Meanwhile, a lot of theatre people are renewing speculation as to what the Masonic Temple Trust, owner, is going to do with the theatre, used for many years part-time by Reading Consistory, Scottish Rites. The Consistory has leased part of the Rajah building for offices, and the Rajah Theatre for meetings, and will move very shortly to that building.

Disney's "Davy Crockett, King Of The Wild Frontier," opened at the Comerford with manager Ed McGovern employing a host of gimmicks. The customary radio and TV advertising was supplemented by newspaper advertising of cooperative type, with two of the city's leading department stores tieing in. Other merchants cooperated with ample displays of Davy Crockett clothing, and with theatre time and date cards in the windows, and by providing twenty gifts that were used as prizes at the opening party, which featured Freddie Chapman, local disc jockey, complete with an official outfit and a horse. Chapman did some preliminary ballyhooing through city streets on horseback, eventually arriving at the theatre to be master of ceremonies at the costume party, and giving all the youngsters attending lolly pops and pop corn. Announcement of the film and show cards were distributed in school neighborhoods and in ice cream and candy stores.

G. Peters held a most successful private prevue showing of "Wizard Of Oz" at the Lee. His letter of invitation read, in part, "From time to time, certain groups and individuals rise up in wrath and take the moving picture industry to task for showing some film or other which they claim is unsuitable for children and young adults. Granting that they are right in some cases, and disregarding the fact that most parents can control the type of movies that their children see, we still feel that these parties are unfair when they fail to commend the many films that are beneficial to young people, and influences for good. As a case point, I would like to call to your attention the local engagement here soon of "The Wizard of Oz." MGM's adaptation of L. Frank Baum's classic children's story is a visual and moral delight. . . . an inspiring and busy exercise for young imaginations. Not one Indian bites the dust, not one urchin sets fire to the old homestead, not one archer impales his enemy with an ashen shaft. Instead, good triumphs over evil, home life and parent-children relations are eulogized, and the Golden Rule is effectively demonstrated. Even kindness to animals is pointed up! "The Wizard Of Oz" was originally shown in 1939. Since then an entire new generation has not, until now, had the privilege of sharing in its delights. From a practical standpoint, "The Wizard Of Oz" offers no end of opportunity for classroom practice on the lower grade levels. "Show and tell" or "see and tell" sessions can be stimulated by the children's seeing the movie. Music appreciation hour should get a new lease on life via the wonderful melodies. Young artists might be given assignments to sketch the 'Straw Man,' the 'Tin Man,' and other of the Oz characters. Above all, the film is mighty good entertainment for adults, too, and we strongly recommend that parents see it with their children. However, we don't want you just to take our word for it. Enclosed is a supply of guest invitations to a private screening of the film. Come, and bring your own youngsters with you. Let us know if you need more for other important faculty people."

Bring Your Smile Along

MUSICAL 83M.

(Technicolor)

ESTIMATE: Entertaining programmer.

CAST: Frankie Laine, Keefe Brasselle, Constance Towers, Lucy Markow, William Leslie, Mario Siletti, Ruth Warren, Jack Albertson, Bobby Clark, Murray Leonard, Ida Smeraldo. Produced by Jonie Taps; directed by Blake Edwards.

STORY: High school teacher Constance Towers leaves her biology-teacher sweetheart Bill Leslie to go to New York, where she will give herself a trial period to see if she can be a successful songwriter. She obtains a room in the boarding house where Frankie Laine and Keefe Brasselle are lodging. Brasselle is a piano player, hopeful of some day being a successful song writer, and Laine is an insignificant singer. They have just been fired from a job in a cheap burlesque house. Brasselle composes a tune and Towers overhears it and writes lyrics to fit the melody. When Brasselle finally learns that Towers is the lyric writer, they join forces and produce another hit tune. Laine, who has recorded their songs, becomes a top singing star. Brasselle confesses his love for Towers, but Leslie arrives in town, and Towers, after fighting with Brasselle, returns to the high school. Laine is asked to sing at the high school dance and he goes, accompanied by girlfriend Lucy Marlow and the reluctant Brasselle. When the trio arrive, Towers realizes her love for Brasselle.

X-RAY: This entry presents light and tuneful entertainment graced with moments of humor. Acting and direction are satisfactory. The singing of Laine and Towers aids. Screen play is by Blake Edwards. Songs include "Bring Your Smile Along," "If Spring Never Comes," "Gandy Dancer's Ball," "Don't Blame Me," "Side By Side," "When A Girl Is Beautiful," "Every Baby Needs A Da Da Daddy," "Italian Mother Song."

TIP ON BIDDING: Fair program rates.

AD LINES: "See Frankie Laine In His Latest Tunefilled Hit"; "Alone In The Big City—She Found A Career And Lost Her Heart"; "Guaranteed To Warm Your Heart And Put A Tune On Your Lips."

Chicago Syndicate (747)

MELODRAMA 83M.

ESTIMATE: Satisfactory program entry.

CAST: Dennis O'Keefe, Abbe Lane, Paul Stewart, Xavier Cugat, Allison Hayes, Dick Cutting, Chris Alcaide, William Challee, John Zaremba, George Brand, Mark Hanna, Carroll McComas, Hugh Sanders. Directed by Fred F. Sears.

STORY: Racketeers these days are operating under the guise of big business, and chief of them all is Paul Stewart with "businesses" all over the country run in one big syndicate, most of them legitimate fronts for more nefarious activities. He has been able to avoid complications with the law because he keeps a private set of books with all other accounts open for inspection. His business manager decides to reveal all to newspaper editor Richard Cutting, but is murdered before he can turn over proof. Cutting gets together a committee of prominent business heads and state officials, and they decide to hire Dennis O'Keefe, brilliant young accountant and former Army sleuth to go after Stewart. He becomes Stewart's assistant and is even given access to private accounts which are listed in O'Keefe's name for protection. Allison Hayes, daughter of the murdered man, teams with O'Keefe, and she becomes Stewart's girl, to the jealous discomfort of Abbe Lane. The latter blows up and threatens to expose Stewart with microfilms of his private accounts which he thought destroyed. He forces her to reveal the hiding place and as they are about to be burned, O'Keefe makes his play, snatches the evidence, and battles it out with Stewart and his thugs until police arrive and kill Stewart. O'Keefe is wounded, not seriously, and he and Hayes plan a future together after the syndicate is broken up.

X-RAY: A fast-moving meller is this entry allegedly exposing the activities of underworld operations, with lots of interesting highlights, a story that should command attention, and good performances and direction. It should do okeh as a supporting feature on the program. Music heard includes "One At A Time," "Cumparsita Mambo," "Greek Bolero," "Cuban Mambo." The screen play is by Joseph Hoffman, based on a story by William Sackheim.

TIP ON BIDDING: Okeh program rates.

AD LINES: "This Is The Movie They Tried To Stop . . . Told By The Guy They Tried To Kill"; "Ten Billion Dollars A Year—Out Of Your Pockets—Into His"; "The Picture They Tried To Blow Up In Our Face . . . Because It Dares To Expose Their Ten Billion Dollar Crime Syndicate."

Creature With The Atom Brain (746)

MELODRAMA 70M.

ESTIMATE: Okeh programmer.

STORY: Deported gangster Michael Granger returns to the U.S. secretly along with scientist Gregory Gay, who has discovered how to make dead men into live robots who can carry out orders and are practically indestructible. Their movements are watched on a television screen. After several murders, homicide captain S. Launer and police laboratory head Richard Denning get into the case. They delve into the backgrounds of the dead people and come up with Granger, and a check abroad shows he and Gay have disappeared. Granger has Launer kidnapped, makes him into a creature, and orders him to kill Denning, but the latter realizes what has happened and escapes from a moving car which crashes, injuring Launer. He heads back to Granger's headquarters, with police following. The house is surrounded and Granger kills Gay when he refuses to order the robots to kill the police. Launer kills Granger before he dies, while Denning is able to smash the equipment that guides the robots.

X-RAY: An interesting entry for the lower half, this has its proper quota of excitement and thrills and should please those fans who go for the "different" in movie kicks, along with some science fiction angles. The story is interesting with screen play and original having been written by Curt Siodmak, and the cast carries out its assignments effectively, with okeh direction and production.

TIP ON BIDDING: Lowest rates.

AD LINES: "Unforgettable Thrills And Chills As Robot Humans Seek Their Victim"; "A New High In Science Fiction Adventure."

It Came From Beneath The Sea (732)

STORY: A new atomic submarine commanded by Kenneth Tobey, while on a shakedown cruise in the Pacific, runs into trouble with a strange object. After the encounter, an unknown substance is caught in the propeller mechanism. Scientists Donald Curtis and Faith Domergue are summoned by the Navy to investigate the object. It turns out to be a giant octopus affected by H-bomb tests in the Pacific. It has started its search for food roaming the ocean at will, destroying vessels and eating humans. U.S. armed forces combine in the search for the monster and it is finally located as it enters San Francisco harbor, where it damages the bridges, wrecks part of the waterfront, and creates panic. Flame throwers finally force it back into the ocean when Curtis and Tobey combine to plant an explosive in a vital spot, and it is destroyed. Tobey and Domergue are free to discuss romance and the future.

X-RAY: There are plenty of exciting moments for everyone who likes this type of entry, with some good special effects adding to the interest created. It shapes up as one of the best science fiction features yet. The direction and production are good. With a little extra selling, this could do okeh. The screen play is by George Worthing Yates and Hal Smith, based on a story by Yates.

TIP ON BIDDING: Program rates.

AD LINES: "It Terrorized A City With Its Savage Killer Instinct"; "An Adventure In The Unnatural That Will Thrill And Chill"; "Every Moment With It Is A Thrill-Packed Adventure With Exciting Entertainment."

The Scarlet Coat

HISTORICAL DRAMA
101M.

(Eastman Color) (CinemaScope)

ESTIMATE: Interesting meller on American Revolution.

STORY: During the American Revolution, Major Cornel Wilde heads the American intelligence forces under General John McIntyre. They have been bothered by messages reaching the British, access to which was possible only by someone highly placed. General Robert Douglas as Benedict Arnold tries to get the names of members of his organization from Wilde but he refuses to divulge them. At a tavern, he thinks Anne Francis is suspicious-looking because she is traveling under a flag of truce from Boston to British-occupied New York, but before he can investigate he is distracted by a British spy posing as an American officer and in the struggle kills him. Wilde is arrested and the message the dead officer was carrying is confiscated. Wilde is assigned to escape and join the British. In New York, he looks up Dr. George Sanders, British espionage officer, who passes him on to Major Michael Wilding, adjutant-general. He believes and likes Wilde. His tale of killing an officer is confirmed when he meets Wilding's friend, Francis' sympathies lies with the Americans and also runs several tests. It is during one of these that Wilde learns that Francis' sympathies lie with the Americans. He is arrested once but Wilding saves him and takes him on a mission, during which he escapes and makes his way to the American forces. Douglas has been warned and flees to the British. Wilding is captured out of uniform, sentenced to hang as a spy, and dies like a gentleman.

X-RAY: History is made easy and exciting for the youngsters via this colorful entry, and perhaps there is an extra selling angle here. Otherwise, the film emerges as moderately entertaining program fare with an interesting yarn, good performances, and adequate direction and production. Because the outcome is known, perhaps some of the edge is worn off, but it still holds interest and the result is enhanced via the use of Technicolor. The screen play is by Karl Tuneberg.

TIP ON BIDDING: Higher program rates.

AD LINES: "A Colorful Section Torn From American History And Presented On The CinemaScope Screen In Glorious Technicolor"; "An Exciting Adventure In The Days When America Fought For Its Freedom"; "Thrills . . . Romance . . . Adventure . . . Suspense Follow 'The Scarlet Coat."

(Technicolor)

ESTIMATE: Should click as reissue.

CAST: Judy Garland, Frank Morgan, Ray Bolger, Bert Lahr, Jack Haley, Billie Burke, Margaret Hamilton, Charley Grapewin, Pat Walshe, Clara Blandick, Toto, Singer Midgets. Produced by Mervyn LeRoy; directed by Arthur Fleming.

STORY: Judy Garland lives with her aunt and uncle on a Kansas farm, with Toto, her dog, and farmhands Roy Bolger, Jack Haley, and Bert Lahr. Because a mean neighbor, Margaret Hamilton, aims to destroy her dog, she runs away, meeting a "Professor Marvel," Frank Morgan, who sends her home. A cyclone hits the spot. Too late to get into the storm cellar with the others, she goes into the house, is struck on the head by a window, falls on her bed, dreaming the tale which unfolds, the story of Oz, the Good Witch, Billie Burke; the Bad Witch, Margaret Hamilton; the Scarecrow, Bolger; the Tin Man, Haley; the Cowardly Lion, Lahr; and how the latter three, with herself, travel to the Wizard so that she can get home, the Scarecrow a brain, the Tin Man a heart, and the Lion courage. Their adventures culminate in Garland destroying the Bad Witch, getting the broom which the Wizard had demanded before he would grant the requests. Garland comes back to Kansas, and her friends and family think she had had a bad dream.

X-RAY: When first reviewed in THE SERVISECTION of August, 1939, it was said: "This is a fine production. It should be a 'must' on anyone's list and should bring into theatres many who never came before. It is picture-making at its highest point into which MGM poured its best talents. Based on 'The Wizard Of Oz' by L. Frank Baum, from every angle this is tops. In short, this is a show that belongs in the industry's front rank. It offers everything that an outstanding picture demands. There are many songs by Harold Arlen and E. Y. Marburg."

TIP ON BIDDING: Better reissue price.

AD LINES: "One Of Our Best Known Fairy Tales Now On The Screen With An All-Star Cast"; "Brought Back For A New Generation's Enjoyment"; "One Of The Screen's Big Hits Returns To Charm You Anew."

Ulysses (5503)

MELODRAMA
104M.

(Color by Technicolor)
(Filmed in Italy) (English-dubbed)

ESTIMATE: Filmization of epic work has angles for regulation as well as for art and specialty spots.

CAST: Kirk Douglas, Sylvana Mangano, Anthony Quinn, Rossana Podesta, Sylvio, Daniel Ivernee, Jacques Dumesnil, Franco Interlenghi. Directed by Mario Camerini; produced by Dino De Laurentiis and Carlo Ponti, in association with William W. Schoor.

STORY: The 10-year-old Trojan war ended in victory for the Greeks via the "Trojan horse" strategy of "Ulysses," as played by Kirk Douglas. All return home except Douglas, his wife, Queen Sylvana Mangano, holds off more than a dozen pressing suitors who would marry her, convinced that Douglas is dead. Their young son, Franco Interlenghi, is powerless against them. On the shores of an island, princess Rossana Podesta and her maidens discover the body of Douglas washed ashore. He regains his health with care but his memory seems gone. Podesta grows to love him, but before a marriage is consummated, he recalls his identity, how he was washed ashore during a wild storm and how, before that, the encounter he and his men had with the one-eyed monster Polyphemus, how they got through the Sea of the Sirens, and his adventure with enchantress Circe. His identity established, he has a ship take him the short distance home. Meanwhile, another suitor, Anthony Quinn, has appeared and impressed Mangano, and she is forced to set a date for choosing a groom who shall emerge from a series of games. Douglas arrives disguised as a beggar and only confides his real identity to his son. At the games, he reveals his identity and proves he is still king and best man by killing all who would have taken his place. He and his family are reunited to rule in peace in the future.

X-RAY: The filmization of Homer's Odyssey is an impressive work filled with adventure, plenty of action, colorful and unusual settings, and is aided considerably by special effects and unusual situations. It can play in regulation houses with selling and, assisted by the presence of Kirk Douglas, it can also play the art and specialty spots by virtue of the subject matter. Whichever, it has plenty of selling angles. The story is pretty interesting throughout and the cast does well, with the direction and production good. Technicolor provides help in the presentation. The fact that this is dubbed is something that may be forgotten after the film gets underway and audiences get a chance to become interested in the yarn. The screen play is by Franco Brusati, Mario Camerini, Ennio de Concini, Hugh Gray, Ben Hecht, Ivo Perilli, and Irwin Shaw.

TIP ON BIDDING: Depending on individual situation.

AD LINES: "A Classic Of Adventure, Thrills, And Violent Romance"; "There Never Was A Man Like Ulysses—Loved By All Women And Hated By Most Men"; "Adventure After Adventure For 10 Long Years Made A Man Long For Home And His Beautiful Wife."

ESTIMATE: Highly amusing comedy.

CAST: Humphrey Bogart, Aldo Ray, Peter Ustinov, Joan Bennett, Basil Rathbone, Leo G. Carroll, John Baer, Gloria Talbott, Lea Penman, John Smith, Louis Mercier, George Dee. Produced by Pat Duggan; directed by Michael Curtiz.

STORY: Three convicts, Humphrey Bogart, Peter Ustinov, and Aldo Ray, and the latter's pet snake escape from Devil's Island on Christmas Eve. Until they can obtain money, clothes, and papers, they decide to remain within sight of the prison in Cayenne among hundreds of other prisoners on parole. They deliver a letter to Leo G. Carroll, manager of the local general store, owned by Basil Rathbone. They convince Carroll to permit them to repair the leaky roof, figuring to take what they need when they are ready to leave and cut any throats that needed cutting. Confused and absent-minded Carroll, who has made a mess of the accounts and fears Rathbone's arrival any day, agrees to their proposal. The three are taken with Carroll's wife Joan Bennett and daughter Gloria Talbott, the latter in love with Rathbone's nephew and heir John Baer. They are invited to have Christmas dinner. Rathbone arrives unexpectedly and announces he wants to inspect the books before Bogart can get a chance to alter them. He makes himself so obnoxious that everyone is happy when Ray's snake kills him in his sleep. Bogart writes a will dividing all between Carroll and Baer, but the latter destroys the document. He also refuses to consider marrying Talbott, and they consider the snake treatment for him but he is bitten entirely on his own while going through his uncle's effects. They decide that newly arrived young and handsome doctor John Smith is just right for Talbott and send him in to comfort her. Dressed in regular clothes and with the right papers, they are ready to leave, but escape from the island has lost its zest and they decide to return to prison and keep an eye on the Carroll family.

X-RAY: Containing lots of charm, a number of amusing situations, scenes, and humorous dialogue, this entry, based on a play by Albert Husson, has much to offer audiences in the way of entertainment. A number of selling angles are also to be found as well as a highly saleable cast that performs in fine fashion. The story develops at a leisurely pace and interest is kept on high pretty much throughout. Direction and production are good. Where adult comedy and satire go, this should be successful. Song credits include "Sentimental Moments" and "Ma France Bien-Aimee." The screen play was written by Ranald MacDougall.

TIP ON BIDDING: Higher rates, depending on situation.

AD LINES: "They Admitted They Were No Angels But Had Lots Of Fun Getting Their Wings"; "Lots Of Fun For Everyone In This Amusing Tale Of Three Badmen Who Find Crime Pays Off In A Different Way"; "Chuckle Your Blues Away With This Filmization Of A Comedy Play Success."

ESTIMATE: Better Martin and Lewis comedy.

CAST: Dean Martin, Jerry Lewis, Diana Lynn, Nina Foch, Raymond Burr, Mitzi McCall, Veda Ann Borg, Margery Maude, Romo Vincent, Nancy Kulp, Milton Frome, Donna Percy, Emory Parnell, James Burke, Tommy Ivo, Whitey Haupt, Mickey Finn, Peggy Moffitt, Johnstone White, Richard Simmons, Louise Lorimer. Produced by Paul Jones; directed by Norman Taurog.

STORY: Raymond Burr, notorious jewel thief, murders a man in a hotel and steals a fabulous diamond. As police arrive, he plants it in the pocket of Dean Martin, instructor at a fashionable girls' school, who is winding up his vacation prior to returning to the school with another teacher, fiancee Diana Lynn. Martin decides to get a hair cut in the hotel barber shop, and since the regular barber is out to lunch, apprentice Jerry Lewis takes over and almost ruins him. Burr decides to plant the stone on Lewis and sends him out to wife Veda Ann Borg. She tries picking his pocket as Burr arrives. Borg thinks she is triumphant but winds up with a wad of bubble gum. Burr takes off after Lewis. At the station, Lewis is forced to buy a child's half-fare ticket due to a shortage of funds. To avoid both the conductor and Burr, he ducks into Lynn's compartment. She thinks he is a child and permits him to stay. At the station, Nina Foch, in love with Martin, finds Lewis in Lynn's compartment and jumps to conclusions, but Martin smooths this out with the school board. Foch invites Lewis to stay at her home for the weekend with a younger brother, hoping to get more evidence. He has a time with the girls at school and Burr in the background. A final chase scene has them taking in all sorts of stunts over a tricky water course with Martin assisting, and it winds up with Burr's capture and the recovery of the diamond. Martin is recalled to the Air Force and when he boards the train after kissing Lynn goodbye, he decides to get a hair cut and winds up sitting for barber Jerry Lewis.

X-RAY: Lots of laughs and a goodly number of humorous situations are to be found in this latest Martin and Lewis funfest, which shapes up as one of the best the team has turned out. It moves fast and embraces a story that is interesting, good performances, and better direction and production. Lewis gets a chance to display much talent and appears on screen practically throughout. The screen play was written by Sidney Sheldon and was suggested by a play by Edward Childs Carpenter from a story by Fannie Kilbourne. Tunes heard include "Simpatico," "Love Is All That Matters," "I Know Your Mother Loves You," "Relax-Ay-Voo," "I Like To Hike," "Every Day Is A Happy Day."

TIP ON BIDDING: Higher rates.

AD LINES: "'You're Never Too Young' Or Too Old To Have Some Real Fun With Martin And Lewis"; "Chase Your Blues Away—Catch Dean Martin And Jerry Lewis At Play"; "Fun For Old And Young Alike As The Big Girls Think Jerry Lewis Is A Little Boy And The Little Ones Think He Is A Big Boy."

REPUBLIC

City Of Shadows (5436)

MELODRAMA
69M.

ESTIMATE: For the lower half.

CAST: Victor McLaglen, John Baer, Kathleen Crowley, Anthony Caruso, June Vincent, Richard Reeves, Paul Maxey, Frank Ferguson, Richard Travis, Kay Kuter, Nicolas Coster, Gloria Pall, Fern Hall. Associate producer, William J. O'Sullivan; directed by William Witney.

STORY: Victor McLaglen, larcenous but kind-hearted old thug, is placed in power in the underworld by the maneuverings of John Baer, a lad with brains, whom he puts through law school. Baer, however, after meeting Kathleen Crowley, sister of a school mate, Nicolas Coster, decides to go straight and works out a protection and insurance service that would keep all on the right side of the law. McLaglen pretends to go for the idea, but all the while is double crossing Baer with his gang of racketeers. When the district attorney and his men get wise to McLaglen, Baer wises up to the double cross. McLaglen agrees to give himself up, but postpones it to start Baer and Crowley on their honeymoon by escorting him to his lodge atop a mountain reached via a ski lift. To save themselves, his own mobsters give chase and shoot it out with him on the snow covered mountain. McLaglen is killed, but not before he shoots the thugs.

X-RAY: This racketeering meller suffers more from its screen play by Houston Branch than anything else. The early portion of the film is entirely too talkie, there is too much legal mumbo jumo, etc., but action and suspense do manifest themselves in the last two reels. Direction is fair and the low budget production is readily discernible. Performances are adequate, with John Baer showing the most promise.

AD LINES: "The Baby-Face Mouthpiece —His Legal Education Came From Slot Machines And Law School"; "Their Business Was Legitimate Because The Law Couldn't Touch Them"; "Out Of The Gutter And Back Into It."

Don Juan's Night Of Love (5435)

MELODRAMA
71M.

(Italian-made)
(Dubbed English dialogue)

ESTIMATE: Uneven import with some selling angles.

CAST: Raf Vallone, Silvana Pampanini, Michele Philippe, Jacques Castelot, Roland Armontel, Giulio Donnini, Gualtiero Tumiati. Produced by Niccolo Theodoli; directed by Mario Soldati.

STORY: Raf Vallone, a soldier in the French army, is forced to desert when he talks against Madam Pompadour. He takes refuge in the castle of Prince Gualtiero Tumiati, an enemy of the French king. Vallone journeys to an inn where he meets its owner, Silvana Pampanini, and a band of smugglers. After leading the band in a raid on the Superintendent of Customs, Vallone becomes a popular hero and manages to unite the smugglers of the vicinity into an army. Befriending nobleman Roland Armontel, Vallone wins the trust of Tumiati, with the castle being converted into a storehouse for the smuggled goods. When Tumiati dies, Superintendent of Customs attempts to seize the castle but is captured by Vallone's men. Michele Philippe (Madame Pompadour) was to have been received by the Superintendent at the castle. Vallone, disguised as the Superintendent, is on hand for the arrival of Philippe. When the deception is discovered, Philippe orders troops to capture Vallone who has fled to Pampanini's inn. French troops cross the border illegally and with the help of a betrayer manage to capture Vallone. He is condemned to death but escapes. Vallone uncovers his betrayer and gives him his just punishment. Philippe is also in the castle with Pampanini, who has come to plead for her lover's life. Philippe recognizes the border violation and pardons Vallone who promptly departs for Italy with Pampanini.

X-RAY: This entry is best suited for art and specialty audiences, but it may also serve in some action spots. The film is mildly entertaining, but on occasions tends to drag. Acting and direction are satisfactory, with production being fair. Pampanini's appeal and the entry's title, which is somewhat misleading, can be used for exploitation. The dubbing is good. Written by Mario Soldati, Vittorio Nino Novarese, Giorgio Bassani, and Augusto Frassineti.

AD LINES: "When He Stormed Castles —Kings Trembled . . . And Women Dared To Dream"; "No Castle Wall Could Stop Him . . . No Woman Could Resist Him"; "History's Prince Of Lovers."

The Road To Denver (5406)

WESTERN 90M.

(Trucolor)

ESTIMATE: Okeh western.

CAST: John Payne, Mona Freeman, Lee J. Cobb, Ray Middleton, Skip Homeier, Andy Clyde, Lee Van Cleef, Karl Davis, Glenn Strange, Buzz Henry, Daniel White, Robert Burton, Anne Carroll, Tex Terry. Directed by Joe Kane.

STORY: Cowhand John Payne is always getting his hot-headed brother Skip Homeier out of trouble. They break up, going separate ways. Payne is offered a job by livery stable owner Ray Middleton, and he does alright with the position as well as with his daughter, Mona Freeman. Homeier gets a job with saloon owner and underworld boss Lee J. Cobb. Payne tries to warn him and even offers him half of his interest in a stage coach line being started by Middleton and himself, but he prefers to remain with Cobb. The latter learns of a large gold shipment to be made on the initial run to Denver and uses Homeier as a hostage to force Payne to turn over the gold after guessing the relationship between the two. Payne pretends to go along but tricks Cobb, after which there is a showdown with Cobb killed and several others killed or wounded. There is a contest between the two brothers, but Homeier finds that he cannot shoot Payne. The feud between the two seems to be over. Payne and Freemen wed.

X-RAY: This should win approval of most western fans with some action, gunplay, intrigue, and a fairly interesting story, okeh performances, and average direction and production. It should make up well on the program. The screen play is by Horace McCoy and Allen Rivkin, based on a Saturday Evening Post story by Bill Gulick.

AD LINES: "Brothers Face To Face And Gun Against Gun"; "An Action-Packed Yarn Of Men Fast On The Draw"; "Thrilling Adventure . . . Fast-Moving Action . . . Gunsmoke On The Wide-Open Range . . . All On 'The Road To Denver'."

UNITED ARTISTS

Not As A Stranger

DRAMA 135M.

(Kramer)

ESTIMATE: Highly-touted filmization of popular best-seller should wind up in the better money.

CAST: Olivia de Haviland, Robert Mitchum, Frank Sinatra, Gloria Grahame, Broderick Crawford, Charles Bickford, Myron McCormick, Lon Chaney, Jesse White, Harry Morgan, Lee Marvin, Virginia Christine, Whit Bissell, Jack Raine, Mae Clarke. Produced and directed by Stanley Kramer.

STORY: Robert Mitchum, intense young medical student, has a passionate desire to become a doctor. His close friend, Frank Sinatra, another student, and Olivia de Haviland, head operating nurse, understand and appreciate his intentions. When the bursar threatens to expel him unless he can pay his tuition bill, he goes to his drunkard father, Lon Chaney, for the money left him by his mother, only to find that he has spent it. With the help of his professor, Broderick Crawford, he is able to get an extension. He learns that de Haviland has saved a bit of money, and he courts her although he is not in love with her. She offers to pay his tuition after they are married. He sees, during internship, the body of his father, victim of an accident. He goes to practice in a small town as the assistant to long-established Dr. Charles Bickford, while de Haviland gives up nursing to make a home and hope for a family. One of those he meets on his calls is Gloria Grahame, to whom he is attracted. Mitchum also discovers that Bickford has a serious heart condition and that Dr. Myron McCormick, director of the hospital in the area, is inept and uncaring. De Haviland sees Sinatra, who gives her an examination and reports that she is pregnant, a condition she hides from Mitchum. Sinatra finally informs him and when he tries to approach de Haviland, she sends him away. Bickford collapses and Mitchum orders an emergency operation. He makes a miscalculation and Bickford dies. He is broken at losing a friend and because he finally made a mistake and turns towards home and de Haviland, who sees that he has a definite need of her and comforts him.

X-RAY: Here is an absorbing drama that has much to offer. To exhibitors it offers a chance for big returns since the public has been saturated by both the novel, a top best-seller, and by the campaign on the film which has been reaching record proportions both as to expenditures and as to the wideness of the coverage in the various media. To the public it offers a dramatic, highly interesting dramatization of a literary work. Interest is kept on high throughout the running time with story, performances, direction and production in the better category. There is also some medical footage inserted judiciously which should get definite reaction, as should some quips and statements on the practices of the medical profession generally. Incidentally, there should be a great deal of word-of-mouth discussion on whether the film follows the book, which it doesn't exactly, and on whether the casting was appropriate, with comments pro and con. Particularly good are Sinatra, de Haviland, Crawford, and Bickford. The screen play was written by Edna and Edward Anhalt, based on the novel by Morton Thompson. There is a song heard as background music, "Not As A Stranger." This bears a Legion of Decency "B" rating.

TIP ON BIDDING: Higher rates.

AD LINES: "He Had A Desire To Be A Doctor And Nothing Nor No One Could Stop Him"; "One Of The Biggest Best-Sellers Of All Time Brought To The Screen By A Top Director-Producer Using The Best Cast Possible"; "There Has Never Been Entertainment Like This."

WARNERS

The Dam Busters (420)

MELODRAMA 102M.

(English-made)

ESTIMATE: Highly interesting war entry.

CAST: Richard Todd, Michael Redgrave, Ursula Jeans, Basil Sydney, Patrick Barr, Ernest Clark, Derek Farr, Charles Carson, Stanley Van Beers, Colin Tapley, Raymond Huntley. Directed by Michael Anderson.

STORY: In London in 1942 scientist Michael Redgrave conceives of a way to destroy Germany's Rhur dams. Redgrave submits his plan to the Air Ministry and after much difficulty it is accepted. Redgrave now begins experimentation in an attempt to make the bomb. Wing Commander Richard Todd is chosen to organize and train a special group. Since the bombs must be dropped at a specific distance and a specific height from the dam wall, the flying group must practice low altitude night flying until they reach a degree of perfection. After many complications are finally worked out, the planes depart on schedule. Arriving at the targets, they encounter heavy flack and have difficulty in dropping the bombs at the desired spot, but finally succeed in destroying the dams.

X-RAY: This off-beat war entry is presented in a factual and convincing style, the result being good entertainment for art and specialty audiences and okeh in some regulation houses. In addition to a fine story that maintains an element of suspense throughout, the film encompasses good performances, direction, and production, with a nod to the special effects department. Screen play is by R. C. Sherriff, based on the book by Paul Brickhill and on Wing Commander Gibson's "Enemy Coast Ahead."

AD LINES: "They Were Prepared To Give Their Lives . . . For A Job That Had To Be Done"; "It Was Impossible. No One Could Do It . . . But They Would Risk Their Lives In The Attempt"; "A Scientist, A Group Of Airmen, And A War To Be Won."

Land Of The Pharaohs (419)

HISTORICAL DRAMA 106M.

(CinemaScope) (WarnerColor)

(English-made)

ESTIMATE: Highly interesting entry.

CAST: Jack Hawkins, Joan Collins, Dewey Martin, Alexis Minotis, James R. Justice, Luisa Boni, Sydney Chaplin, James Hayter, Kerima, Piere Giagnoni. Produced and directed by Howard Hawks.

STORY: In 2900 B.C., Pharaoh Jack Hawkins returns from the wars with tremendous treasure and decides to concentrate on begetting an heir with Kerima and on building a tamper-proof tomb to house himself and his treasure in the life hereafter. He asks captive James Robertson Justice to submit an idea, which he likes, and he agrees to let his people go if he will build it for him although he himself must die because he will know the secret of the tomb. He issues a call and thousands heed it and come to labor for years on the huge pyramid. Meanwhile, from one of his satellites, comes Princess Joan Collins, who doesn't bring any tribute but herself. Hawkins makes her his second wife. She desires his vast treasure and plots with captain of the guard Sydney Chaplin to get it after becoming Queen of Egypt. Justice is going blind and has to rely on son Dewey Martin to read the blueprints, knowing that he too may die when the work is completed. Collins and Chaplin engineer the death of Kerima as well as that of Hawkins. High priest Alexis Minotis informs Collins that before she can become queen, she must participate in the burial service in the pyramid and sets Justice and his people free. Once inside the pyramid, Minotis sets the sealing mechanism in motion and Collins and other faithful followers of Hawkins remain buried alive with their king. Justice and his freed people head for home.

X-RAY: The hero of this film seems to be a pyramid on the sands of Egypt and its builders, and the way it is erected is highly interesting while the thousands in the cast make for a very impressive presentation. The story itself is interesting and its off-beat setting and historical background adds to the overall effect while the cast offers good performances and the direction and production are in the better class. The use of color and CinemaScope is appropriate and provides an assist. The screen play was written by William Faulkner, Harry Kurnitz, and Harold Jack Bloom. This bears a Legion of Decency "B" rating. This was filmed in Egypt and Italy.

TIP ON BIDDING: Higher rates.

AD LINES: "A Cast Of Thousands Made This Startling Film Possible"; "There Never Has Been A Film Like This With Its Thousands Of Cast Members . . . Its Colorful Spectacle . . . Its Adventurous Settings"; "A Great Adventure Brought To The Screen In CinemaScope And In WarnerColor."

Appointment In London

MELODRAMA 96M.

(Associated Artists)

(English-made)

ESTIMATE: Fair entry on British Air Force.

CAST: Dirk Bogarde, Ian Hunter, Dinah Sheridan, Bill Kerr, Bryan Forbes, William Sylvester, Charles Victor, Anne Leon, Walter Fitzgerald, Terence Longden. Produced by Aubrey Baring and Maxwell Setton. Directed by Philip Leacock.

STORY: In 1943, the British Bomber Command was trying to knock out Germany from the air, and Wing Commander Dirk Bogarde had more than done his share, flying almost 90 missions and not wanting to stop until he did reach that figure. He and several of his men are told that they have an appointment in London to receive decorations for their bravery in the near future. Enroute for a celebration, they meet Dinah Sheridan, an attractive girl widowed early in the war and now a naval intelligence officer. She and Bogarde are attracted to each other. When a particularly big raid is scheduled, Bogarde is told he must remain behind, but when one of the aircraft has an accident at the last minute, he transfers the crew to his plane and takes off, taking over command when the commander is shot down. They return and he is reprimanded in not too harsh a way and transferred out of the country Sheridan promises to wait for him.

X-RAY: There are some good background shots of a bomber squadron in action, as well as revealing scenes in the air and on the base. The story is of average interest and the cast, direction, and production are okeh. It can either go in the art and specialty spots or on the lower half in some situations. The screen play is by John Woolridge and Robert Westerby.

AD LINES: "They Played Hard On The Ground And Fought Tough In The Air"; "He Had An Appointment With A Girl And Destiny"; "Nothing Could Stop His Reaching London At The Right Time For The Right Girl."

Burlesque Follies

BURLESQUE 57M.

(Exclusive Films)

ESTIMATE: Satisfactory for burlesque spots.

CAST: Aleene, Lotus Wing, Pat Dorsey, Hillary Dawn, Peggy Bond, Mickey Kidwell, Eileen DuPre, Loucielle Hodges.

STORY: Seen is the actual stage show at the "Follies of Los Angeles." The show opens with a square dance number performed by the chorus. Mickey Kidwell, in abbreviated costume, does a strip dance. Next is a comedy skit, followed by a dance by Lotus Wing. A crooner vocalizes while the chorus does a Latin routine. Hillary Dawn is the next performer. This is followed by a shell-game comedy routine. Peggy Bond engages in a stripping act. German accented comedians now appear in an army skit. Pat Dorsey follows this with a dance. The chorus does a can-can dance. Eileen DuPre does a dancing strip. The show is concluded with each performer being introduced.

X-RAY: This entry has some diversity and will be adequate in burlesque spots and other suitable houses. The comedy routines are in keeping with burlesque tradition.

AD LINES: "A Complete Burlesque Show For The Price Of A Movie Ticket"; "Gals Galore . . . And What Gals!"

DOCUMENTARY 70M.

(Times)

(Color) (Filmed in Brazil)

ESTIMATE: Exploitable documentary will draw mixed reactions.

CREDITS: Produced, photographed, and directed by Zygmunt Sulistrowski; co-producers Vincent Bejtman, Charlotte P. Rose.

STORY: Five men and two women set out to explore the uncharted area of the dreaded Matto Grosso and to seek a legendary band of Indians in the interior after taking in the annual carnival in Rio de Janeiro with all its color, dancing, and pretty girls. They set out across treacherous waters and swamps, amidst snakes and crocodiles. One is wounded and while awaiting help battles a boa constrictor by hand and wins. They escape a charge of water buffalo; a jaguar is hunted and killed. They are forced to ride through shallow waters loaded with hundreds of vicious crocodiles who attack the boats and overturn one with the occupants barely escaping with their lives. Huge spider webs are seen, as well as a battle between female spiders. They come across the Indian tribe and find them friendly, with the unclad women seen at work, the youngsters at play, and the men hunting and spear fishing. A secret funeral service is filmed with attendant dances and ceremonies recorded. Seen too is one of the women attacked by an anaconda snake and her rescue by a male crew member. The expedition winds up a year later at Rio de Janeiro just in time for the carnival again.

X-RAY: A number of sequences in this documentary are highly interesting and suspense-filled, with much of interest passing before the cameras. With proper selling and exploitation, this colorfully-filmed entry of the Brazilian interior could give a good account of itself box-officewise. Little-seen shots of animals attacking humans add to the excitement, as do those of beasts not often seen so closely by humans. Whether or not bare-bosomed footage of female native Indians are an attraction or a hindrance depends on the individual theatre situation, and bookings should be guided accordingly as there is quite a bit of such film in the overall feature. It makes a questionable addition to the program in view of the current objections being raised by various groups. The narration was written by Herb Meadow, Jan Lechon and E. Egan.

AD LINES: "Raw . . . Authentic . . . Real . . . "; "Astounding . . . Authentic . . . Awesome"; "The True-Life Safari Into A Sudden-Death Land Of Terror."

Documentary

BRITAIN'S CHOICE. British Information Service. 13½m. The film illustrates the assembly of the M.P.'s for the first meeting of the House after a General Election and the election of the Speaker. The destruction of the old House during the war is shown and its replacement by the new British House of Parliament, with opening day ceremonies being attended by King George VI. The short describes how a general election is conducted and shows scenes of campaigning, canvassing, and speechmaking. When the election is decided the new M.P.'s meet in session, and they are summoned in a traditional ceremony to the place when the Queen will speak. GOOD.

THE QUEEN'S NAVY. British Information Service. 20m. The film deals with the Royal Navy of today, its ships, and its men. Shown are scenes of sailors being trained and readied for their life in the British Navy. British Marines are also shown performing maneuvers that require skill and courage. Aboard British ships, men are seen at their jobs. The navy research department is observed performing experiments that will result in better ships and equipment. GOOD.

ARIZONA SHEEPDOG. Walt Disney—Buena Vista. 21m. This gorgeous Technicolor short follows the long trek of Arthur Allen and his border collies, Nicky and Rocky, who drive a herd of sheep from Arizona's Navaho country to the high meadows of the San Francisco peaks. The manner in which the dogs herd the strays, one even fighting off a mountain lion, is not only interesting but remarkable and thrilling to watch. Photography is by Gordon Avil; narration by Rex Allen; music by Wiliam Lava; it was written by Janet Lansburgh and Bill Wash; and produced and directed by Larry Lansburgh. EXCELLENT.

Color Travel

HIGHLAND JOURNEY. British Information Service, Technicolor. 24m. The film takes us on a tour by road, rail, and steamer through Scotland, from Edinburgh to the Isle of Skye. The route taken meets the Highlands at Killin and then goes over the wild Rannoch Moor and onward to the entrance to the Great Glen. The trip continues past lochs and mountain peaks to the shores of the Atlantic. The camera captures the varied beauty of the Scottish Highlands, with all their historical associations, and shows something of the lives of the farmers of the region. EXCELLENT.

They see Denver's state capital building and then visit Mountain View Park, which is flanked by Colorado's rugged mountains. The tourists drive on mountain passes, which are narrow and winding. They observe the beauty of Pike's Peak and the surrounding country. They fish in the mountain streams. FAIR. (7511).

ISLES OF LORE. 20th-Fox—CinemaScope Specials. 10m. The island of Rhodes, where the famous Colussus of Rhodes stood in 300 B.C., is viewed. Entering through the medieval gate of St. Catherine, the tour of the island takes in the Square of Hippocrates, Street of Socrates, and the old Towers of Solomon. The color and atmosphere of this traditional isle is captured. GOOD. (7508).

LAND OF THE NILE. 20th-Fox—CinemaScope Specials. 9m. We are taken on a tour of Cairo and the historic landmarks of Egypt. Seen are the Mohammed Aly Mosque; El Ashar University, one of the oldest in the world; the Mousky Bazaar; and the ancient and awe-inspiring Sphinx and Great Pyramids. GOOD. (7506).

PUNTS AND STUNTS. 20th-Fox—CinemaScope Specials. 9m. The color camera captures the highlights of the past season's gridiron duel between Illinois and Ohio State. We are taken behind the scenes at Illinois to watch the 175 piece piece band practice for their performance at the game. They will supply music for thousands of spectators. GOOD. (7509).

Novelty

MINUTE MEN. Universal-International—Variety View. 9m. This reel is devoted to showing the working of the Civil Air Patrol giving the background, showing typical students, an operation in action during an actual flood in the mid-west, procedure and training. Tie-ups can be made on this which could insure better than average reaction and attendance. EXCELLENT. (1344).

SAFETY IS THEIR BUSINESS. RKO—Pathe Screenliner. 8m. This is the story of the Underwriters Laboratory and the way they test various products to determine if their label of safety should be put on them. The laboratory is not concerned with efficiency, but with safety from fire, casualty, and crime. In U.L. headquarters we see engineers belabor electric blankets, drop electric irons, twist cords, strain and tilt step ladders, bang television tubes, overheat pressure cookers, and burn everything from kitchen matches to a huge glass-block wall. GOOD. (54212).

Sports

DOWNHILL YACHTS. RKO—Pathe Sportscope. 8m. The Appalachian Mountain Club engages in its annual session of white water canoeing. Thin as birchbark, and many times stronger, the metal canoes ride over the rough waters of a high mountain creek. At first the ride is easy, but soon the water grows unruly. Through big rapids, which threaten to grind the boats to pieces, the paddlers pick a path, sometimes close to rocky bank, sometimes out in the center of the boiling stream. FAIR. (54311).

Color Travel

BALI. Republic—This World Of Ours. 9m. Native farming, marketing, weaving, carving, a funeral and cremation, dances and other customs are shown in Trucolor in this all too brief visit. GOOD. (5387).

VOLUME 54 NUMBER 10

MR. KLEPER COPS THE DOUGH!

PICTURED ON THE COVER of this issue, and referred to in greater detail elsewhere as the winner of this week's $100 SHOWMANSHIP SWEEPSTAKES prize, is Sid Kleper, the energetic manager of Loew's College, New Haven, Conn.

While it is not necessarily our intention to give cover attention to each of the other 51 Prize Winners during the balance of the year, Kleper seemed to be entitled to special kudos for being "first" in what we believe will be a long line of happy showmen who will "cop the dough" one or more times as the months progress.

We are particularly proud of the dozens of letters of praise and suggestion that were received from the important theatre executive judges, following our submission to them of the first contest entries. More than 50 skilled showmen of their stature must be right when they state that SHOWMANSHIP SWEEPSTAKES is: "the hottest new idea in many a year," "the answer to the industry's most critical need today," and "the kind of plan that every true showman will cheer."

We are also proud of the additional $500 prizes on specific pictures already posted by Columbia and Paramount. U-I has reserved the issue of July 27 for a similar prize announcement, and we know of several more companies that are only waiting for definite national release dates. By the end of July we believe these special distributor prizes alone will total more than $4,000.

MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR is naturally pleased to take the bow for having again introduced a fresh new trade paper service. But the most important bows of the present and of the future belong to "the Klepers," on the firing line in theatres across the U. S. A. and Canada, who will take it from here, and who will make each week's SHOWMANSHIP SWEEPSTAKES the competitive "Olympics" at which the real industry champs are crowned.

So here is to the first SHOWMANSHIP CHAMP, to whom the first weekly $100 check has been forwarded. To the other CHAMPS from coast to coast: "Come and get it!"

THE FAST BUCK . . . AND THE SLOW DEATH

WHILE THE RECORD SHOWS that we are certainly no friend of the principle of government censorship; and while we have been openly critical of the amateurism, unfairness, wooden lack of understanding, and "footsy" repair jobs at the release level that have marked the administration of the Legion of Decency, even though we respect the Legion's objectives; we sometimes wonder whether certain elements in this industry of ours have enough brains and enough regard for even rudimentary good taste to go it alone without compulsory fences or guide posts of some sort.

Faced with ever increasing competition for the public's entertainment dollar, with ever increasing costs of everything, and with a shrinking source of new supply to the point of an actual product shortage, it takes a strong minded realist to remember that the "fast buck," grabbed in desperation at the expense of good taste and respect for the intelligence and entertainment demands of the paying patrons, is nothing but a marker in the last mile to a slow economic death. And many a salaried manager or circuit booking executive, however strong minded and realistic, faced with declining profits, or no profits at all, must choose between the wrath of his stock ownership that may cost him his job, or the wrath of the disgusted or offended paying patrons. In any event, the lessening of the effectiveness of enforced censorship due to the several court decisions, coupled with current intra-industry and extra-industry economic pressures, have brought forth a rash of cheap, poor taste, sensational, and sometimes actually revolting pictures that must prove embarrassing to everyone who knows this industry, who is grateful to it for his personal success, and who wants to see it continue to grow in the regard of the American public, rather than deteriorate and fade into the limbo of the carnival and the burlesque house.

There may be a place for these "fast buck" pictures in theatres catering to the skid rows and tenderloins of big cities, where the average intelligence and the average tastes of the paying patrons are only slightly above those of animals. We wouldn't know, for we have never operated that kind of theatre and never want to. But there is certainly no place for them where the paying patrons bathe regularly, wash their teeth, own a second suit of clothes, or live either singly or as a family as respected members of the community. And it is to such later theatres that the rash seems to be spreading this summer in epidemic proportions.

A current glaring and offensive example is "KARAMOJA," which boasts of an explanatory subtitle, "LAND OF LOST PEOPLE." Most showmen who have looked at it, and even some who succumbed to the "fast buck" and played it, wish this film had stayed with the "people" and gotten lost too.

Here is a picture that must depend on the naked breasts and male and female "exposures" of particularly repulsive and bestial African natives in its advertising illustrations; on ad copy such as: "Uncivilized!," "Unbelievable!," "Shocking rites!," "Indescribable!," "Incredible sights," and "They live on blood and beer!" Here is a picture that solemnly poses as an interesting documentary about one of the world's remaining outposts, while parading across theatre screens such completely gruesome and revolting incidents as the knocking out of small boys' teeth with stones, the bleeding and drinking of the live blood of a young calf, the slow and painful slaughtering and disemboweling of a bull, and the wallowing in and massaging of native bodies with the entrails. And here is a picture that has earned from large city newspaper critics such descriptive gems as: "The most revolting and gruesome picture ever to be exhibited in a motion picture theatre," "The Karamojans would have been better left unseen," "Apart from the color photography, which is uniformly bad, you should be warned that you'll see much that is nauseating and nothing that is beautiful in this ill-advised documentary," "Scenes . . . too sickening to look at," "The most nauseating picture ever shown," and "Will certainly turn many stomachs."

Quite a package, isn't it? And, we promise you, if you look at it, you'll agree it is even worse than that.

A young friend of ours, with a theatre that normally grosses $1500 to $1800 a week, did $4000 in six days and yanked it. Living in his relatively small town he could no longer take the verbal browbeating he received personally, by phone, and by letter. One night he unfortunately stood in his lobby, and he still swears that he saw more people come out than went in, so that doing capacity business he never had much of an audience.

Had they looked at "KARAMOJA" we are quite certain that 90 per cent of the nation's theatremen wouldn't touch it with a 10 foot pole. We are sure they would have agreed with the remarks of one newspaper critic: "What the censors (Pennsylvania) were thinking of to let this one slip by, we can't imagine." But what about the fellow who doesn't see it, and who needs a picture, and who notes that the big, national, Stanley Warner Theatre Circuit is playing "KARAMOJA" in some of its best action spots?

Sure, he ought to check his trade paper review—and the minute he sees the pressbook or the ad campaign, he must smell a mouse. But he can't possibly guess how incredibly disgusting are the contents of the picture. In reaching for that "fast buck" Stanley Warner has unwittingly slipped him a "mickey." And the entire industry may suffer tomorrow's headache!

A second glaring and offensive example is another supposedly true documentary featuring particularly homely and unprepossessing natives from the Brazilian jungles of South America and named, for obvious "fast buck" reasons, "NAKED AMAZON."

Oddly enough, and contrary to the title inference, the illustrations before us seem to concentrate less on the actual nakedness of the particularly homely and unprepossessing Amazons, and more on art drawing and photo cropping calculated to give an impression of nakedness of the two particularly pulchritudinous white girls who were obviously not the least embarrassed by the nakedness of the native males all around them. This "white girl" slant seems to dominate the newspaper ads with copy lines such as: "White girl explorer among native savages" and "See blonde explorer bathe in man-eating piranha-infested waters!" But there were other lines that ran fairly true to form for such "documentaries." Lines like: "See unspoiled, naked maidens of lost Camayura tribe!," "Authentic!," "Raw!," "Real!," "Primitive nudism!," "Secret love rituals!," etc.

While we haven't seen this particular "documentary," the very fact that the tribe is "lost," the maidens are "unspoiled and naked," and that it contains "love rituals," would permit any industry veteran to write the script. As a matter of fact it wouldn't need to be written. Just reach up to the "fast buck" shelf and drag it out again.

But the most disturbing fact to most industry veterans is that the big, wealthy, decorous, and well operated Loew Circuit played "NAKED AMAZON" single feature for a full week in some of its out-of-town showcases. Here is the great circuit that only a few short years ago was so convinced of the high entertainment level of their film entertainment, and of their patrons' demand for fine surroundings, that they resisted the profit from the theatre sale of popcorn and other confections.

Just where are we going as an industry when in the same week Stanley Warner and Loew's fail to recognize the "bell weather" nature of their position, and reach for the "fast buck"?

In the past, the "fast buck" was the particular property of the shallowbrained and of the fringe operator of the "skid row" and "tenderloin" area. The rest of us were ashamed of him, and while we could not control him, he was an outcast and a subject of ridicule who was verbally backhanded every time he raised his head from beneath his particular rock. The large circuits, headed by industry leaders, cannot be elastic in such matters. For the sake of our industry, for its future life, for the respect it has earned, and for the position it occupies on the American scene, let us hope that nonsense like this can be stopped.

What the "big fellows" do to keep their house in order, or to allow it to fall into disrepute, must reflect itself on all of us.

BROADWAY GROSSES

(As of this Monday)

Hot Holiday Ups Business

NEW YORK—Broadway business held up very well over the long and hot July 4 week-end, with air conditioning, possibly, proving the greatest attraction of all.

According to usually reliable sources reaching MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR, the breakdown was as follows:

"The Sea Chase" (Warners). Paramount expected the fourth week to hit $23,000.

"Lady And The Tramp" (Disney-Buena Vista). Roxy reported $50,000 for Thursday through Monday, with the second week sure to tally $68,000.

"Love Me Or Leave Me" (MGM). Radio City Music Hall, with stage show, garnered $104,000 for Thursday through Monday, with the sixth week bound to top $136,000.

"The Seven Little Foys" (Paramount). Criterion had a terrific opening, with $56,000 in sight for the first week.

"Not As A Stranger" (UA). Capitol opened to $85,241 for Wednesday through Monday, with a hefty $95,000 in sight for the opening session.

"Davy Crockett, King Of The Wild Frontier" (Disney-Buena Vista). Globe dropped to $9,000 on the sixth week.

"House Of Bamboo" (20th-Fox). Mayfair looked towards a $30,000 opening week.

"Summertime" (UA). Astor was headed toward a $47,000 second week.

"This Island Earth" (U-I). Victoria dropped to $12,500 for the last six days of the fourth week.

"The Seven Year Itch" (20th-Fox). Loew's State looked for the fifth week to reach $35,000.

McGee Tours For Poll

DENVER—Pat McGee, Cooper Foundation Theatres, is making a tour on behalf of the Audience Awards Poll, at the request of COMPO's Bob Coyne and national chairman Elmer Rhoden, president, National Theatres. McGee has emphasized that it is the purpose to make Audience Awards Polls as newsworthy as the Oscar awards, so that the industry might have two potent publicity events each year rather than one.

Stress is placed also on the need to enlist the aid of the local distributors, branch managers, bookers, salesmen, and publicity men, and McGee also points out the need for a strong steering committee in all multi-theatre towns and cities so that all efforts are coordinated and avoid waste motion. Newspapers, radio stations and TV stations should be contacted by a publicity chairman and members so the other media will understand that this is an industry effort and is not a one-theatre promotion.

Lardner Trial Date Set

HOLLYWOOD—The trial of the breach of contract suit brought against 20th-Fox by Ring Lardner, Jr., concerning alleged moral clause violation after he appeared before the House Un-American Activities Committee, was set last fortnight for Aug. 23 by Federal Judge Ben Harrison.

Robert McLeish, prominent Australian exhibitor, center, is seen with U-I's Ben Cohn, right, and Americo Aboaf, left, on a recent visit to the New York City offices of the company. Aboaf is foreign general manager and Cohn is Aboaf's assistant.

BIG-TIME OPERATION: Some 150 exhibitors gathered last week in the Hotel Astor at a luncheon session called to acquaint them with plans for the forthcoming COMPO audience participation polls and to solicit support for the project.

KONECOFF

Emanuel Frisch, MPTOA head, labeled the campaign "Operation Big Switch," explaining that in the past the industry has always campaigned for all sorts of causes and drives, both government and philanthropic, and that for a change this drive is on behalf of the industry itself; and secondly, it was undertaken as a result of confidence in the future and not forced upon the industry because of dire circumstances.

Toastmaster Harry Brandt urged everyone present to show that the industry can do any job it undertakes and do it well. Elmer Rhoden, chairman of the operation, opined that the business was standing on the threshold of a new era with business being built for the future by cooperative effort. The emergence of new faces alone will speed production and he cited instances where there are 25 pictures ready to roll but unable to be cast because of a personality shortage. Public acceptance and recognition should remedy this situation.

Harmonious effort between production, distribution, and exhibition will also tend to permit better understanding within the business, he felt. Rhoden reported that wherever the project was discussed on the coast, there was enthusiasm, and all studios contacted stood ready to cooperate. He urged theatre managers and exhibitors to do the same, citing that out of the 15,000 brochures distributed by National Screen Service, only 2,100 were returned to auditors Price Waterhouse as of last week. He pleaded that the re-

40 Year Film Censorship Ended In Ohio

Exhibs Urged To Support Production Code; Penalties Stiffened For Showing Of "Obscene" Movies, Books

COLUMBUS, O.—Ohio's four-decade-long film censorship system has been ended by action of the Ohio Senate on the final day of the 1955 legislative session, but it seems certain that proponents will attempt to revive the defunct law in the next session, which starts in January, 1957.

By a margin of four votes, advocates of censorship lost their chance when the Senate refused to approve a motion by Sen. Joseph W. Bartunek, Democratic minority leader, Cleveland, to bring House Bill 29 to the Senate floor. Twelve Democrats and six Republicans voted for the measure; 14 Republicans against. The measure needed a two-thirds approval, 22 votes.

The Bartunek motion was an attempt to bypass the Senate education committee, of which Sen. Charles A. Mosher, Republican, Oberlin, is chairman. Mosher, leader in the anti-censorship fight, said that proponents of the bill killed it at the final committee session by trying to force a vote before all opponents had been heard. Bartunek said opponents were trying "to talk the bill to death."

Pressure to bring the bill to a Senate vote was exerted by Gov. Frank Lausche, U. S. Senator John W. Bricker, Rep. Frances P. Bolton, and other officials. Demise of censorship apparently means the end of Ohio's Division of Film Censorship. R. M. Eyman, chief film censor, told the education committee that nine employes have been retained in the division pending outcome of the legislation. No provision for the division has been made in the new biennial budget.

The Senate approved 29-2 House Bill 712 which provides for severe penalties for showing "obscene" movies and those which contribute to juvenile delinquency and promote crime, and for selling of "obscene" comic books. Sen. Mosher supported this measure which he said is "the right approach" to the problem. Penalties range from $1000 to $5000 and six months in jail.

Robert A. Wile, secretary, Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, said in a bulletin to the membership, "Now that the Legislature has adjourned without enacting the Censorship Bill, it is up to us, the theatre owners of the state, to be sole judges of what is suitable screen entertainment for the people who attend motion picture theatres.

"We feel that we are capable and competent to do this job. That's why we have opposed censorship. We believe that we are now more in harmony with the rest of the United States.

"As directors of Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, elected by the exhibitors of the state, we strongly recommend that our fellow theatre owners place their reliance on the seal of the Motion Picture Production Code. Inevitably there will be some pictures available which do not bear the seal. We urge that you screen these carefully and that you play nothing that would subject you or the motion picture industry as a whole to criticism.

"Aside from having attained the right to determine for ourselves what we are to offer the public, just as radio, television, book, and newspaper publishers, the stage, and other media of entertainment have, the ending of censorship should ease the print situation. Simultaneous runs of pictures should now be easier, since prints may be borrowed from out-of-state exchanges at no cost other than transportation.

"The organization office in Columbus has available a complete file of every picture in release; and should you wish information as to whether or not a picture is acceptable, you are urged to call or write for this information."

AN END TO CHIT-CHAT!

As this industry of ours becomes more mature, more competitive, and more occupied with the realities of the every day struggle for its share of the public's amusement dollar, it is the duty of a good industry trade paper to keep pace, and to match its editorial contents to the more serious demands of its readers.

For more than 36 years, MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR has followed a local edition form of publishing. Originally localized to single film distribution territories, and later localized to small groups of adjacent film distribution territories, its national coverage was based on the importance of local news, and on the local liking for local "chit-chat." However, for the past 20 years or more, MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR has also built what are generally considered to be the industry's most serviceable and "theatre-wise" departments and features, and a recent readership survey gave positive proof that these latter now outrank in importance the gossip on film row, the fishing or hunting trip successes, and the comings and goings of a hard traveling business.

While local news is still important, and will continue to receive liberal space and attention, this issue of July 6, 1955, sees the abandonment of the local edition format and the establishment of a single, considerably expanded weekly paper.

The SHOWMANSHIP SWEEPSTAKES' annual $5200 prize contest launched in this issue is just one of several new and dramatic serviceable developments that will be introduced in orderly fashion in the months ahead.

Watch for a completely new concept in industry trade weeklies, and a busier, more serious business paper, to develop.

We think you'll like it! —THE EDITORS.

"Coats Off" Sales Push Honors UA's Youngstein

NEW YORK—A 25-week sales drive honoring vice-president Max E. Youngstein will be launched by United Artists in the United States and Canada on July 10, the company announced last week.

YOUNGSTEIN

The billings and collections campaign, which will award $50,000 in cash prizes to winners among the 32 branches, marks the first sales salute to Youngstein since he entered the industry in 1940.

Co-captains for the "Coats Off" Drive are William J. Heineman, vice-president in charge of distribution, and B. G. Kranze, general sales manager.

UA exchanges will compete in three groups of equal grossing potential, with the drive run in three six-week laps climaxed by a seven-week home stretch.

In a statement to the company's entire distribution staff on the eve of the sales push, Heineman declared "We are happy that Max Youngstein has consented to lend his name to this drive backing the greatest concentration of important product that United Artists has ever released. I know that our field staff is grateful for this opportunity to demonstrate its appreciation to Max for the superb promotional support he has developed to boost the performance of every UA release. And I am sure that UA's exhibitor friends will wholeheartedly join in this tribute to the man whose unflagging energies and creative efforts have been a vital factor in the boxoffice success of UA product."

TOA-Allied Committee Ends Meets With Distributors, Shows Optimism

NEW YORK—The joint Theatre Owners of America-National Allied committee last week completed its series of conferences with heads of individual film companies, with the exception of United Artists, with whom tentative engagements were being arranged.

The principal problems presented to the distribution group by the exhibitors for thorough discussion were the static national sales policies, the need for a sliding scale to avoid rebuying and renegotiating for a picture, the controversial suggestion by exhibition that pictures be sold to theatres grossing less than $1,000 a week on a flat rental basis, and to arbitrate rentals of less than $100, the need for more and better product with new talent, and the print shortage either by number or classification.

At Warners, the committee met with Ben Kalmenson, distribution chief, and Bernard Goodman, field sales coordinator, among others; Kalmenson stated later that every assistance would be offered small-grossing situations, said that the flat rental basis would be given them, and revealed that Warners is conducting a survey of sales policy. The Universal executives were headed by president Milton Rackmil and executive vice-president Alfred E. Daff.

As a result of the meetings, the joint committee announced, distribution now recognizes the serious plight of the exhibitor, the small one in particular, which will be relieved in the near future. Sales policy was clarified together with problems of production and distribution, the statement goes on to say, with the result that there should not only be a more stringent policing of distribution sales personnel, but also exhibitors to insure equitable dealings. The committee concluded that the results of the talks are being evaluated and that a detailed report is forthcoming to the organizations it represents.

16mm. C'Scope Near

NEW YORK—CinemaScope releases on 16mm. film will be available to an almost unlimited market about Aug. 1, it was learned last week, following up the 16mm. anamorphic projection lens Bausch and Lomb now has ready for production. Reduced versions of 20th-Fox product will be the initial offerings, with other distributors to follow.

Details about marketing and price of the new lenses are curerntly being worked out by Bausch and Lomb, and the price is estimated at about $100. The unit will be made up of the newly-developed prime lens and the anamorphic lens in a single barrel, and will be available in two-inch focal lengths to fit any major type of narrow gauge equipment.

Twentieth-Fox, a participant in the development of the lens, estimated that there are as many as 27,000 potential customers for the equipment among theatreless towns, schools and colleges, institutions for the old or sick, and churches, camps, clubs, and others.

Audience Collections Pledged For Will Rogers Hospital

NEW YORK—Pledges to take up audience collections one day during the week of Aug. 15 for the benefit of the Will Rogers Memorial Hospital and Research Laboratories are beginning to snowball, according to S. H. Fabian, national chairman of the special drive.

"The committee is delighted with the number of drive-ins that pledged," said Fabian. "These open-air operations are potential sources of much-needed funds to augment the collections made by the four-wall theatres."

As a result of the coast-to-coast Telethon and the active support of the motion picture trade publications, it is expected to enroll the largest number of theatres for collections since the days of the March of Dimes.

Balaban Sales Drive Planned By Paramount

NEW YORK—For the first time in his 20-year tenure of office at Paramount Pictures, President Barney Balaban has permitted dedication of the company's annual sales drive to him, and has consented to the use of his name in the title of the drive. The Barney Balaban Drive will begin on Aug. 28 and will run 17 weeks, through Dec. 24.

In announcing the drive, George Weltner, head of world-wide distribution, declared, "During the 20 years since he assumed the presidency of our company, Mr. Balaban has led us each year to greater and greater heights, until today Paramount proudly stands at the summit of our industry as the acknowledged leader. I know that exhibitors and theatre owners in every part of the country will join with every Paramount employe in this opportunity to express to Mr. Balaban the respect, admiration, and affection which the entire motion picture industry feels for him and for Paramount."

Attractions in release during the initial period of the drive will include "The Seven Little Foys," "We're No Angels," "You're Never Too Young," and "To Catch A Thief."

The picture which has been designated to launch the sales effort as Paramount Weeks Picture is "The Girl Rush."

Other comparable boxoffice properties which will be released during the latter period of the drive will include "Ulysses," "Lucy Gallant," and "The Trouble With Harry."

Heading the Barney Balaban Drive as co-captains are Paramount home office executives E. K. (Ted) O'Shea, Hugh Owen, and Jerry Pickman.

SDG Renames Officers

HOLLYWOOD—All officers of Screen Directors, Inc., the fund-raising subsidiary of SDG, were reelected last fortnight to hold office for another year.

N. J. Allied Proposes Sales Policy Changes

NEW YORK—One of the results of New Jersey Allied's three-day annual meeting last fortnight at Monticello, N. Y., was a resolution adapted by the membership calling on Allied States Emergency Defense Committee to press for a "top-picture" sales policy, providing for a sliding scale and percentage ceilings, from distributors.

The proposed formula would allow all top product sold on the sliding scale to bring a reasonable return to the exhibitor, with a ceiling on rental based on the run: a first-run ceiling fixed at 50 per cent, second-run at 35 per cent, and all others at 25 per cent. If based on that scale, the resolution stated, any house with an average price on top pictures of $200 or less would buy all product on a flat rental business. The lack of profits situation was pointed up in the measure, in large situations as well as small, and the suggestion made that should the EDC fail to obtain such a sales policy, it should scrutinize the sales procedures of the individual companies and recommend to the membership whether specific pictures should be played on the basis of whether or not a profit can be made by the exhibitor.

After five years in office, Wilbur Snaper stepped down as president, commended by a resolution for his work, and he was succeeded by Sidney Stern, president, Columbia Theatres, a former vice-president of the exhibitor's group. Other officers elected were Louis Gold and John Harwin, vice-presidents; William Basil, secretary; A. Louis Martin, treasurer; Harry Sheer, sergeant-at-arms; and Irving Dollinger, board chairman, and the unit's Allied States representative.

A sampling of distributor sentiments indicated that the New Jersey Allied propostal was not favirably received, and considered "impractical." One distribution spokesman said that the formula violates "the very principle which exhibitors have asked . . . that each theatre be sold in accordance with its own ability to pay." Another distributor spokesman indicated that company heads would not be averse to any proposal for the "general good," but it was made clear that the matter would have to be studied in the light of existing circumstances.

NT Seeks New Theatres

HOLLYWOOD—Before returning to New York last week, Elmer Rhoden, president, National Theatres, revealed that the company is negotiating to acquire seven more theatres, including one drive-in, but that no plans have been made to build drive-ins, because the directors feel that field is overexpanded.

Rhoden said that NT earnings for the 39 weeks ended June 30 are expected to equal those of the same period last year, when earnings were 68 cents per share on net income of $1,884,636. He said that attendance for the first three quarters of the current fiscal year was slightly off in comparison with the same weeks of 1954, largely because of a product shortage, which, he predicted, will ease considerably this summer.

26 Theatres Debut; Like Number Close

TORONTO—The number of theatres, 26 drive-ins and auditoriums, that have opened in the first six months of this year has been balanced out by a like number closing since the first of the year.

According to a survey by The Canadian Film Weekly, 20 auditorium type of theatres have opened, while six ozoners have opened for business. Yet in the same period, 23 auditorium houses and three drive-ins closed. Most of the new houses opened were located in communities where there had been no 35mm. exhibition. Others were built as replacements for old theatres, such as the Paramount, Kamloops, B.C., and the Jubilee, Kelliher, Sask. Of five theatres closed recently, two were drive-ins. Theatres in preparation for building total 17, of which 14 are drive-ins.

Italy

Complete autonomy to choose Italian films best suited to American distribution, as well as product from other countries, was extended to Seymour Poe, executive vice-president, IFE Releasing Corporation, by the board of directors, who met to discuss problems with the American executive during his visit to Rome. Poe was reported to have insisted on freedom of selection following his recent appointment to IFE, in an effort to curb a surplus of Italian product which had only the remotest chance to realize a profit in the U.S. market. He also secured from the directors authority to effect a reorganization of the company.

Hyman Condemns Rigid Double Feature Policy

NEW YORK—Supporting his policy of program flexibility for American Broadcasting-Paramount Theatre houses, vice-president Edward Hyman last week condemned any rigid double-feature policy as characteristic of a bygone era. He cited the successful experiment of AB-PT affiliates which have pursued a single feature policy in areas where the double feature has been the rule, although he does not advocate an overall revision of the double feature rule in those territories where it is firmly entrenched by public preference for quantity.

In large cities, Hyman asserted, where the double-feature policy is established, there is always one good-size theatre which can operate profitably on single features, giving as example certain houses in Buffalo and San Francisco with a capacity of 2,000 seats, more or less. In every section of the country, he believes, there is a discriminating element ready to patronize the single feature house.

Hyman said that in theatres under his supervision, he discards the double-feature policy when he can book a triple A feature of more than 90 minutes running time, if the second feature would compare unfavorably with the main one. He also laid stress on selecting the proper day of the week for program changes, adding that he found it worthwhile to open a "big" feature early in the week to let "word-of-mouth" advertise it for big weekend grosses. If the program is not of first quality, he said, the weekend opening brings in the biggest return.

Foreign Production Costs Up

NEW YORK—The cost to American producers of making films abroad is rapidly nearing the high figures prevailing in this country, according to Joseph A. McConville, Columbia International board chairman, and vice-president for foreign distribution, Columbia, who returned last week from Europe. He said that studio overhead, not as high as in Hollywood, has increased considerably abroad, and that some recent pictures filmed in Europe by U. S. companies have cost in excess of $2 million, partly because the cost of talent has increased enormously.

Hastings Leaves RKO

HOLLYWOOD—Ross Hastings, general counsel and executive, RKO, will resign his studio post as of July 30 to open his own law offices for general practice, it was announced last week. Hastings, who has been associated with RKO in various executive capacities since 1936, except for three years during World War II when he served as an officer in the Navy, will take a month's vacation before opening his own offices on Sept. 1. His offices will be in the new City National Bank Building, Beverly Hills.

Lewis Joins Times As Advertising Head

NEW YORK—The appointment of Bernard Lewis as director of advertising, publicity, and exploitation of Times Film Corporation, national distributor of imported quality motion pictures, was announced last week by Jean Goldwurm, president. Until his new appointment, he served Italian Films Export and IFE Releasing Corporation, first as publicity director and then as exploitation-promotion manager, for a period of three years, under Jonas Rosenfield, Jr., vice-president of advertising, publicity, and exploitation.

LEWIS

Before that he served in publicity and exploitation capacities with Paramount and 20th-Fox. There he was also special assistant to the late Hal Horne, vice-president in charge of advertising, publicity, and exploitation. As a newspaperman, Lewis was a member of the Associated Press, and has been in commercial public relations in the past.

In making the announcement, Goldwurm stated that Lewis' appointment was the first step in an expanded program of operation by Times and a greater emphasis on the promotional support of the pictures it now has in distribution and those it is now readying for market.

Kramer Lauds PCA

HOLLYWOOD—The Production Code Administration was praised last week as the best instrument for regulating film content in the world by producer Stanley Kramer, who returned from a European trip in connection with his production of "Pride And Prejudice" for United Artists. Kramer asserted that in spite of certain shortcomings in application, as any code of its kind must have, the PCA is vastly superior to censorship, such as that practiced in England and elsewhere, which rests on the opinion of an official appointee. The producer also stated that the American industry should stand firmly by any picture which has received the PCA stamp of approval.

NBC, Korda Rep Confer On "Richard III" TV Bow

NEW YORK—An agreement between the National Broadcasting Company and London Film Productions, representing Sir Alexander Korda, to pay $500,000 for a first American showing over television of Laurence Olivier's "Richard III" was reported near completion last fortnight. The feature, which also stars Olivier, would have a single TV showing early next year.

Negotiations were underway with a distributor to show "Richard III" on a two-a-day roadshow basis following the TV premiere, which will be in color. With intermissions, the $2 million film will take three hours to present, with a normal running time of 169 minutes. Morris Helprin, president, London Films, said he believed the television viewing would stimulate theatre attendance.

New Anti-Trust Law Near

WASHINGTON—President Eisenhower was expected to sign into law last week a bill providing a uniform four-year statute of limitations in private anti-trust suits arising from consent and judicial decrees, which would wipe out state jurisdiction in such litigation.

The bill also boosts the amount of the maximum fine that may be imposed in criminal anti-trust actions from $5000 to $50,000, and permits the Federal Government to bring civil suits on the same grounds as individuals and corporations.

Hearings began also before the House Judiciary Committee on the Walter Bill, which would abolish the mandatory treble-damage provision in an anti-trust judgment, permitting Federal judges to determine whether to impose actual damages or punitive damages. The Administration is backing the bill, but will propose that wilful violators, as distinguished from those only technically guilty, be liable to treble damages.

Speculation Mounts On Rank Trust Move

NEW YORK—An Associated Press item from London last fortnight attributed recent moves by J. Arthur Rank, transferring control of his film and theatre empire to a charitable trust, to British inheritance tax laws, which exempt trust properties from the enormous death duties imposed on estates, with the result that a large block of JARO stock would not have to be sold on the market following Rank's death to satisfy the tax office.

The AP asserted that American film interests have been reported buying JARO shares recently, but Rank, in a statement, pointed out that the trust was formed two years ago to assure that control of the company would remain in English hands as an incentive to the British film industry. He said he considered a statement necessary because of published reports concerning the 20th-Fox negotiations to secure 90 per cent or more of the Schlesinger South African theatre circuit, of which Rank's Odeon Circuit was said to own 25 per cent while, in turn, 20th-Fox owns 49 per cent of Metropolis and Bradford Trust, which is a top Rank holding company. Speculation had been that exchange of the two would enable both parties to achieve their individual aims.

Cy Eichman In New Post

NEW YORK—Robert M. Savini, president, Astor Pictures and Atlantic Television Corporation, last week announced the resignation of Cy Eichman, advertising and publicity director for the past nine years, and reported that Eichman was joining Screencraft Pictures as eastern television sales manager immediately, working in conjunction with Ed Berkson, vice-president, and Peter Piech, national sales manager. Simultaneously it was announced that Louis Scheingarten will handle the art work and production of advertising accessories on all future Astor and Atlantic releases.

HOUSE OF BAMBOO

(THE PLACE THEY TALK ABOUT IN WHISPERS!)

Tokyo couldn't hide it! Washington couldn't hold it back! CinemaScope had to film it on the spot!

For the first time,"House of Bamboo" reveals the sensational story of how the U.S. MPCI teamed with Japanese Security Police...and baited their plan with a forbidden Kimono Girl...to crack the terror of renegade ex-GIs who formed the Tokyo underworld, the hottest since "Chicago" days.

For the first time, CinemaScope plunges you into the teeming heart of exotic Tokyo with its bizarre Oriental streets, crowded waterways and magnificent ancient shrines...sights even more enchanting than the streets of Rome in "Three Coins in the Fountain"...even more startlingly picturesque than the panoramas of Hong Kong in "Soldier of Fortune."

It's available in July, from 20th!

mainder be sent in before July 11. At least 5,000 are needed if the selections at the end of the first period are to reflect the public's opinion.

First nominations should be ready about July 20, and local exhibitors can then go to work on local levels getting appropriate space and reaction. He thought that the following potential results seemed to be in the offing: (1) intra-industry unity; (2) good public relations on behalf of the industry; (3) the emergence of new talent and personalities; (4) hypoed box-office figures via publicized selections. He urged exhibitor support be sent to producer units.

Also speaking were Walter Reade, Wilbur Snaper, Dave Levy, and Robert Coyne, executive director, COMPO, all of whom urged support.

PRODUCT AND THE FUTURE: Bill Heineman, vice-president in charge of sales at United Artists, insists that there is a United Artists feature in your future, and at a press conference last week, he reported to exhibitors that between June 1 and December 31 his company stands ready to release 26 features, of which eight will be top-flight attractions. The latter group includes. "Summertime," "Marty," "Not As A Stranger," "The Kentuckian," "The Night Of The Hunter," "Gentlemen Marry Brunettes," "The Troubleshooter," and "Alexander The Great," which will be the Christmas attraction. They will be released at the rate of four monthly.

In addition to the above, 17 features are before the cameras or will go there before the end of the year. It was estimated that UA's investment in the more than 40 films amounts to 40 million dollars. The program will receive backing in the field, with some six millions to be spent by the sales staff in addition to which the exploitation staff has been expanded, so that there will be 50 men, the largest force in the history of the company, working the country.

Heineman estimated that the number and quality of the films is the highest in the company's history, and results have been reflected in the returns which are 31 per cent ahead in the first six months of the year over a similar period last year domestically. Foreignwise, the figure was 45 per cent higher. In addition, the company has five features which it has prepared for playoff particularly in the art and specialty market. These include "Othello," "Aan," "The Man Who Loved Redheads," "The Lucky Kid," and "Tiger And The Flame."

There are some 18,000 bookings in on features for the celebration of United Artists Week July 1 to 7, and 20,000 are expected before the final total is reached. It is hoped to have this event become an annual one. Incidentally, UA will not take on the distribution of any feature that first plays television.

Weltner Mourns Mother

NEW YORK—Funeral services were held last week at the Riverside Memorial Chapel, Far Rockaway, L. I., for Mrs. Ernestine Weltner, mother of George Weltner, head of Paramount worldwide sales.

Paramount Adds $500 To "Sweeps" For Bally Idea On "We're No Angels"

PHILADELPHIA—Paramount has jumped on the SHOWMANSHIP SWEEPSTAKES bandwagon and is offering a $500 prize for the best exploitation idea on "We're No Angels," Humphrey Bogart, Aldo Ray, Peter Ustinov, Joan Bennett starrer, based on the famous French play by Albert Husson.

Paramount's offer begins July 20 and stands for 13 weeks. To win Paramount's $500, however, it is also necessary to place first in the SHOWMANSHIP SWEEPSTAKES with an entry on this film during one of the 13 weeks. Your total winnings, thus will total $600.

Directed by Michael Curtiz, this Vista-Vision, Technicolor production should afford a wealth of exploitation ideas. The story involves three big-hearted convicts trying to escape from Devil's Island and how, posing as parolees, they take it upon themselves to help their benefactor, a good-natured but ineffectual storekeeper, who faces loss of his job when the owner is about to learn the place is on the verge of bankruptcy.

Sid Blumenstock, advertising manager, Paramount, states, "The fact that we are making this prize offer is evidence of our enthusiasm for your promotion. It is a good idea, and as a former theatreman, I can see only good come out of the effort you are making through your publication."

Paramount is the second major film company to join in the pyramiding of SHOWMANSHIP SWEEPSTAKES.

Interested entrants should keep their eyes set for even more extra dividends that may accrue in this boxoffice building through advertising, exploitation, and publicity contest, the first of its kind ever offered through the industry press.

Humphrey Bogart, Aldo Ray and Peter Ustinov, the "angels" of Paramount's Vistavision, Technicolor production, "We're No Angels," are seen at their angelic best on the left; in the center they are seen with Joan Bennett; while on the right is an interesting shot of Miss Bennett. Paramount has designated this film to be entered in SHOWMANSHIP SWEEPSTAKES, and has posted $500 as a prize for the best exploitation idea on it. In order to win, however, it is also necessary to place first in any weekly SHOWMANSHIP SWEEPSTAKES contest with an entry on this film for 13 weeks, beginning July 20.

Oriental Beauty Aids "House Of Bamboo"

NEW YORK—A campaign of national and local promotion keyed to the point-of-sale on "House Of Bamboo" was announced last week by 20th-Fox and Brandt's Mayfair.

Special TV and radio spot announcements have been created and will be utilized on many network and independent stations to herald openings of the production. Special airwave drives are being set in many key situations, complementing striking newspaper ads on the film.

Miss Shirley Yamaguchi, one of Japan's leading film stars, is in New York for the opening of the film and is participating in a series of TV and radio appearances, newspaper and feature syndicate interviews, and meetings with magazine representatives.

Activities commenced with a visit to the Japanese House and Garden of the Museum of Modern Art garbed in a colorful oriental costume. The star's appearance at the Garden, one of the major sightseeing attractions of New York's Summer Festival, resulted in important publicity in several metropolitan newspapers and a host of wire service breaks.

Widespread attention to "House Of Bamboo" also will be achieved by the cooperation and campaign participation of such organizations as the Japan Society, Japanese Trade Center, Japan Travel Office, Japanese-American Association of New York, and other agencies.

BETTER MANAGEMENT DEPARTMENT

George Nonamaker
Editor

WELL, BOYS, the gong has long since sounded, and with this issue we are off and running with the only brand new payoff in Better Management so far instituted by a motion picture trade paper.

It's MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR'S SHOWMANSHIP SWEEPSTAKES, with its $100 per week award for the one best entry judged out of five of the many so far submitted. The winning entry and the entries of the four runners-up will be subsequently published for the benefit of all readers who may find in them keys to profitable merchandising.

The judges now number 56 skilled executives and represent the heads of nearly 2,500 theatres.

We are merely the referee, getting the entries into galley form, sending them to the judges, tabulating the results, and handing out on behalf of the publisher all of this lovely money, which, need we remind you, comes to $5,200 annually.

In addition, the contest has attracted the attention of the various film companies, who see in it a medium to focus skilled showmanship attention on, and to get additional ideas on the exploitation of, certain of their pictures. They have, in the case of Columbia and Paramount, with Universal-International coming up next week, already posted $1,500 in additional prize money, which should really make some of you fellows wake up!

The loot is here, believe me. Just follow the simple rules and get going!

And just one thing more, the entries are being judged in order of postmarked receipt, so don't become impatient. We assure you all your entries will be given equal consideration.

PHILADELPHIA—The votes are in, and Sid Kleper, Loew's College, New Haven, Conn., has been adjudged winner of MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR'S SHOWMANSHIP SWEEPSTAKES contest one.

His check for $100 is on the way to him.

There is a new contest every week, and proofs of the five entries for next week's consideration by the judges are now in their hands.

This enterprising manager has come up with a complete campaign on selling what was billed as a "Sizzling," "Torrid," "Mighty 2 Hit Show—Columbia's "Tight Spot" and "5 Against The House."

A giant carnival wheel for a flash display was used as a lobby set piece, offering guest tickets if the wheel stopped on 5 Star (see illustration).

A radio contest was set in the form of a letter-writing contest relating "The Tightest Spot You've Ever Experienced." Passes were awarded winners.

1500 small paper bags were imprinted with theatre ad, same as run in newspapers, and distributed to purchasers in women's specialty stores, etc.

A co-op ad was arranged with a store on Kim Novak and swim suits. A similar co-op ad was set with a beauty shop.

Many attractive window displays were obtained (see illustration).

Music stores featured the Billy Eckstine MGM record "Life Of The Party," with several outlets giving window and counter displays as well as plugging the discs.

Travel posters spotted in all area travel agencies read: "For Travel Excitement Go To Reno"—"For Screen Excitement See ....."

Directory cards were spotted at the Taft and Garde Hotels, and also at restaurants; barber shops; and other spots.

For street bally, an attractive girl was out trying to sell silver dollars for 90 cents (see photo). Newspaper coverage was resultant on this.

All three leading five and 10 cent stores were contacted and featured soda streamers, furnished by the theatre, calling attention to relaxing drinks inspired by the theatre's feature combination.

Telegraph poles were sniped with safety posters, with copy reading: "This Is The Right Spot To Cross Carefully When You See 'Tight Spot' . . . etc."

A three-day advertisement was taken in the PERSONALS columns of the New Haven Evening Register reading: "Dear Eddie—I'm in a Tight Spot and I must see you. You men are all alike, you just have different faces, so we girls can tell you apart. Sherry. P.S. I'll be waiting for you at the College Theatre Friday. Be there!"

In addition trucks of local news distributor were bannered; and a sound truck was used as street bally the day before and on opening day.

Newspaper breaks included one on Sunday in The Herald; while many radio spots, including those tied in with cooperating merchants on daily announcements, were obtained.

EDITOR'S NOTE: This entry in MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR'S SHOWMANSHIP SWEEPSTAKES is included because it presents a comprehensive pattern which might well be followed on ANY films of this type, not necessarily only the ones involved. The campaign is most thorough in that it embraces many advertising, exploitation and publicity facets. It might well be used as a guide, were its components crayoned upon a cardboard and thumbtacked on the office wall with heads ready: lobby, street bally, window displays, co-op ads, regular ads, publicity, etc. As each effort is accomplished, all one would then have to do would be check them off.

Judges Are Enthusiastic Over First Contest Entries

PHILADELPHIA—Even the judges are waxing enthusiastic over MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR'S SHOWMANSHIP SWEEPTAKES.

In the first voting the following comments were written on ballots:

"All entries were novel, easy to do, inexpensive."

"All should be given credit for fine effort."

"All ideas were very good."

"Entry Number Two (World Tour) is a very good idea. We are putting it in three of our theatres, maybe more."

"I like the travelogue idea very much. People should know more about other places."

RUNNER-UP NUMBER 1

World Tour

This enterprising operator recently hit upon an idea of playing a series of travelogues from the various companies as a "world tour," for which he issued special "travel guides." The shorts are played along with the regular Haven Theatre shows on specified dates for a 15-week period. The trip is dated and outlined and presented in this serial form.

Downing's attractive travel folder is announced on the first page as: "Your Guide.

Submitted by L. E. Downing,
Haven Theatre, Brookhaven, Miss.
340 seats • top adult admission 50 cents
Family town and farm patronage.

Tour Around The World at no extra cost to you starting (date). See a planned world tour for the first time on any screen in the world, here on the giant screen of your friendly Haven Theatre, Brookhaven, Miss."

On the inside pages he lists the full schedule and playdates. As outlined the trip includes, in the following order, "Mobile, Ala.," "Washington, D. C.," Cypress Gardens, Fla.," "Las Vegas, N. M.," "Annapolis and West Point," "Calgary, Canada," "Vancouver, B. C.," "Niagara Falls," "Alaska," "Los Angeles and the Tournament of Roses," "Coney Island," "Japan," "Formosa," "Hong Kong," "Manila," "Honolulu," "Kashmir," "India," "Greece," "South Africa," "Spain," "Lisbon," "France," "Germany," "Valley of the Rhine," "Bavarian Alps," "Denmark," "England," "Venezuela," and "Mexico."

This idea is readily adaptable and with a bit of ingenuity other tours could be worked out. It's a swell way to sell travel shorts; in fact the idea might be broadened along the lines of the late Burton Holmes' travelogues; with a flock of shorts edited into a "Trip To South America"; "A Trip To Europe"; etc. There are many patrons who appreciate these glimpses and trips to foreign shores, and far places. Many others might readily be sold on the idea, if it is done as well as Downing has done it.

Three portions of Kleper's winning entry are shown below. On the left is a lobby display playing up the gambling feature with partons requested to spin the wheel and win a free ticket; center, girl used as street bally, and, right, one of many window displays.

Theatre Survey and Programs

Submitted by Frank K. Shaffer,
SW's Dixie and Strand, Staunton, Va.
879 and 865 seats
top adult admission 50 cents
Family and college type patronage.

The "theatre information card" (reproduced herewith) resulted in this theatre, as a result of a survey, securing a very excellent mailing list and afforded an opportunity to meet new people coming into the community.

Manager Shaffer says, "Early in 1954 we knew that two big firms would locate in Staunton; and another would build in Waynesboro, Va., only 11 miles east. The "survey cards" were printed locally at a reasonable price. I checked with real estate men as to the sections of the city where the new people were living. There are several new developments, such as Hillcrest, Skymont, Beverly Hills, Mountain View and Liberty Heights.

"One morning early my assistant and myself drove to one of these sections of about 50 houses; and got ourselves some new names. We also met some very fine people, most of whom came from New England and Brooklyn, N. Y. I assure you that a personal visit can mean a lot to new folks coming from a large city to a very small community.

"After we had spent about three weeks in morning visits we had a new mailing list. I then secured the services of the representative of the "Welcome Wagon" service and, also, "Newcomers Service," and for a few passes I got additional names. I also got office workers in these large plants to get me names of the workers. Of course, I got quite a few duplicates; but the idea of the theatre manager and his staff personally calling upon these newscomers will surely help the gross at my boxoffice. I even got residents of several large apartment units to get me the names of the new families.

"All these people now are on my mailing list for 'Movie Chatter,' a four-page weekly program, printed at no cost to the theatre, due to my selling back page ad space for $25, for which I get 2,000 copies.

"The entire make up of the programs was my idea; front covers, such as a cartoon under the theatre masthead showing a mother telling her children 'Susie, take your brother to the 'Bonus Show' at the Dixie Theatre. After the picture wait in the lobby and your Dad will pick you up'; reading material on the inside pages, in addition to current attraction copy, such as community events, church notices and some jokes (maybe not so good).

"As for distribution of the programs, 500 each week are mailed to out-of-town patrons and our mailing list; 500 are used in week-end grocery baskets in return for a couple of passes. Four independent merchants use the programs in their delivery trucks and this was found to be a very good means of getting the programs into the homes; 500 were 'stuffed' in the Sunday pre-date editions of the Washington and Baltimore newspapers; and about 500 were distributed at the theatre.

"As a result of the survey, we now know the number of persons in each family, and also their likes and dislikes.

"These ideas can be used in most every community. The survey, in particular, will give the theatre manager a 'reason' for visiting with the people, becoming known and getting across friendly messages in connection with his house."

RUNNER-UP NUMBER 3

Inexpensive Lobby Bulletin Board

Submitted by Michael King,
Nortown, Toronto, Canada.
959 seats • top adult admission $1.00
Family type patronage.

Here is a relatively simple, inexpensive, yet impressively designed stunt for a lobby display that is truly ingenious.

King says "all we've done is put up a 'bulletin board' in our lounge area. I cut out items from MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR and other trade journals, and supplement these by listing a 'Famous Players Entertainment Guide,' detailing programs at all other FP houses in Toronto. You'd be surprised how many of our patrons stand for more than five minutes at a time reading all the 'small print'."

RUNNER-UP NUMBER 4

Movie Pills

Submitted by Clarence Morris,
Morgan Theatre, Morgan, Minn.
360 seats • top adult admission 50 cents
Mixed village and rural type patronage.

"My 'little pills' stunt has been used successfully to promote and sell my theatre to the public.

"This consists of distributing small sealed envelopes containing several pieces of sugar candy and imprinted on the front, as illustrated, "℞ Little Pills For All Your Ills! Certain to cure melancholia: to change those blues into rosier hues . . . and cause you to laugh and enjoy life. DIRECTIONS. Dissolve pill in a glass of water . . . allow to stand for two hours and a half . . . during which time, visit the Morgan Theatre. When you return, throw pill away . . . you won't need it after seeing any of our attractions at the Morgan Theatre. There's More Fun At The Movies'."

Morris states he gave his little gimmick to an MGM Workship in Minneapolis recently; and understands that many theatres are now using it.

℞ Little Pills for All Your Ills!

Certain To Cure Melancholia; to change those blues into rosier hues . . . and cause you to laugh and enjoy life.

DIRECTIONS: Dissolve pill in a glass of water . . . allow to stand for two hours and a half . . . during which time, visit the MORGAN THEATRE. When you return, throw pill away . . . you won't need it after seeing any of our attractions at the MORGAN THEATRE.

"There's More Fun At The Movies!"

This is the "prescription" side of the envelopes used to distribute Morris' "Cure All."

"Sweeps" Money Pyramids As Film Companies Join In

At press time it was already known that Columbia had offered a $500 cash prize in the SHOWMANSHIP SWEEPSTAKES for the best campaign on their science fiction film, "It Came From Beneath The Sea"; that Paramount had offered a similar $500 cash prize for the best campaign on "We're No Angels"; and that Universal-International was about to do likewise and post yet another $500 on "The Private War Of Major Benson."

These film company prizes, which it is expected will total over $4,000 by next month, are, of course, in addition to MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR'S own $100 weekly award. In order to win any of the money posted by the various companies it is ALSO necessary to place first in a SHOWMANSHIP SWEEPSTAKES contest with your stunts or campaigns on these films during the period in which the companies have their money on the line.

Contestants should make careful note of the starting and expiration dates of these contests added to SHOWMANSHIP SWEEPSTAKES by the various film companies.

"I'm A Nice Guy, But I Never Come Back"

CHICAGO—This message titled "I'm A Nice Guy" was sent by John Balaban, president, Balaban and Katz, to the personnel of all his theatres:

"I am one of those nice movie patrons who never complains about anything.

"For instance . . . when I telephone the theatre to find out what's playing . . . or when the feature starts . . . I don't get mad when I'm answered by a grouchy voice.

"If the cashier is surly . . . or accidentally gives me the wrong change . . . it doesn't rile me, because I'm a nice patron.

"And when an usher doesn't offer to show me to a seat, I don't mind. I just wait until my eyes become accustomed to the darkness and find my own seat.

"It's the same way when I go to the concession stand. If the attendant takes her own sweet time, then serves me with an air of utter boredom . . . I always smile cheerfully, because I'm an easy-going patron.

"If there are some rowdy kids, or grown-ups, sitting near me . . . I don't sssshhh them indignantly. I don't like to complain about such things. I just sit and suffer.

"If the sound is not loud enough, or it's too loud . . . I never raise a stink about it. I figure somebody'll get around to adjusting it soon.

"If the show is not as colossal as it was advertised . . . I don't mind. I like movies.

"When I go to the rest rooms and find dirt all over the place . . . lights burned out . . . no towels . . . I don't say anything to the manager. I wouldn't want to hurt his feelings, or create an unpleasant situation. That's the way I am.

"No . . . I never complain about bad service in the theatres. I never argue or criticize. I'm just a nice patron.

"But I'll tell you what else I am: I'm the patron who never comes back!

"In other words, I'm a dissatisfied patron. And I'm not alone. There's a mob of us. Maybe we're that 'lost audience!'

"Sometimes I wonder why theatres spend so much money trying to get patrons back, when they could have kept us, in the first place—with just a little courtesy!

"Courtesy and Hospitality is our very life."

Ray McNamara, Allyn, Hartford, Conn., recently had this model, with appropriately-bannered parasol, walking through the downtown area to plug Continental's Alec Guiness' film, "To Paris With Love."

SW's Phil Katz Lauds SWEEPSTAKES Campaign

PITTSBURGH—Phil Katz, just advanced to advertising manager of the local Stanley Warner zone, writes in connection with MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR'S SHOWMANSHIP SWEEPSTAKES, "Your new Sweepstakes idea is tremendous. It will certainly stimulate a much needed surge of showmanship on the managerial level. I am writing to all men in our area. Watch out for their entries. You've hit on just the type of showmanship competition the men enjoy. Congratulations and good luck with your SHOWMANSHIP SWEEPSTAKES."

"Hams" Bally U-I's "Earth"

BUFFALO, N. Y.—In connection with the recent showing of U-I's "This Island Earth," Bill Brereton, ad-pub chief, Lafayette, put over a small stunt through which radio "hams" of the area showed how they can speed messages to all parts of the world in a demonstration in the theatre lobby.

The demonstration was given by members of the Kenmore-Buffalo-Towanda Radio Club, Radio Association of Western New York, American Radio Relay League, and Military Affiliated Radio System.

The "hams" accepted messages from the public to be sent free to anyone anywhere in the free world. The local newspapers used stories and art on the stunt. In fact, the Buffalo Evening News used a photo showing Joan E. Leech, Buffalo, talking to a friend, Private Joseph Kane, in Hanna, Germany, from the Lafayette lobby, as a "ham" radio operator worked the set.

Tieups Help, Too

HARTFORD, CONN.—Lou Cohen, Loew's Poli, recently planted a co-op. ad and promotion on U-I's "This Island Earth" that got plenty of attention.

Headed "Hey Kids, Free!" the ad enumerated prizes consisting of two planetariums, 12 space ships, 26 theatre passes, plus free prizes to all other winners; nothing to buy, easy to do. Simply fill in the entry blank and answer the question: "What is the name of the mysterious planet in outer space which is featured in the great new film, 'This Island Earth'. Bring the entry blanks to Economy Sales."

Gun-slinging sirens recently shot the works for UA's "Kiss Me Deadly," Chicago, Chicago. The trio of bally belles sporting leg holsters patrolled the Loop as bally for the film; and they are seen here in front of the theatre.

"Not As A Stranger" Gets Tieup Attention

NEW YORK—A jumbo program of national tieups that will reach millions of shoppers, readers and travelers throughout the United States and Canada has been set in behalf of "Not As A Stranger," it was announced by Francis M. Winikus, national director of advertising, publicity and exploitation for United Artists.

The co-op slate, figuring in the $1,200,000 promotional campaign will provide banner support via national magazine ads, newspaper insertions, store displays, and special mailing pieces and brochures. Tieups include Emerson Radio and Television, with full-page ads in Life, Look and The Saturday Evening Post, timed with local playdates and carrying theatre announcements. Lux Soap is booming "Not As A Stranger" with big-space newspaper ads featuring Olivia de Havilland. The insertions will run in 215 key city newspapers. Lux also is cooperating in a window display campaign that will spot scene stills and playdate cards in more than 20,000 drug stores.

The top-gear promotion will be carried to the readers of Time magazine in a Van Heusen ad featuring Broderick Crawford. United Airlines is drumbeating the release with a special counter display piece depicting Miss de Havilland and Mitchum arriving on a Mainliner. "Not As A Stranger" will be ballyhooed through a series of co-ops sponsored by surgical and medical supply houses. The Bob Evans Uniform Company is launching a nation-wide promotion through its 5,000 retail outlets, with ads and special materials pegged to a scene showing Miss de Havilland in an Evans uniform.

The Pioneer Rubber Company, manufacturers of surgical gloves, is saluting the production with four ads slated to run in leading trade publications. Window and store displays will feature scene stills and playdate posters. Nurse Wear Hosiery will boost the film via a full-page ad which will run twice in the American Journal of Nursing. Johnson and Johnson has prepared a four-page, full-color brochure carrying stills and credits. Further department store attention will come from Penaljo Shoes, which also are retailed in nurses' specialty shops. The Maico Company, which manufactures stethoscopes and other medical instruments, is kicking off a big advertising and promotion campaign that will spot ads in trade publications and displays in 180 outlets, all employing scene stills and big-space mentions for the picture.

NSS Trailers Offered

NEW YORK—National Screen Service recently announced the availability of "ticket-selling" trailers for the "Take Them Out To The Movies" campaign. They can be used along with the 30 x 40 "Take Them Out To The Movies" display, and are said to be a "natural" for merchant tie-ins. The header which follows the "Take Them Out To The Movies" trailer and ties-in the merchants' names reads, "'Take Them Out To The Movies' After you patronize the following friendly merchants (name of town)" and then into the merchant ad copy.

STUDIO SURVEY

The Editor Speaks

ELMER C. RHODEN, head, National Theatres, Inc., recently demonstrated in Hollywood a new electronic lens system of photography that uses the three strip of film principle also utilized by Cinerama, but is designed to eliminate the joining line when projected by three synchronized projection machines.

PAUL MANNING

THE PROJECTION of a feature length motion picture, as soon as this system has been fully developed, was also part of this National Theatres announcement. Rhoden stated that approximately six months would be required before they would be ready for production. No story or cast has as yet been selected.

THE HIGHLIGHT of the Hollywood demonstration was the projection of a three-section panoramic picture (the air flight portion of the first "Cinerama" feature was used). Using three projection machines housed in one central projection booth, rather than the three booth Cinerama system, this new method employs a mirror reflection system to reproduce the same effect. The designers of this new process claim the equipment is completely portable from theatre to theatre, and this includes the large curved panel screen.

RHODEN POINTED OUT that this would allow road show attractions, like Cinerama, to be shown in many more theatres than presently possible, and also to be able to move from theatre to theatre as needed.

IT ALL ADDS UP to the realization that the growing battle of the big screen has only just begun! With CinemaScope, Vista-Vision, Todd-AO, Cinerama, and now this new process called Cine-Miracle, it looks like real exciting days ahead!

Eager to help out in every way he possibly could, Jerry doubled as a bus boy, carrying dishes to and from the kitchen.

Borscht Belt Bellylaughs

DEEP in the Catskill Mountains of Sullivan County, N. Y., where Rip Van Winkle is reported to have spent 20 years resting, some 120 ladies and gentlemen of the press, radio, and television spent a not-so-restful two days not long ago in the company of Jerry Lewis at the modern Brown's Hotel. The occasion was the press preview of "You're Never Too Young," the newest Martin and Lewis release by Paramount. The pictures herewith are a sampling of the extent to which Lewis, Paramount, and the hotel's owners, Charles and Lillian Brown, went to make it a weekend much enjoyed by newspeople, and a public-relations event of noteworthy success.

ALTHOUGH IT TURNED OUT to be a rainy weekend, few objections were heard from the guests, who were grateful for additional opportunities to enjoy the antics of Lewis, whose indefatigible humor and energy never gave out. From the moment the first guests arrived from town, Lewis wouldn't stop manufacturing laughs; he was a bell-hop one moment and a bus boy the next, with floor shows in between.

IN BETWEEN MEALS, cocktail parties, night dubbing, and general romping, Lewis took a few minutes out to dedicate the new Martin and Lewis Playhouse on the grounds of the resort, unveiling the neon name sign installed before the guests arrived. Later, the VistaVision projectors rolled with the preview of "You're Never Too Young." The previous evening, a live show was presented on the theatre's stage, at which time Lewis welcomed the guests in a speech marking one of the few occasions during the weekend when he was serious. Another was the conclusion of his club floor show the last evening, when he thanked everyone for having refrained from asking questions about what he referred to as his "partnership problem."

In spite of the inclement weather, Jerry and Mrs. Lewis ventured to the poolside, resplendent in new Catalina swimming suits.

Jerry Pickman, Paramount advertising and publicity staff, and Herb Steinberg, Paramount exploitation, joke with Charles and Lillian Brown, center.

A large cocktail reception in the new Martin and Lewis Playhouse at Brown's Hotel was one of the many activities of the busy weekend.

Lewis obligingly posed with many newspeople at Brown's. Above, he is shown with Jerry Sager and Larry Morris, New England exhibitors.

A festive array of good things to eat awaited the guests in Brown's dining rooms. Left, Jerry inspects a special cake, and then imitates his sculpture in ice.

In the hotel lobby, a pet penquin briefly got in on Jerry's act. The good-natured police force of Sullivan County received its share of laughs, too, as did the regular bell-hop service of the hotel when Lewis tried helping to transport baggage.

Is this golf? The indoor and outdoor versions according to Lewis are seen above. His lessons from the shapely young lady were soon turned to good use instructing others in his own way. The comedian, when not clowning, turned out to be quite a golfer.

Tom-Tom To Smith

NAT W. JAMES and PETE SMITH

PETE SMITH, famous for his MGM short subjects for many years, started his 41-year Hollywood career as a press agent, representing such early day motion picture headliners as Mary Pickford, Samuel Goldwyn, Milton Sills, and others. In fact, Smith was the first really bigtime press agent the motion picture industry ever had.

BECAUSE OF HIS background, The Publicists Guild, representing press agents from the motion picture, radio, and television industries in Hollywood, have made him the recipient of their third annual Tom-Tom Award. Committee members Phil Gersforf, Barrett Kiesling, Vance King, and Hilda Black were present when Guild president Nat W. James and Tom-Tom Committee chairman Jack Atlas made the award.

THE SCROLL reads "The Publicists Guild proudly presents Pete Smith the 1955 Tom-Tom Award in recognition of his long and colorful career in motion picture public relations, publicity, and advertising. His success has been outstanding, his achievements extraordinary. His contributions to the industry have been an inspiration to all publicists and have earned him the respect and admiration of the film industry. Signed, Nat W. James, president, Publicists Guild."

SMITH'S SPECIALTIES have been showered with honors through the years, several times capturing MPE LAUREL AWARDS. The government has also recognized the excellent work being done by the producer in the fields of safety, bond sales, and other civic endeavors. Smith figured out early that the way to an audience's interest was through its funny-bone, and his hilarious scenes and wry narration have taught many a valuable lesson in history, geography, and just plain citizenship.

HE HAS never stopped being a publicist, and a good one, although the scope of his work has broadened.

20th-Fox Gets TV Boost

NEW YORK—Sheree North provided excellent advance promotion on 20th-Fox's "How To Be Very, Very Popular" this Sunday as she made a guest appearance on NBC's Colgate Variety Hour. Miss North introduced a clip from the film, which was highlighted on the show.

GOOD THINGS TO COME FROM HOLLYWOOD...

20th-Fox's "The Seven Year Itch"

A Charles K. Feldman Group Production

YESIREE—This is real hi-jinx entertainment! Billy "The Twinkle" Wilder, at the directorial helm, reached deep down into his bag of tricks and came up with as breezy and gay a picture as has reached the screen in many a laugh moon.

MARILYN MONROE, a pulchritudinous doll if ever one there was, bats a booming home run every time she swings those silken lashes (man oh man!), pouts those ruby wine lips, and makes like the Blond Goddess of what it takes to make a man happy! Whatever it takes, this doll of dolls has got it, in spades! Tom Ewell, in the role he made famous on Broadway, turns in a great performance.

"THE SEVEN YEAR ITCH" is high powered ammunition to rack up solid boxoffice results in any situation. Just what the doctor ordered for these doldrum summer days. Such goings on!

LUSCIOUS MARILYN has long been an eye balm for this editor. She looks like what a healthy, happy dream should look like. I'm sure that her screen future is just brimming with scads of happy, carefree roles, the kind only she could do justice to.

SO—thanks to Billy Wilder, Charles Feldman, Marilyn, Tom Ewell, the others in the swell cast, and also to 20th-Fox for having the good fortune to release this happy hit.—P. M.

Seen are scenes from 20th-Fox's hit comedy, "The Seven Year Itch," starring Marilyn Monroe and Tom Ewell, and producer Charles K. Feldman and director Billy Wilder.

"Phenix" Prologue Set

HOLLYWOOD—Interview and local color film footage obtained by Clete Roberts, correspondent and news commentator, during the filming of Allied Artists' "The Phenix City Story" in the Alabama community, will be used as the prologue for the film which Samuel Bischoff and David Diamond produced.

Roberts' footage originally was obtained for the producers for use in theatre and television promotion for the film which will have its world premiere at the Woods, Chicago, on July 19.

NEWS OF THE TERRITORIES . . .

Officers Installed In Atlanta WOMPI

ATLANTA—Mayor William B. Hartsfield was the principle speaker at the Variety Club when the Women of the Motion Picture Industry installed their newly elected officers for 1955-56. The occasion was a dinner with favors for guests.

The welcome address was made by Mrs. Betty Rary, the retiring president, and the invocation was by Mrs. Helen Taylor. Recognition of old officers was by Miss Edythe Bryant, following which Mrs. Christine Smith Gilliam introduced Mayor Hartsfield to install the officers.

The following were installed, Mrs. Stella Poulnot, president, Republic; Mrs. Evelyn Snow, first vice-president, Wil-Kin; Mrs. Ernestine Carter, second vice-president, Paramount; Miss Doris Hones, recording secretary, Buena Vista; Miss Katherine Moore, corresponding secretary, National Theatre Supply; Miss Edythe Bryant, treasurer, National Screen Service. New members of the board are Mrs. Thelma Haglund, U-I; Mrs. Johnnie Barnes, Wilby; and Miss Martha Hall, MGM. Mrs. Betty Rary, retiring president, will also serve on the board for one term.

The new committee chairmen are Mrs. Charline Jones, MGM, service; Mrs. Martha Chandler, United Artists, publicity; Mrs. Grace Bramblett, Paramount, extension; Miss Mildred Castleberry, Martin, by-laws; Miss Pat Brown, Warners, finance; Miss Darlene Eskew, Wilby, bulletin; Mrs. Jackie Cowart, United Artists, social; Miss Grace Woolley, Columbia, club history; and Mrs. Lynda Burnett, United Artists, gift.

Delegates to the national convention in New Orleans will be Mrs. Poulnot and Mrs. Rary.

New York Head Censor Wins Education Post

ALBANY—The appointment of Dr. Hugh M. Flick, director, State Education Department's motion picture division since 1949, as executive assistant to the education commissioner, effective July 1, was announced.

Dr. Lewis A. Wilson, present commissioner, who is retiring after 43 years' service, made the choice with the concurrence of Dr. James E. Allen, Jr., deputy commissioner and his successor.

In his new post, Dr. Flick will receive $12,000 a year. He was paid $9,934 as director of motion picture division, actually chief censor. He has been associated with the State Education Department since 1928, originally as assistant archivist and historian. His late father, Dr. Andrew C. Flick, served as state historian from 1923 to 1939. Dr. Flick, who held an army commission during World War II, was considered the most liberal and accessible head censor in New York's movie history.

Bowen Succeeds Flick As N.Y. Censor Chief

ALBANY—Continuation of an experienced and steady hand at the controls of the motion picture division, State Education Department, was assured when Dr. Ward C. Bowen, acting head from 1946 to 1949, was redesignated interim successor to Dr. Hugh M. Flick. Dr. Bowen has been affiliated with the department for 30 years, recently as chief, bureau of audio and visual aids.

Dr. Lewis A. Wilson, who retires as Commissioner Sept. 1, designated Dr. Bowen as acting chief censor. He also made the appointment of Dr. Flick as executive assistant, doing so in concurrence with Commissioner-elect James E. Allen, Jr. The 44-year-old Dr. Allen is prcsent deputy commissioner.

Dr. Bowen is highly regarded and respected in the Education Department, which guarantees him its firm support in the difficult task of administering a law with the high explosive content of motion picture censorship.

Negro stagehands have been admitted for the first time to full membership in New York City Theatrical Protective Union 1, IATSE, Commissioner Elmer A. Carter, State Commission Against Discrimination, announced in a release received here. The local, in existence since 1886, covers electricians, carpenters, and property men working in the nation's major theatrical center. Commissioner Carter praised the move; said that steps taken by labor to eliminate "both constitutional and practical discriminatory bars in unions constituted one of the most significant trends in the past decade of the trade union movement. Dissolution of an all-Negro IATSE affiliate, known as 1-A, preceded the admission of the Negro stagehands into Local 1. Union officials revealed that acceptance of Negroes into the union had been approved "unanimously" by its membership at one of the largest meetings held in many years. Vincent Jacobi is president, Local 1. . . . "It is vital to every theatre in the Albany exchange district that there be representation at the Audience Awards meeting called for the 20th-Fox projection room on July 11," co-chairman Harry Lamont stated. He emphasized that exhibitors, theatre managers, branch managers, and salesmen were invited. Details of the voting plan, received from COMPO in New York, will be presented at the gathering. Literature will be distributed. Each salesman will be given a number of theatres to contact for their cooperation in establishing the machinery of lobby balloting. Lamont will preside at the meeting. Serving with him on the committee are Louis W. Schine, Schine Circuit, Gloversville, and Ray Smith, Warners branch manager.

IENE Regional Meet Is Highly Successful

BOSTON—The first of the regional upstate meetings conducted by Independent Exhibitors of New England, a unit of National Allied, was such a success that others have been scheduled in Vermont and Maine at an early date. Edward Lider, president, IENE, and Carl Goldman, executive director, presided over the luncheon meeting at the Eagle Hotel with the following exhibitors present, John Anthony, Marie Bruno, Fenton Scribner, Armand Pepin, George Freeman, all of Manchester; Warren Nichols, Peterboro; Fred Markey, Exeter; Ken Dimmock, Hanover; Joe Bronstein, Nashua; Henry Gaudet, Weirs; Beryl Aldrich, Lisbon; Robert Robie, Hookset; and Walter Stariknok, Boscawen.

Problems of adverse legislation were aired, including how to handle the hearing scheduled for the following day on a bill before the Senate Labor Committee to raise the minimum wage for part-time help, including theatre employes. The COMPO Audience Awards elections were discussed, with members urged to cast their ballots. Film rentals was another subject on the agenda, as well as toll-TV, with the group brought up to date on the efforts of the anti-toll-TV committee's work.

New England Heart Award Goes To Rudolph F. King

BOSTON—When word came that Robert O'Donnell was unable to make the trip from Texas, Arthur Lockwood was rushed in to take over the emcee duties at the Great Heart Award banquet when the Variety Club of New England presented the award to Rudolph F. King, Massachusetts Registrar of Motor Vehicles. The ballroom of the Hotel Statler was filled with more than 800 friends of King who witnessed the ceremonies when he was the recipient of the annual award for "doing the greatest amount of good for the greatest number of people."

The speakers were Archbishop Richard J. Cushing; Walter Brown, chief barker; Richard I. Furbush, representing Governor Herter; Jack Brown, representing Mayor Hynes; George Hoover, chief barker, Variety International; Frederic Clarke, New Hampshire Commissioner of Motor Vehicles; Curt Gowdy, "the voice of the Red Sox"; Jim Britt, sportscaster; and Dr. Daniel Marsh, chancellor of Boston University. Dr. Sidney Farber, scientific director, Children's Cancer Research Foundation, made the presentation.

"Sinbad" Booking Hit By Buffalo Catholics

BUFFALO—The area's newest drive-in, the Twin, opened on June 24 with a first-run showing of "Son Of Sinbad," and "20,000 Leagues Under The Sea." Manager Anthony Ragusa presented orchids to the first 1500 ladies and there were free gifts for the kiddies. "Lucky Pierre," a local WHLD radio personality, is broadcasting his regular program from both the Twin drive-ins from 6:15 until 9 p.m.

Tri-States Automatic Vending Company is operating a cafeteria snack bar in the Twin, and there is a children's playground, with merry-go-round, slides, and swings.

When it became known that the Twin was to show "Son Of Sinbad," which has been condemned by the Legion of Decency, The Catholic Union and Times, local diocesan weekly, published the following at the top of its theatre page:

"NOTICE! Since the Twin Drive-In Theatre, Wolden at Dick Road, one and one-half miles east of Thruway Plaza, has announced the showing of the condemned motion picture, 'Son Of Sinbad,' the Legion of Decency is asking all practical Catholics to avoid this theatre, not only during the showing of 'Son Of Sinbad,' but also for the remainder of the 1955 outdoor season." The same notice was used in the local Buffalo newspapers.

Glenys Blumenthal, Portland, Maine. . . . Robert Werner has taken a lease on the State, East Milton. . . . Redstone Drive-In Theatres have applied for a license to erect a huge drive-in theatre on 30 acres of undeveloped land at East Boston. Mayor Hynes stated from his office that he will approve an amusement license for the proposed theatre.

The Suffolk, Holyoke, Mass., has been leased for a 10-year term to Bing Theatre Company, a subsidiary of Western Massachusetts Theatres. In 1936, Rifkin Theatres, headed by Herman Rifkin, took a long term lease on the Suffolk from Charles Rackcliffe, and in 1945, Herman Rifkin purchased the property and continued to operate the house. Bill Jordan, manager under the Rifkins, continues, as does the rest of the staff. . . . Bob Hope, plugging Paramount's "Seven Little Foys," which was greeted enthusiastically at the Paramount on a sneak prevue basis, was in town to meet the press. Arnold Van Leer, Paramount publicist, arranged a cocktail party for him at the Sheraton Plaza Hotel.

It is the first time the Capitol operated on half-time since its opening. . . . Mike Perna, who recently sold the old Academy to the Marine Trust Company, has purchased the Keith, formerly owned by Dewey Michaels. The purchase price is said to be $65,000. Veteran exhibitor Jim Bailey is manager.

The Community Drive-In Church has opened for the summer season at the Empire Drive-In, near Rochester. Improved electronic devices, including new microphones at the pulpit, have been installed. Attendance each Sunday last season emphasized the value of the drive-in services for vacationists on their way for a day's outing, and for sportsmen bound for a week-end of fishing. Semi-invalids and aged persons who find it difficult to walk or climb stairs have been able to attend the services without getting out of the cars which brought them. . . . When Edward J. Wall, field representative, Paramount, was in setting up an advance promotion campaign with Arthur Krolick and Charlie Taylor at the UPT executive offices, he also passed out stogies. It seems Granpa Wall was celebrating the birth of a baby boy to Mrs. Robert T. Wall, wife of his son, in Brady hospital, Albany.

DURHAM, N. C., NEWS—Jesse Wellons, part-owner, Sky-View Drive-In, Fayetteville, N. C., John D. Garner, manager, and Raymond A. Toler, projector operator, were fined $1500 each in Cumberland County Recorder's Court after being convicted of exhibiting immoral motion pictures; a fourth defendent, Cliff Wellons, who is in the drive-in business with his brother, Jesse, was acquitted. The convicted defendants, who also were given six-month suspended terms, and placed on probation for two years, gave notice of appeal to Superior Court. The convictions were handed down after a private showing of the films seized during a recent raid by Sheriff L. L. Guy. Judge Seavey Carroll held that Lili St. Cyr's version of "Cinderella's Love Lessons," and "Striporama," starring Georgia Sothern, were "obscene and immoral." . . . E. H. De Dreylinger, general manager of three houses in the Sky-View chain, Fayetteville, testified that the films had passed the Pennsylvania Censorship Board after certain scenes had been deleted, that the deletions remained in the Fayetteville showing, and that the films were booked "in good faith."

Cincinnati

Tri-State premiere of "Cinerama Holiday" at the Capitol probably developed more hoopla, newspaper space and radio and TV time than that given any previous film shown locally. Bill Green, Detroit, Cinerama division press chief, pulled out all the stops at a press prevue and the formal opening the following night, preceded by a dinner for 1,000 at the Cincinnati Club. Present for the dinner and filming were governors or other high state officials of Ohio, Indiana, and Kentucky, mayors of a score of neighboring cities, with Mayor Carl W. Rich of this city presiding as dinner toastmaster; Louis DeRochemont, director, and his wife; Dr. and Mrs. John Marsh, Kansas City, stars in the film; three bands with performing majorettes, College of Music a cappella choir; and several Cinerama officials. Two local TV stations aired portions of the proceedings, and local newspapers ran many columns of pics and stories. . . . A Hollywood crew was in to film activity highlights of Tent 3, Variety Clubs, for "Heart of Show Business." No "Blackboard" Ban, Censor Board Rules

DURHAM, N. C.—The Greensboro, N. C., Board of Amusements, after a private screening, found that MGM's controversial "Blackboard Jungle" does not violate city ordinances or state laws and that its objectionable features are not sufficient to prevent its being shown.

The City Council at Greensboro recently turned over to the board the duties of screening objectionable films after citizens urged that the Council ban the showing there of "Blackboard Jungle" and other films which might be objectionable.

The board's action on "Blackboard Jungle" was its first in the censorship field. It recognized that certain aspects of the film might be controversial and objectionable to certain people, but agreed that it does not reach the point where it becomes so objectionable that it can be made the basis of criminal prosecution or a proceeding to revoke the license of theatre owners showing it.

The protest against the scheduled showing of the movie at Greensboro was made by a member of the Greensboro unit of Knights of Columbus, who pointed out that the Catholic Legion of Decency had classified it as objectionable.

Cleveland

Vandals dynamited the new Tri-Vale Drive-In, Coshocton, O., last fortnight and seriously damaged parts of the screen tower and the projection equipment. The entire concession building was destroyed. Frank Gilfilen, owner, called the FBI to unravel the mystery. Gilfilen built the new drive-in to take the place of his Skyway Drive-In, which was torn down to make way for a new road. . . . Toll TV might hurt theatres and it might not affect them at all, but eventually we will have it, according to P. E. Essick, head, Modern Theatres, who calls it another step forward in the media of communications, although he has some serious doubts about its success, when the public is accustomed to free TV. Essick is not worried about the immediate effect of toll TV on his situations. . . . Nat Barach, National Screen branch manager, reports that he has sold to exhibitors thousands of Fess Parker fan photos with space for merchant advertising. . . . $500,000 Damages Sought In D-I Suit

CLEVELAND—Jack Gertz, John M. Urbansky, and J. Stuart Cangney have filed a petition in Common Pleas Court, asking $500,000 damages from former state representative James J. Barton and his associates, claiming breach of contract. The petition states that the plaintiffs entered into a contract with Barton to build a drive-in on Pearl Road property owned by him, the terms of which were that Barton would provide the property and the other three would provide a minimum of $75,000 to build the theatre.

The petition says that after a building permit was secured, Barton disregarded the contract and entered into a new one with a new group of associates to build the drive-in on the same property, which is now almost completed.

The plaintiffs seek mandatory injunction to turn the property over to them in addition to a judgment against the defendants for actual damages, punitive damage, and attorneys fees. Other defendants named with Barton in the petition are Mrs. Emma T. Barton, Herb Ochs, Ben L. Ogron, Berlo Vending Company, and the Capital Bank of Cleveland.

Old Exchangemen Don't Even Fade Away

PHILADELPHIA—For those who wonder what exchangemen do when they "hang up their gloves" and retire, reproduced here is a letter received from the inimitable Bob Lynch, who for many years dominated the Philadelphia territory for MGM.

Enclosed with the letter were non-reproducible color photos of Bob's beautiful bride and Bob in a small, white, sweep operated boat surrounded by eight very sunburned natives. Bob was the one with the panama hat.

The letter is as follows:

"I got a problem that maybe you can help me with a bit. Since I have moved to Miami Beach I have had some time on my hands, so naturally have been looking around for some way to make a few bucks. I think I have hit on something.

"I ran into a combination Calypso and Ubangi band, and I have put them under a 10 year contract. In fact, I got a lawyer from the exhibitors and one from the distributors to draw up this contract. These boys are really quite versatile. They can dive for coins, sing, and play several kinds of music; they can wash windows, shovel snow, and could double in a picture if somebody wanted to make one in the King Solomon mine country.

"Even though I know you are very busy, if you can't do anything to help me with this, I'll appreciate it if you will pass the word around to some of the boys. In fact, if you run into Sammy Stiefel, maybe, he could work out a three day booking on this band. Naturally, you will see me in the Number One boat, on account of being their personal manager. I also appear personally with them. To start them off right I generally do a little monologue at the same price."

MRS. LOORAM HAS HER SAY

NOT THROUGH FEAR of the "action" threatened in the first paragraph, but in order to be completely fair to both Mrs. Looram and to our readers, we are reprinting verbatim the three and one half page letter on the official stationery of the National Legion of Decency and signed by Mary Hardin (Mrs. James F.) Looram in her capacity as chairman, Motion Picture Department, I.F.C.A., under date of June 29, 1955, which we received recently.

"Dear Mr. Emanuel:

"The actionable editorial which you published in your magazine under the date of June 1st has come to my attention and I am asking you to give equal space and prominence to my answer.

"In the first place, may I state that your editorial shows an appalling lack of information and understanding of the 'modus operandi' of the Legion of Decency and of the qualifications, training and experience of its reviewers, who operate under the direction of the Motion Picture Department of the International Federation of Catholic Alumnae.

"As their Chairman for more than twenty-five years and as an Executive in the National Office of the Legion for the past twenty years, I am responding to your captious diatribe which you facetiously call 'advice.'

"Resorting to ridicule rather than reason, you have passed judgment upon the training, qualifications and experience of our review group while you evidence little knowledge of the criteria of moral judgment applied to entertainment motion pictures.

"Can one judge the efficiency of the Legion of Decency's reviewers without being a member of the executive staff or the Catholic Hierarchy whom they serve?

"You question the training and impugn the experience of a group of women who for more than twenty-five years have constituted the official reviewing group of the Legion of Decency. These women, on a voluntary basis, without remuneration, have been chosen because of their specific qualifications and special ability in applying principles of objective morality to entertainment motion pictures.

"Under the guidance of experts in the field of morality and decency, these reviewers continue their training many years after they have finshed their college courses in philosophy and ethics.

"Traditional standards of morality upon which the sanctification of the individual, the sacredness of the home and the ethical foundation of civilization necessarily depend—are the yardstick we use.

"The reviewer does not evaluate the technical, artistic or entertainment value of the films (unless she is a professional critic as some of our reviewers are). They recognize and appreciate the truly great films which have come to the screen and admit that there have been many of them—in fact, far in the majority. However, they are deeply concerned about that percentage of films which constitutes a moral threat, especially to youth in these days of increased juvenile delinquency.

"Our reviewers check on the morality of the theme of the film—the decency of treatment and note in cases of portrayal of evil whether there are any voices of morality to make articulate the moral principles involved in the issue being dramatized.

"Our reviewers recognize, diagnose and object to the vivous cancer of suggestiveness, casual acceptance of divorce, excessive brutality and condonations of immorality—including perversion, such as incest, lesbianism and other eroticisms. They are just as quick to note the last minute pay-off which is a stupidly unconvincing and ineffectual routine. Some of Hollywood's best overseas markets have voiced the same objections recently.

"Our reviewers' acquaintance with the rules embodied in the Ten Commandments is more than a conventional bow. They also can detect a Code violation as quickly as a member of the Code Administration.

"Our reviewers are dedicated to a cause which in its final analysis should be your cause as an exhibitor—for in the past they have learned with few exceptions—that Decency means Dollars and Dirt means Deficits.

"Your fatuous reference to the reviewers 'tittering over problems' sounded like the prating of a high school columnist who feared some one might not read his column if he failed to use the old 'ad hominem' technique.

"Women who devote four and five days per week to the serious review of motion pictures have little time left for small talk at 'bridge clubs.' During the past two years, particularly with the increase in the number of films which have passed through the Code without the Code passing through them, the reviewers have even less time for an occasional game of bridge.

"When essential safeguards against indecency and the glorification of evil are weakened, there is only one direction in which the films move—and it is not upward.

"Your reference to the film 'jockeyed by an expert' which contained vulgar gestures which were passed by 'the ladies' was an ungrounded statement. By your own admission the film was classified as B-Morally Objectional in Part for All. Does that indicate that the reviewers were napping? Some of the executives in the motion picture industry can testify to the alert and vigilant training of the women reviewers in this respect.

"There is no denying the fact that foreign films, both quantitively and qualitatively, contain a much higher percentage of objectionable material than our Hollywood pictures, but the old maxim 'noblesse oblige' would prompt us to expect more of the American motion picture industry which has boasted, on more than one occasion, of its excellent system of self-regulation.

"I am glad that you recommend a small compact committee of clergy from parish fields who are so well qualified for review work. Indeed, they are eminently qualified and have contributed their services in conjunction with our women reviewers ever since the inception of the Legion of Decency. Mr. Emanuel, where have you been?

"Like our reviewers, they are realists. Perhaps a different sort than you had in mind for they know that the term realism covers a multitude of sins. Under the pretext of realism the public has served up to it tidbits of juicy scandal, the rare and raw morsels of pornography, and the sweepings of the gutter in both story and film fare.

"You intimate in your last paragraph of the June 22nd editorial that the Legion of Decency reviewers should not be granted the privilege of reviewing films in the projection rooms of the various motion picture companies. This is a matter upon which the film companies evidently think differently than you, Mr. Emanuel. For twenty years, the motion picture companies have extended the reviewers of the Legion every courtesy in this regard. If this were not the case, how could our women rewiewers and our clerical reviewers evaluate and classify product in advance of their exhibition?

"It would be interesting to know how you picked upon the nnmber of 3-73 reviewers. We usually have not less than five or more than a dozen reviewers at each preview.

"Since reading your more recent attack in your June 22nd issne, I should like to point up the difference between your trade press reviewers and ours.

"1. Your reviewers criticize only the artistic, entertainment and technical qualities of films. Our reviewers evaluate only from the moral point of view.

"2. Your reviewers are paid workers. Our reviewers are volunteers.

"3. You consider your reviewers experienced and trained after three years. The training of our reviewers, under the executive staff of the Legion, continues year in and year out, making them highly skilled and sufficiently proficient to evaluate motion pictures from the moral point of view.

"Expecting that you will give equal prominence and equal space to this clarification of the qualifications, training and experience of the Legion of Decency review group. I am"

While this letter seems to say very little of a positive nature that can be answered, and seems to confine itself to obvious diatribes, platitudes, and repeated statements unsupported by proofs of any sort, its extreme length alone would place serious space limitations on any answer. As a matter of fact, many of the answers that could be made lie in the not-referred-to portions of the very editorials of ours to which Mrs. Looram takes exception. Is it possible that she missed entirely their point?

Stated as simply as we know how, for the benefit of Mrs. Looram or anyone else who is interested, here is our position:

We share the Legion of Decency's objectives for cleanliness, morality and good taste in motion pictures. We do not share the Legion of Decency's obvious regard for its "volunteer" viewing committees of ladies, however able "in applying prineiples of objective morality," and we believe they are unfair to the industry: (a) if their members remain anonymous; (b) if their training and qualifications remain unknown; (c) if their numbers fluctuate, as they do, far beyond the "dozen" to which Mrs. Looram admits; (d) if they are itinerant to the place of seldom seeming familiar; (e) if they "view" on occasion without the presence of even one clergyman to serve as a guide or monitor; or (f) if they use the "viewing" as an occasion for entertaining their husbands or menfolk. And we do not share the Legion of Decency's belief that permanent good can come from "footsy" cutting and repairing jobs at the release level, regardless of how expert.

As a motion picture theatre paper, serving nearly 10,000 showmen across the United States and Canada, we expect to have more to say on the above subjects from time to time. And we expect to say it.

Should what we have to say make otherwise nice "volunteers" go just a little bit frantic and "girlie," we can be sorry, but we suppose it is only what can be expected.

A BOW TO NICK SCHENCK

With all of the fuzzy-brained thinking, and split-tongued talking, that has been going on about TV, so that you sometimes wonder whether some TV executives are frustrated film producers or whether some film producers are frustrated TV executives, it is refreshing to note the following very direct and positive statement from Nicholas M. Schenck, president, Loew's, Inc., parent company for MGM, and one of the wisest veterans that this industry has produced.

Announcing that MGM would produce a half-hour weekly TV program titled "The MGM Parade" starting next fall, Schenck said his studio was not overlooking the interests of theatre operation by entering TV. He further commented:

"Here at MGM we have made a study of television and have in mind the point of view of motion picture exhibitors. We are now evolving a type of program which will be good popular entertainment and will serve the mutual interests of our customers (exhibitors and theatre operators) and ourselves. A portion of our 'MGM Parade' will be devoted to information about the studio's forthcoming pictures to be played exclusively in motion picture theatres."

Thank you, Mr. Schenck! The title of "THE FRIENDLY COMPANY" was no accident!

NEW YORK
By Mel Konecoff

PRODUCT AND PLAYOFF: Harry Brandt, prominent exhibitor and president, ITOA, recently returned from a six-week tour of Europe with the plea for American exhibitors to encourage foreign producers via increased playing time and bookings. Brandt felt that the product for the most part, especially that which was dubbed into English or that which was recorded in English, was particularly desireable in these days of picture shortages.

KONECOFF

Producers in England, France, and Italy stand ready to turn out bigger and better product with plenty of money available if exhibitors here show them the slightest encouragement. They stand prepared to dub or to produce dual versions in English given the okeh by exhibitors. Brandt reported that his circuit has played much of the foreign-made product with some good results, and exhibitors should realize that there is a great potential here given the proper promotion, publicity, and advertising similar to that given American-made films or to those made by American producers abroad, which are readily accepted by many exhibitors in this country.

He saw several productions while touring the countries and purchased the American and Canadian rights to the French film, "Stopover At Orly," on behalf of Trans-Lux Pictures. This may be offered to DCA for distribution after dubbing. He has deals pending for two others, the German-made "Ludwig" in Technicolor and the Italian-made "Lastrada," both of which would be widely accepted by the public, he predicted.

Brandt reported that pictures of any origin were doing sensational business wherever he went, as was Cinerama, and that there is little TV in either Italy or France.

BROADWAY GROSSES

(As of this Monday)

"Stranger" Hot As Weather

NEW YORK—Despite the prolonged heat wave, the Broadway first-runs, for the most part, continued with satisfactory grosses last weekend.

According to usually reliable sources reaching MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR, the breakdown was as follows:

"We're No Angels" (Paramount). Paramount claimed $55,000 for the opening week.

"Lady And The Tramp" .(Disney-Buena Vista). Roxy reported $29,000 for Thursday through Sunday, with the third week dropping to $45,000.

"Love Me Or Leave Me" (MGM). Radio City Music Hall, with stage show, garnered $75,000 for Thursday through Sunday, with the eighth and last week sure to tally $125,000.

"The Seven Little Foys" (Paramount). Criterion was heading toward a satisfactory $40,000 second week.

"Not As A Stranger" (UA). Capitol claimed $75,000 on the second week.

"Davy Crockett, King Of The Wild Frontier" (Disney-Buena Vista). Globe was down to $8,700 on the seventh and last week.

"House Of Bamboo" (20th-Fox). Mayfair did a quick drop to $17,000 for the second week.

"Summertime" (UA). Astor held at $40,000 on the third week.

"The Shrike" (U-I). Victoria opened to a $30,000 first session.

"The Seven Year Itch" (20th-Fox). Loew's State looked for the sixth week to hit $26,000.

Lausche Asks For Censorship

COLUMBUS, O.—In signing into law a bill banning obscene movies and comic books, Governor Frank Lausche said last week that the Ohio Legislature "erred greviously" in failing to enact a prior censorship law, asserting that the arguments of censorship opponents are "plain balderdash."

The Governor went on to remark that "expert constitutional lawyers helped to prepare the bill, and did so with complete knowledge of requirements laid down by the U. S. Supreme Court." He said that it is his hope that the legislators will reconsider the situation and enact a censorship law in the next session, admitting that the current law will be of some help to curb "evil influence" on morality of certain media, but that it can accomplish little compared to what an adequate censorship law would.

Sidney B. Lust Dies

WASHINGTON—Suffering a heart attack, Sidney B. Lust, 71, local circuit owner, died at his summer home at Dare Beach, Md.

Lust started in show business half a century ago as a stagehand in New York and eventually became operator of 11 theatres in Maryland and Virginia.

He went to Washington in 1914 as partner with Warners in a film exchange. Lust later went into business for himself and bought and sold independent films in West Virginia, Maryland, Delaware, Virginia, and the District of Columbia.

Mass. Sunday Censors Unconstitutional

State Supreme Court Voids Law In Effect Since 1908; Decision May Also Affect Acting Weekday Censorship

BOSTON—The Sunday censorship law regarding motion pictures, which has been on the books since 1908 in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, was declared unconstitutional and void last week in a unanimous decision of the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts. The opinion was written by Judge Raymond S. Wilkins.

In May of this year, the full bench of the Supreme Judicial Court heard the arguments of counsel in two censorship cases, William Conant Brewer, Jr., of the legal firm of Peabody, Koufman and Brewer, represented the Brattle, Cambridge, while Alfred Albert, Albert, Albert and Tyber, represented the Times Film Corporation of New York. Also arguing for Times Films was Felix Bilgrey, New York firm of Bilgrey and Levenson. The counsel was seeking a declaratory judgment on the constitutionality of the Sunday licensing law. In this state, prior to the opinion handed down today, the Commissioner of Public Safety had the authority to pass on all films before granting Sunday licenses to exhibitors.

Brewer represented the owners of the Brattle, Cyrus Harvey, Jr., and Bryant Haliday, who had applied three times in vain to the Commissioner for a Sunday license to show the Swedish film, "Miss Julie." The film had been passed for weekday showings by local censors but had been refused a Sunday license. The case was brought before the Middlesex Superior Court (a lower court), and the Commissioner's rights were upheld. An appeal was taken to the Supreme Judicial Court. In his argument, Brewer stated that the Massachusetts statute was a prior restraint on freedom of speech in the form of motion pictures, and was therefore invalid under the first and 14th amendments. In the unanimous opinion of the bench, Judge Wilkins wrote, "The present controversy concerns exhibitions on only one day a week and that day Sunday, which does not seem to alter the governing rules of law. It is unthinkable that there is a power, absent as to secular days, to require the submission to advance scrutiny by governmental authority of newspapers to be published on Sunday, of sermons to be preached on Sunday, or public addresses to be made on Sunday." He also added that, in the Court's opinion, the issues are similar to those in the Burstyn case as handed down by the United States Supreme Court in which that court held that motion pictures were entitled to the protection which the Constitution extends to free speech and free press.

Although the decision of Judge Wilkins is limited to Sunday censorship only, a somewhat similar statute which authorizes censorship on weekdays by local groups may be affected by this decision.

Rank Group Expands British Theatre Interests

LONDON—Continuing its expansion throughout the United Kingdom, the J. Arthur Rank Organization has taken over additional theatre interests, with the acquisition of the Regal, Newcastle, and the Regal, Sunderland, both of which are good-size houses. Earlier this year, JARO took over seven situations in Scotland and 11 in Northern Ireland. At the same time, a company spokesman revealed that the Gaumont, in the London vicinity, closed for 10 years because of bomb damage, will be reopened this month. The Gaumont is one of the most modern and luxurious theatres in the south London area, equipped with anamorphic lenses, wide-screen, CinemaScope, and Vista-Vision.

MGM Executives Meet

NEW YORK—Home office and studio executives of MGM began conferences in Hollywood last week to discuss promotional and distribution plans for forthcoming releases, and details about the company's recent television agreement with ABC.

Loew's International president Arthur W. Loew, with his assistant Orton H. Hicks, emplaned for the coast with Charles M. Reagan, vice-president and general sales manager, Howard Dietz, vice-president and advertising head, and Dan S. Terrell, publicity chief. Following studio meetings, they were expected to talk with Samuel Goldwyn and his staff on "Guys And Dolls" promotion.

In the Times case involving two foreign films, the French "Game Of Love" and the Swedish "One Summer Of Happiness," on which arguments were heard at the same time as the Brattle case, the full bench of the Supreme Court also held the statute unconstitutional on the same grounds as stated in the Brattle case.

Allied EDC Nears End Of Talks With Distribs

NEW YORK—There were indications last week that the National Allied Emergency Defense Committee would meet to chart a course of action following the virtual completion of meetings with individual distribution company heads.

With the exception of United Artists, the distribution conferences were completed before July 1 deadline imposed by Allied. It was announced that EDC members, who were on the joint Allied-TOA committee which met with the distributors, are currently preparing a report, but no hint was given about what decisions, if any, have been made which might govern Allied's proposed plan to seek federal legislation regulating film rentals.

The date for a meeting with United Artists executives was not set last week, but it appeared likely that it would be held in the near future.

No Federal Action Seen During Current Session

WASHINGTON—No attempt will be made during this session of Congress to secure Federal legislation regulating film rentals by the Allied States Emergency Defense Committee, it was determined last week, when committee chairman Benjamin Berger was scheduled to present his report at the July 20 directors' meeting here. Congress adjourns July 30 and, obviously, there would be insufficient time for any action approved by the board to be presented to the government. General counsel Abram Myers has, with Berger, consulted the Small Business Committees and Interstate Commerce Committees of both houses, without any definite action having been taken.

UA Sets Tokyo Convention

NEW YORK—United Artists' second convention in its worldwide series of foreign sales meetings will be launched in Tokyo on July 18 in a four-day session bringing together UA executives and representatives from 11 countries in the Far East and Australasia, it was announced last week by Arnold M. Picker, vice-president in charge of foreign distribution, who will preside.

The Tokyo conclave will be followed in September by a convention in Latin America that will assemble key sales personnel from the Central and South American countries. Max E. Youngstein, vice-president, will accompany Picker to Tokyo for conferences, mapping global sales goals for the greatest concentration of important product in the company's 36-year history.

$600,000 Suit Filed

NEW YORK—An anti-trust suit seeking $600,000 treble damages from eight majors, Fabian theatres, and SMH Amusement Corporation, was filed recently by William Infald, operating the Franklin Theatre, Nutley, N. J. The action involves film clearance.

Chicago Censorship Is Challenged In Suit Over Times' "Game Of Love"

NEW YORK—A basic court test of the constitutionality of the motion p cture censorship system in the city of Chicago was instituted last week by Times Film Corporation.

In an action filed in Federal Court in Chicago, Times names as defendants the city of Chicago, Mayor Richard A. Daley, and Police Commissioner Timothy J. O'Connor.

These defendants are charged with illegally withholding a permit for the exhibition of "The Game Of Love," which figured in the recent victory over censorship in Boston.

In denying Times the requested permit to show the film in Chicago, the defendants are infringing on its constitutional rights to freedom of speech and of the press and preventing it from engaging in lawful business activities in Chicago.

The legal action is being handled by Felix J. Bilgrey, Bilgrey and Levinson, Manhattan attorneys, and Abner J. Mikva, a Chicago attorney.

The proceeding has been initiated in the Federal court, they explained, and not in a state court in Illinois, because Times Film Corporation, their client, is a New York Corporation, and the defendants are Chicagoans.

On May 31 the film was rejected by letter by the censorship unit which is under the control of the Police Commissioner. The letter stated that the film was rejected because it is "not acceptable to standards of decency, with immorality featured and dialogue unfit."

At the behest of President Jean Goldwurm, Times appealed this decision to the mayor, who set aside the appeal and upheld the ruling of the censors.

Goldwurm stated that he is determined to make this a complete test of the constitutionality of the censorship set-up in Chicago and was thoroughly prepared to take the issue to the Supreme Court of the United States if necessary.

TV Film Organization Planned

NEW YORK—Plans for an unnamed TV film distributors organization were formulated last fortnight in the offices of Guild Film, when 30 representatives of every major firm in feature and syndication phases of the business get together. Dave Savage, assistant to the president, Guild, was chairman.

A steering committee, to obtain a charter and to lay down rules of procedure, was elected, with Dwight Martin general manager, General Teleradio, chairman; Ralph Cohn, Screen Gems; Frank Reel, Ziv; Savage; Lou Friedland, MCA; and J. Williams, Official. Original spadework for the new group was done by a distributor committee during the last month. The steering committee is expected to make a report within a few weeks.

The new association will have the objectives of improving trade relations and broadening and promoting the industry. There are expected to be 50 member firms.

Kalmus Technicolor Pact Extended; Earnings Increase

NEW YORK—Dr. Herbert T. Kalmus will continue as general manager of the Technicolor companies for another six years, it was revealed last fortnight following meetings of the directors of Technicolor Motion Picture Corporation and Technicolor, Inc. Kalmus has been president, as well as general manager, of the two organizations since their inception. The former firm voted also to create a new post, that of executive vice-president, to which John R. Clarke, Jr., once assistant to Kalmus, has been appointed.

Kalmus announced that the consolidated earnings of the Technicolor companies for the first half of the current year are estimated almost double those for the 1954 corresponding period, in which they were 32 cents a share. Technicolor, Inc., directors declared a dividend of 25 cents a share on the new $1 common stock, and 50 cents on the old no par common, not exchanged.

UA Suit Dismissed

NEW YORK—A suit charging breach of an option agreement in the transfer of United Artists control to the present management, headed by Arthur B. Krim, was dismissed last fortnight by New York Supreme Court Justice Jacob Markowitz. The damage action, which was brought in 1953 by the late Max Kravetz, and continued by his wife, Rina M., charged that Kravetz was party to an option agreement in 1952 calling for the sale of 90 per cent of UA stock, of which the late Paul V. McNutt, also named as a defendant, was trustee, and the option was renounced, with McNutt discontinuing any association with UA. Judge Markowitz took the position that there was insufficient cause of action.

The first bonus for the purchase of a pair of Superscope lenses, offered by Joseph Tushinsky, president, Superscope, was received recently by Max Milbauer, right, owner, Belmont Auto Drive-In, Dayton. The check for $100 is being given by Lee Heidingsfeld, RKO Cincinnati exchange. Any exhibitor, it is said, in the U. S. and Canada who purchases a pair of Superscope lenses at the regular price of $395 is eligible for the $100 bonus from Superscope, to be applied toward the booking of a Superscope print.

Investment Firm Sees 20th-Fox Boom Ahead

NEW YORK—A prediction that 20th-Fox earnings for 1955 would hit $3.50 a share, on sales of $115 million, was made last week in a bulletin published by Carl M. Loeb, Rhoades and Company, a Wall Street investment firm. In 1954, 20th-Fox grossed $3.04 a share on $115,715,815 in sales.

Looking further into the crystal ball, Loeb, Rhoades estimates earnings of about $4 a share in 1956, and approximately $4.50 in 1957, basing its opinion on several different aspects. The discovery of oil on the 280-acre Los Angeles lot is given as an important point, as it may be worth between $6 and $10 a share, and the financial position of the company is very strong also, with $27 million in cash equalling total current liabilities. Net current assets after all liabilities are $21 a share. The imminent consummation of the purchase of 140 Schlesinger theatres in South Africa will increase foreign holdings to almost 400 theatres, exclusive of an interest in British-Gaumont.

The bulletin also points to the improved 20th-Fox CinemaScope, Eidophor, and TV business. Television films, which remain the property of the company, after approximately two years of exclusive distribution by either a network or a sponsor, are available for re-run in theatres or over TV, and thus the future disposal of them represents clear profit. The Eidophor closed circuit, large screen, color TV system, the bulletin says, will eventually form a subsidiary for the company to obtain Broadway shows, sports events, and other entertainment, transmitting these spectacles to theatres. While admitting that it will take time to iron out technical difficulties and sell theatremen on the idea, Loeb, Rhoades says the possibilities of the development are immense.

USIA Film Budget Upped

WASHINGTON—Additional funds for motion picture production by the U. S. Information Bureau, the government's overseas information service, were assured last fortnight when Congress approved an appropriation bill greatly increasing funds for the agency in the fiscal year begun July 1.

The USIA was granted $85 million for its operations in the coming year, an increase of almost seven million over the amount available in the year just ended. How much of the extra funds would be channeled to film production was undetermined, but it was certain that there would be a sizeable increase over the $3,087,000 for last year, inasmuch as the agency originally requested from Congress an appropriation of $88,500,000 for this year in order to increase film funds to $4,484,000. With the compromise appropriation, probably about $4 million will be allotted for production.

Kaplan Joins Schwalberg Firm

NEW YORK— A. W. Schwalberg, president, Artists-Producers Associates, Inc., announced last fortnight the election of Murray M. Kaplan as a vice-president of the company.

President Signs New Anti-Trust Legislation

WASHINGTON—A bill passed by Congress imposing a uniform four-year statute of limitations on private anti-trust suits was signed into law last week by President Eisenhower, the result of several years effort to secure such legislation, largely by motion picture producers.

The new law will take precedence over individual state statutes, some of which permit a plaintiff to go into court as much as 12 years after the original cause of complaint arose. The majors asserted that this resulted in "forum shopping," the suitor seeking the state in which the most time and the highest hopes for success were held out. Another argument for the bill was that the film company cannot determine within in a limited and fixed period of years what the legal effect of a course of action might be.

The same bill increased the criminal penalty for anti-trust conviction from $5,000 to $50,000, a limit that had not been revised for many decades. The Hoover Commission reported unfavorably on this legislation pointing out that, among other things, companies which are likely to be involved in litigation in which they would be criminally punishable for anti-trust infraction are not, as a rule, the kind of organization to be concerned with whether a fine is $5000, $50,000, or more. Without being pushed with serious vigor, the penalty increase was passed with the statute limitation.

Loew's Earnings Rise Seen

NEW YORK—In a summary of Loew's, Inc., stock potential, the Wall Street investment firm of Hirsch and Company last week estimated that the company's earnings for the fiscal year would reach $1.50 per share, compared with $1.28 last year. The report pointed to profits of 64 cents a share for the 28-week period ended March 17, and asserted that the last half of the year would show higher revenues, noting that Standard and Poor's has contended that an increase in the 25 cent quarterly dividend is possible. According to Hirsch, new processes, higher theatre attendance, better rentals abroad, and increased production will combine to result in earnings improvement. The bulletin also mentions Loew's hidden assets of a $50 million film library, and real estate assets of approximately $100 million, which are carried on the books at a depreciated figure of around $46 million.

Clark Heads AM-PAR

NEW YORK—The corporate organization of AM-PAR Record Corporation, new phonograph record subsidiary of American Broadcasting-Paramount Theatres, Inc., has been completed with the election last week by the board of Samuel H. Clark as president. Harry Levine was elected vice-president; Simon B. Siegel, treasurer; Edith Schaeffer, secretary; and Harry J. Wright, assistant treasurer.

Leonard H. Goldenson, Robert H. O'Brien, and Siegel, respectively president, vice-president, and treasurer, AB-PT, are directors of the new company along with Clark and Levine.

20th-Fox Acquires African Circuit Of 150 Theatres

JOHANNESBURG, SOUTH AFRICA —Film magnate Spyros Skouras said 20th-Fox had completed a transaction to take over the major part of John Schlesinger's African Theatres organization. The Schlesinger enterprises include 150 movie houses from Capetown to Kenya, insurance companies, citrus groves, hotel chains, restaurants, and amusement parks.

Skouras' agreement with African Theatres contains a number of reciprocal arrangements. One calls for production of films in South Africa. Schlesinger now is expected to enter the television industry on a broad scale.

U-I Winners Announced

NEW YORK—Winners of the $50,000 "added" prize money in U-I's 17 weeks "Charles J. Feldman Annual Sales Drive" which concluded on May 1 were announced yesterday with 156 bookers, cashiers, office managers, salesmen, branch managers, district managers, and division managers sharing in the prizes. The drive was marked by another new high in world-wide billings.

The southern division, headed by F. J. A. McCarthy, captured first place among the divisions, with Foster M. Blake's western Division taking second.

The district supervised by Henry H. Martin, which includes the Dallas, New Orleans, Oklahoma City, and St. Louis branches, topped the districts, with second place going to James V. Frew, who supervises Atlanta, Charlotte, Cincinnati, Jacksonville, and Memphis, and third place going to P. E. Rosian's district which includes the Cleveland, Detroit, Philadelphia, and Pittsburgh branches.

The winning branch office was Seattle, managed by Arthur Greenfield. Second place among the branches was captured by Jacksonville, managed by Buford Styles; third by New Orleans, directed by C. R. Ost; fourth by Salt Lake City, headed by C. R. Wade, and fifth by Philadelphia, managed by Ed Heibere.

Century Names Officers

QUEENS VILLAGE, N. Y.—Following the annual stockholders' meeting recently, the board of directors of Century Circuit, Inc., met last week in Jersey City, N. J., to elect officers and directors.

Leslie R. Schwartz was named to the presidency of the theatre chain, with Samuel Goodman first vice-president and Andrew A. Nelson second vice-president. Martin H. Newman was elected secretary-treasurer, and Miss Dorothy B. Barko assistant secretary.

The directors, chairmaned by Henry C. Miner, Jr., are: Schwartz, Goodman, Nelson, Newman, James P. McAllister, Fred J. Schwartz, and Frank Milton.

NEW YORK—Walter Mirisch, Allied Artists' executive producer, in town for conferences with company sales executives which bring to fruition the expansion of the company and its entry into the quality field in films, reported at a press conference here last fortnight that AA stands ready to release 35 features in 1955 as well as the same number in 1956. Starting immediately, these will be released at the rate of three monthly, two of which will be higher budget features.

He reported that exhibitor reaction to the company's expansion plans has been most gratifying and that reaction has carried through on bookings for the first of the bigger releases, "Wichita," starring Joel McCrea, in Technicolor and CinemaScope, which is set for July release. Also to see release in July is "Phenix City Story," an explosive, documentary-type feature which will world premiere in Chicago. In line with garnering pre-release cooperation and space in newspapers, a special two-reel documentary short has been prepared for showing to opinion moulders, clubs, civic groups, etc., in advance of the film's playoff.

Mirisch announced, too, that in August, "The Warriors," in Technicolor and CinemaScope, starring Errol Flynn and Joanne Dru, will be released, while in September, "The Body Snatchers," starring Kevin McCarthy, will be ready for release. "Gun Point," also in CinemaScope and Technicolor, starring Fred MacMurray, Dorothy Malone, and Walter Brennan, will be ready to be shown in October. All of the features will be backed with substantial campaigns and will be heavily sold both to the trade and the public.

Getting under way immediately and until the end of the year, it is expected that between 12 to 15 features will be produced in the higher bracket class with many going in CinemaScope, the process preferred by the company. The policy of continuing to bring in better product from abroad is still in effect for release either through Allied Artists or subsidiary companies, but there is no committment as to the number of features to be released from abroad or made overseas. Mirisch anticipated concluding a number of deals with independent producers other than those mentioned like John Huston, William Wyler, and Billy Wilder. Incidentally, Wyler's first, "Friendly Persuasion," with Gary Cooper, in Technicolor and CinemaScope, is budgeted at two millions and should roll on Aug. 15 with Cooper participating in the film's profits. Wilder starts his after the first of the year, while the Huston film, "The Man Who Would Be King," has been delayed because he is still working on "Moby Dick."

SEC Asks Half-Year Reports

Sales Tax Changes Spur Film Production

TORONTO—A change in the manner in which the sales tax is imposed in Canada is expected to have a great deal to do with increasing motion picture productions in this country.

Whereas formerly the sales tax of 10 per cent was imposed on the total cost of production, it is now based on 10 per cent of the total based on nine and a half cents a foot.

For example: A 22-minute, 16mm. film costing $25,000 would formerly have a sales tax of $2,500 added to the cost. However, under the new regulations, the 800-foot film would be charged $7.60 sales tax.

The footage is based on the original footage in which the production value is concentrated as distinct from release prints, the value mentioned to include sound strip, if any. No change was made in the excise tax on release prints: 10 per cent on the actual invoice to the customer. There is exemption from sales tax on any films classified as educational by the National Film Board. The new tax is applicable to both 16mm. and 35mm. black and white or color.

And coincident with the announcement by the government in the sales tax change were announcements by two motion picture producers of studio expansion plans.

In Vancouver, construction has already begun for a studio for Lew Parry Productions, Ltd. The buildings, covering about 10,000 square feet, will cost $45,800, from plans drawn by Gerald Hamilton, architect.

A two-story frame section will have on the lower floor a lobby and a reception area, offices for executives, screening and conference room, film vault, cutting and camera rooms, and telesound department. Script writing and animation departments will be on the upper floor. Acoustic treatment will be given an adjacent studio of concrete block construction with a 20-foot ceiling.

Harry O. Odell, managing director, International Films Ltd., and Commonwealth Enterprises Corporation, Ltd., Hong Kong, is seen chat ing with Allied Artists president Steve Broidy on a recent visit to the studio.

The second announcement came from Peterson Productions, Toronto, who will build a studio on an acre of land on the outskirts of Toronto, with a sound stage of 45,000 square feet. Construction may begin in the fall.

Canadian Comment

Talk of Sunday films in Ontario is again current in the light of editorials in the newspapers, and most particularly in the face of declining boxoffice receipts and closing theatres. Already there are Sunday sports attractions in the city of Toronto and other centres. Public opinion is said to favor the scheme, i.e., a poll of the Canadian Institute of Public Opinion showed 65 per cent approval in cities over 100,000, 51 per cent approval in those from 10,000 to 100,000, and 53 per cent disapproval in towns under 10,000. Yet there are Sunday movies already, point out leaders of the film industry. There are films over TV and private showings of film societies, both without censorship. Newspaper support from The Telegram, Toronto, suggested that City Council prepare a plebiscite on the question. Only Quebec permits the showing of films on Sunday. Opposition from the projectionists' union will undoubtedly be overcome through the lessening of the amount of employment with theatre closures.

With 223 exhibitors in attendance from the Seattle, Portland, Vancouver, and surrounding territories for the recent 23rd Ticket Selling Workshop, MGM neared the end of the series with this turnout at the Olympic Hotel, Seattle. Mike Simons, MGM customer relations director, and Emery Austin, exploitation head, welcomed the guests as the home office representatives. In addition, MGM managers from the three branches were on hand. The above is an over-all shot of the gathering.

The seven-theatre day-and-date debut in Toronto of Davy Crockett was an auspicious one when it came to newspaper promotion. The licensees for the official merchandise of Davy Crockett took two pages in The Telegram to support the opening engagements in the University, Beach, Eglinton, St. Clair, Palace, College, and Runnymeade. The debut was one of the largest ever presented in the city, with so many theatres hooked up in that manner. The Spectator, Hamilton, also featured two co-op pages for the run at the Tivoli, Hamilton, managed by Don Edwards. Bert Brown, Famous Players advertising department, worked out the participation problems.

One of the best known men in the laboratory field, William J. Singleton, director of sales and services, Associated Screen News, has resigned, effective July 31. He succeeded B. E. Norrish as president in March, 1953, following the latter's retirement. He had been general manager from 1948 to 1954, assuming his present post in the recasting of the executive structure following the acquisition of ASN by Paul Nathanson and Maxwell Cummings in 1954.

CINE CHATTER: Walter Hardaker writes the amusement column for the Hamilton Spectator, taking over from Jane Baker who had it temporarily after filling in for John Robinson. . . . The Avalon, Downtown, and Cinema, units of Famous Players Canadian Corporation, Hamilton, were hooked up for a day-and-date policy for the first-run showing of "Son Of Sinbad." . . . Dan Krendel, Famous Players Ontario District "B" Supervisor, is holidaying in Florida with his wife. . . . Graydon A. Matthews, veteran in distribution, died in Montreal following a lengthy illness at the age of 56. At the time of his death he was Saint John Branch manager for J. Arthur Rank Film Distributors (Canada) Ltd., and its Cardinal Films Division. . . . Abe Kovnats was appointed booker in Winnipeg by J. Arthur Rank Film Distributors (Canada), Ltd., succeeding Alec Winegraysky, who was recently promoted to salesman handling 35mm. and 16mm. accounts in the same territory. In Toronto, the Cardinal Films Division of the Rank organization has named Frank Price to the booking staff. Price had been with Empire-Universal Films, Ltd., for the last seven years in the same capacity.

Mexico

Bids from more than 20 foreign firms interested in distributing Mexican films abroad were reported by Eduardo Garduno, board chairman, Cimex, official distribution organization here. Applications are being reviewed, Garduno said, to determine which representatives offer the most advantages. He also revealed that plans for film financing in territories under Cimex control have been approved. Producers will receive 70 per cent of production cost, upped to 85 per cent in exceptional cases. Scripts must be submitted two weeks before shooting date for an official go-ahead.

SWEEPSTAKES Grows And Grows; U-I Offers $500 For "Benson" Bally

PHILADELPHIA—With "The Private War Of Major Benson," Universal-International joins in SHOWMANSHIP SWEEPSTAKES by posting $500 as an award to go to the showman whose campaign is adjudged best in any SWEEPSTAKES entry for the 13 week period running from July 27 to Oct. 19.

To win U-I's $500 one must also win MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR's $100, making the total winning for a "best" campaign on this film $600.

U-I is developing a many faceted promotional campaign on the film, a heart-warming Technicolor comedy starring Charlton Heston, Julie Adams, and new child star Tim Hovey.

The initial phase of the campaign has been to develop the greatest possible word of mouth publicity possible. This has been done by a record number of "sneak previews" in large theatres in very exchange center and key city in the country to which the company's exhibitor customers were invited so that they could gauge audience reaction to the film. This phase of the campaign is continuing with almost every exchange scheduled to have two such "sneaks" on the theory that in this manner more and more "salesmen" for the picture will be developed.

This phase of the campaign will reach its climax with the Manhattan, Kans., world premiere of the film on July 19, which is being highlighted by a five week promotion in conjunction with the network television and radio programs, "Strike It Rich." The Manhattan benefit premiere in cooperation with "Strike It Rich," followed by the Kansas territorial openings, is also being sparked by the personal appearances of Julie Adams, Tim Hovey, and by a national promotional barrage.

While the Kansas world premiere phase of the campaign goes forward, U-I will be sending special field exploitation representatives into the important key centers from coast to coast to seek the support of the influential opinion-making groups in the community such as the clergy, the educators, and the clubwomen telling them that the film is, probably, the best example of the type of wholesome film entertainment they have been demanding of Hollywood, and suggesting that if they wish to encourage the making of further pictures of this type they will have to mobilize the support of their organizations behind this one. This phase of the campaign is something which can be carried forward by exhibitors in their own communities and U-I is developing special material which they can use for this purpose.

It has been some time since a film company had a new "child" star to promote, and U-I is developing an entire campaign around Tim Hovey. He will be in Kansas for the world premiere, accompanied by his mother and Gladys Hoene, schoolteacher of the U-I studios. They are coming to New York following the world premiere for a week of national TV and radio promotional appearances.

U-I will provide exhibitors with a special promotional manual on "The Private War Of Major Benson" to give them addi-

Safety Theme Boosts Summer Kiddie Shows

HARTFORD, CONN.—Summer kiddie attendance is being given a sizeable boost through Saturday matinee efforts of Ray McNamara, manager, Allyn. He has a 10-week "Theatre Safety Club" in progress, with lucky stub holders given prizes by local merchants each week.

To become members, the kids have to take a "Safety Pledge" which is printed on the back of their membership cards: "As a member of this club I pledge to obey traffic lights; not to take chances; not to play on streets; to look both ways while crossing streets; not to ride bicycles in traffic."

Each card bears a lucky number stub, entitling bearer to a chance for the prizes as well as admission to the theatre. The shows, incidentally, are regular theatre programs, screened in conjunction with Saturday matinee schedule, with addition of cartoons and novelty films.

BETTER MANAGEMENT DEPARTMENT

George Nonamaker
Editor

NOW THAT SHOWMANSHIP SWEEPSTAKES, the exclusive $100 per week payoff feature of Better Management, has been running for two weeks, details of 10 entries, two winners, and eight runners-up, have been published for the benefit of all.

It is our suggestion that you SAVE these advertising, publicity, exploitation, good will building stunts, in the same manner that you have been saving MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR reviews of films in the pink Servisection for years, and the yellow check-ups, as well.

By the end of the year you will have accumulated 260 stunts tried by the showmen of the United States and Canada and all proven successful in their particular spots. These stunts, judged by a most competent jury of 56 heads of circuits representing thousands of theatres, as not only worthy of MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR's prize, but worthy of trying in other houses, should prove of unestimable valuc to exhibitors and a compilation of the best drum beating and patronage building effort ever compiled by a national motion picture trade publication.

So, get yourselves a pair of scissors, a tube of paste, and a scrap book. Certainly, if you keep all of the entries in the contest on hand for ready adaptation and use, you will make the effort much more important by cashing in on it and getting full value out of it yourself.

—NONAMAKER

Universal-International has also jumped upon SHOWMANSHIP SWEEPSTAKES band-wagon by offering $500 for the best campaign placing first in the weekly judgings in MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR's selections during the 13-week period from July 27 to Oct. 19 on their "The Private War Of Major Benson." This makes "Benson" worth $600 to the showman who can knock it down. The above scenes from the film, already recipient of Parents Magazine Special Merit Award, show, left, Charlton Heston, who has meant no harm to little Tim Hovey, but the little cadet didn't know it, and it's hard to convince the scornful mother superior, Nana Bryant, and the equally scornful school physician, Julie Adams. In the center, Heston has convinced Adams to go on a date with him but she has insisted on taking Hovey with them; and, right, Heston registers his annoyance when Adams, in bidding good-night to Hovey, asks the youngster whether he enjoyed himself and the kid replies, "Yes, but next time, don't take him."

PHILADELPHIA—It was a tough battle, mother, but I won!

That, indeed, might well be the exclamation of Mel Jolley, manager, Century, Hamilton, Ontario, Canada, who has been adjudged winner of MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR'S SHOWMANSHIP SWEEPSTAKES, contest two.

In a contest which had the 56 judges considerably divided on their selection, and which was by no stretch of the imagination the runaway the first contest proved to be for Sid Kleper, Loew's College, New Haven, Conn., Jolley won with his "Famous Fun Festival" newspaper kiddie matinee promotion.

Jolley's check for $100 is on the way to him along with our compliments and congratulations in what one judge stated was "a contest in which all entries should have been winners."

However, there is a new contest every week. If you didn't win in the second group of five, keep trying.

Proofs of the five entries for next week's consideration by the judges are now in their hands.

FAMOUS FUN FESTIVAL

Submitted by Century Theatre,
Hamiltan, Ontaria, Canada
Mel Jalley, Manager

858 Seats • 70 Cents Top Adult
Admissian • Family Patronage

"To lure the small fry back to the theatre I have a 'FAMOUS FUN FESTIVAL' for the members of the Spectator (local newspaper) Junior Press Club every Saturday morning.

"At these weekly meetings selected films are shown, while added attractions are a sing song, door prizes donated by the newspaper, guest entertainers, including musicians, sports celebrities, others, all of whom give their services free.

"Much free publicity is obtained in the Spectator, especially on its weekly 'Junior Press Club' page with contests, etc. To publicize 'Long John Silver' recently a coloring contest was held through a line drawing on this page; on which the theatre obtained 815 free lines of space. There were 1,500 entries for the $75.00 worth of prizes. A new 'scrambled names' contest has been started.

"To become a member, all the kiddies have to do is fill out an application form printed on the Spectator's children's page. They then receive a 'Cub Reporter' membership button. As they win various contests, they can progress to 'Ace Reporter,' 'City Editor,' etc. At present there are over 5,000 members, who are walking ads when they wear these badges.

"Members get into the 'film festival' at a reduced admission rate of 15 cents, while non-members pay 20 cents. If they all decided to come at the same time, truthfully, we do not know how we would take care of them.

"However, it has been stated that the Famous Fun Festival with its newspaper tie-in helps curb juvenile delinquency.

"This juvenile promotion is economical, original and effective. To date, the Spectator has given out more than $2,500 worth of prizes to club members; and has given the theatre an unlimited amount of free publicity. The theatre, the newspaper, the kiddies, and their parents all benefit.

"In addition, on Saturdays the Spectator pays half the cost of an increased display ad taken by the theatre and featuring the Junior Press Clubs' Famous Fun Festival."

Beauty Contest Promotion

Submitted by Paramaunt Theatre,
Ashland, Ky.
John Warren Gadfrey, Manager

1426 Seats • 55 Cents Top Adult
Admission • General Patronage

A "Miss Ashland" beauty contest was just staged at this theatre. Godfrey contacted the Junior Women's Club of Ashland to act as chaperons for the various contestants and sponsors of the event. The Mayor of Ashland was present to award the trophy to the winner.

Held on a Saturday night, Godfrey says, "Our normal business was more than tripled by this promotion."

The contest received five-column headline, four column picture and a complete story on the front page of the Ashland Daily Independent.

The winner represented Ashland at Louisville later for the "Miss Kentucky" title.

"This promotion," says Godfrey, "regained quite a bit of our 'lost audience' as many of the persons present had not been in a theatre for quite a spell; and after being here and liking the contest and the pictures informed me that they would again make the movies their regular diet.

"The only cost of the entire promotion, outside of hard work, was that of some extra help. All prizes to the winner were donated by various merchants of the city.

HOUSE POLICIES

Submitted by Narthwood Theatre,
Northwood, Iowa
Charlie Jones, Owner

400 Seats • 50 Cents Tap Adult
Admission • General and Rural Patronage

$HOW $WEEP
1955-56 SERI

The following entries, according to C. L. Jones, come under the general heading of "house policies."

BIRTHDAY CARDS. Hand written stenciled cards have been found to make the message more personal. On file is a record of all kids' birthdays. The message reads: "Greetings and best wishes on your birthday, (date). As our gift we send you this card which you may use for a free admission to any show within a week of your birthday." We make sure to personally congratulate them when they present the card at the door. This stunt has been used here for years.

BABY SITTERS PASS. This is just getting started here. Copy on the pass reads: "As part of your pay for sitting babies for us tonight we give you this pass card which is good for any show at the Northwood Theatre until ....." The passes are signed by Jones and countersigned by the employers of the sitter. It has been publicized as follows in the local newspapers: "We want you to get back to the movies. We want you enough that we want to help you get back. Tell you what we're gonna do. If you have a baby sitter, and you don't need one, you know—many people bring three-week-old babies to the movies, we'll stand the first 50 cents of her salary by sending home with you a free movie pass as part of your "sitters" pay. Only she will be allowed to use it. Just ask us for a "Baby Sitters Pass next time you hire a sitter so you can come to the show."

MONTHLY CALENDAR PROGRAMS. Bearing a punched hole at the top of the light cardboard stock used so that they may be hung in a convenient spot in the home, these have been found most effective for many years. They are mailed out under U. S. postage paid permit. Noted from the program sample are several other attendance building stunts such as "Every Thursday is Mom's Night Out. Mom Free when accompanied by Dad; free nights for various high school classes with school cooperation necessary to assure future goodwill among the 'teen-age group'; and slogans such as 'Where else can you enjoy life for so little?' "

In addition, Jones has been writing a movie column for his local newspaper under the heading of "Aisle Say" for four years. It consists, of course, of information on the theatre's current attractions, giving playdates, etc., and, even, a sort of review on some of the pictures. Jones says he does not believe "canned" reviews are slanted for customary rural patronage. Always, somewhere in the copy is mentioned the fact that if it is clipped out and presented at the boxoffice the bearer will receive a free pass to the theatre. He claims these passes are used 90 per cent of the time, and thus he knows he gets readership of the "Aisle Say" column, which takes the place of his newspaper advertising.

RUNNER-UP NUMBER 3

SELLING AN ART FILM IN A REGULAR HOUSE

Submitted by Trylon Theatre,
Forest Hills, N. Y.
Lee Raelson, Manager

596 Seats • 79 Cents Top Adult Admission • English-speaking, Foreign Born Patronage

While this is not strictly an "art" house, Lee Raelson explains that if the American-made picture available is not what he thinks is suitable for his patronage, he picks up a foreign fil mwhich he feels will net better boxoffice results.

In this particular case it was the Japanese-made "Ugetsu," following its first runs.

The lobby display, shown in the photograph, was entirely homemade. All of the material was obtained gratis from Japanese Airlines and Japanese World Trade. At both of these places of business, one in Rockefeller Center, the other on Fifth Avenue, New York City, Raelson had 30 x 40's announcing the showing of the film at the theatre. Both of these locations are open to the public for viewing Japanese made products and the cards proved most effective. The stands for the lobby display were borrowed from a local florist.

The Trylon house staff wore pastel coolie hats in advance of playdate to stimulate the curiosity of patrons. When aides were questioned, they would advise patrons that "Ugetsu," winner of the Venice Grand Prize, was going to play at the theatre.

The Japanese Consulate was advised of the showing and invited to attend.

Programs were mailed to Parkway Village, which is inhabited by United Nations employees. This housing project is approximately four miles from the theatre; but is accessible by car or bus. Programs were also mailed covering all areas of the four theatres listed, including, of course, that of the Trylon. This divisional program, made up by Raelson has been found to be a great cross-theatre pull.

In addition, a 14 line one column ad was spotted in the New York Times, in which the theatre does not normally advertise.

The actual costs to the theatre was the price of the three 30 x 40 signs; the additional mailing of 1,700 pieces of mail to United Nations residents; and the ad which ran five days in the New York Times.

SUMMER FILM FESTIVAL AFFORDS EXTRA MATINEE

Submitted by State Theatre,
Pasadena, Cal.
Albert Szabo, Manager

752 Seats • $1.00 Top Adult Admission • Art House Patronage

As manager of an "art house," this contestant decided to hold "The First Summer Classic Film Festival Of Pasadena."

He explains, "I picked a series of first quality pictures for one showing only on a mid-week afternoon as a source of extra revenue, since I don't have matinees, except on Saturdays and Sundays.

"The chosen pictures were advertised as a 'Classic Film Festival,' with pre-sold tickets for the whole series, as well as for individual pictures. The pre-sale of tickets was tied up with women's clubs and art clubs of the town, with the clubs participating in the sale getting a percentage of the gross on the tickets they sell.

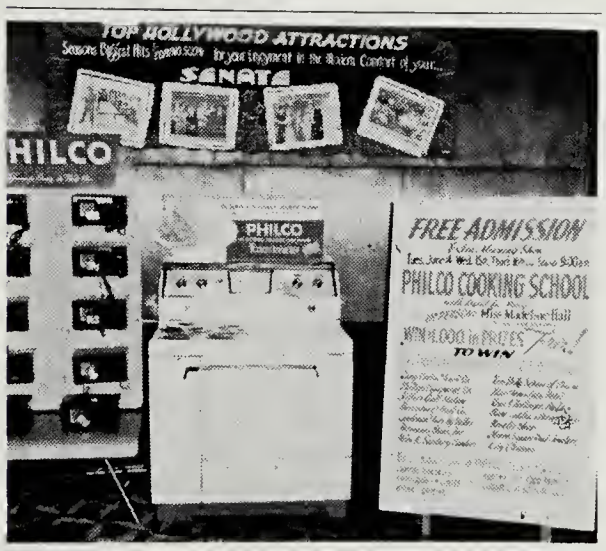
"Schools and colleges are contacted and notified about this 'cultural event' of the town.

"Articles in local newspapers are planted at least four to five weeks before the 'Classic Film Festival' opens.

"Interest in the series is terrific; and a substantial amount of extra revenue will be made with the series. A large amount of tickets are pre-sold.

"To herald the event Lincoln Hayes, drama editor, Pasadena Independent, devoted practically an entire column to the State's Wednesday afternoon festival.

"Features selected for the art series are 'Hamlet,' 'Rashomon,' 'The Mudlark,' 'The Bicycle Thief,' and 'The Importance Of Being Earnest.' Art shorts were booked to round out each program."



Bernard J. Bispeck, manager, Senate, Harrisburg, Pa., recently promoted the above prizes awarded by cooperating dealers in conjunction with Philco Cooking School morning shows.

What Is A Patron Answered By SW Executive

PHILADELPHIA—Birk Binnard, ad-publicity director, Philadelphia Stanley Warner Theatres, comes up with the sagacious advice quoted below:

WHAT IS A PATRON?

A PATRON is the most important person ever to enter our doors.

A PATRON is not dependent on us; we are dependent on him.

A PATRON is not an interruption of our work; he is the purpose for it. We are not doing him a favor by serving him; he is doing us a favor by giving us the opportunity to do so.

A PATRON is not just an appendage to an admission ticket. He is a flesh and blood human being with feelings and emotions like our own.

OUR PATRONS HONOR US BY PERMITTING US TO SERVE AND ENTERTAIN THEM.

tional promotion ideas. There are several national promotions set on the film, and the picture has been selected as the Family Medal Award Picture for August by Parents Magazine and there will be a special one-sheet available for use by exhibitors on this award.

However, the extent of the boxoffice success of the film will depend on the personal effort expended by the theatre showmen of the country. Here is one picture that they can sell in their community and be proud to show in their theatres since it is the personification of everything which the important groups in their communities have been demanding in their film entertainment. It is clean, wholesome, and highly entertaining. U-I is calling "The Private War Of Major Benson" the "picture with a heart." Following the premiere, the extent to which America takes the picture to its heart will depend upon the activities of the exhibitors of the nation. To add impetus to showmanship efforts throughout the country U-I has placed the $500 on the line in the interest of exploiting the film. To win the film company's money, a contestant must ALSO win SHOWMANSHIP SWEEPSTAKES $100 in any of the 13 weeks the U-I offer stands.

So there's $600 riding with "Benson." Come and get it!

$$$-ADDITIONAL PRIZES-$$$

While $100.00-per-week will be awarded each and every week throughout the year by the SHOWMANSHIP SWEEPSTAKES editors, certain film distributors will post from time to time additional CASH PRIZES to focus attention on a particular picture. Such CASH PRIZES must be posted until won, during a maximum period of 13 weekly issues, and if not won during that time will be withdrawn. To win these CASH PRIZES, the entrant must first win the $100.00 SHOWMANSHIP SWEEPSTAKES Award. Should the winning promotional effort involve a picture that has a CASH PRIZE posted, the winner gets this latter prize from the Film Distributor as an added bonus.

FCC Extends Deadline; New Toll-TV Unit Files

WASHINGTON—Sept. 9 was set as the deadline date last fortnight by the Federal Communications Commission for the filing of rebuttal briefs on the toll-TV controversy. The action followed requests from the Committee Against Toll-TV, and other groups, to allow more time than the original July 11 deadline permitted after comments were filed June 9.

The FCC noted that the extension will serve the public interest, and that the comments filed last month were so voluminous in nature that the additional time will permit all sides to conduct a more thorough analysis for their answers.

The FCC revealed it has received another proposal for pay television licensing patented by Dynamics-Electronics-New York, called Ultravision, which requires neither a coin box nor a punch card in charging subscribers. In its proposition, Dynamics told the FCC that it can use the UHF band and minimize cost to the viewer and operator, and that no special equipment is necessary for its system, with the exception of an additional cable attached to the set. The viewer is billed by a special master station to which the cable feeds, which gives vital information about the running count of the audience.

Ultravision's comments insisted that its system would be most valuable in bringing "minority" programs to smaller educational and cultural audiences. By using UHF, Ultravision could assure privacy for its programs and no interference with present television. However, the report, filed by H. S. Bennett, Dynamics research director, urged that if the FCC approves toll-TV at all, it license all compatible systems.

Levine Heads VCI Meet

NEW YORK—The 1956 annual Variety Club International convention will be chairmaned by Martin Levine when it convenes in the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel next May, it was announced last week by William J. German, chief barker, New York's Tent 35. Levine, a Brandt Theatres executive, has been luncheon co-ordinator for Tent 35.

Another Myth Exploded

The distributors feel that comedies should not be seen in a projection room.

Well, I saw Martin and Lewis' latest Paramount hit, "You're Never Too Young," in Technicolor, with VistaVision, with gals, 'n' everything, plus Diana Lynn, in a projection room.

I don't remember when I enjoyed a picture so much!

It has all the elements for laughter and entertainment, and it will prove a bonanza at any boxoffice.

Maybe, I exploded another myth?

Or maybe, this one is the exception. It is sure fire anywhere!

—JAY EMANUEL.

Crescent Names Directors

NASHVILLE, TENN.—At a special meeting last fortnight, three new directors were elected to the board of the Crescent Amusement Company, who are Frank Cole and Webster Johnson, bankers, and Webb Hayes, executive and long-time associate of the company. Vice-president William Holman became head of the directorship pending selection of a successor to Kermit C. Stengel, who resigned. Holdover members of the board are Mrs. R. E. Baulch, Howell Campbell, Sr., and Mrs. Tony Sudekam, as well as Holman. The next regular meeting is on July 13, at which time local informants predict the election of a new president to succeed Stengel.

Hoover Names Officers

NEW YORK—New Variety Club assignments announced last week by George Hoover, international chief barker, were Ben Goffstein, Las Vegas, Nev., to be studio and TV relations head; Robert Adelman, Philadelphia, to be international press guy, succeeding Goffstein in that post; and Edward Shafton, Omaha, and Ezra Stern, Los Angeles, to be international fixers.

Hoover announced at the same time that the offices of international sergeant-at-arms and international ceremonial officer are being eliminated from the Variety International appointive positions.

With 352 theatre owners attending from the area, MGM's San Francisco Workshop, the 24th and final in the series, recently wound up one of the most successful undertakings by the company's sales department. Mike Simons, director of customer relations for the company, acted as moderator at all of the sessions and in most of them was assisted by Emery Austin, exploitation head. Hosts at the San Francisco session, seen above, were, left to right, Bill Blake, field press representative; Stewart Engebretson, salesman; Corinne Wies, secretary to assistant branch manager John Coyne; Lila Goodwin, office manager; Mary Marquet Creighton, secretary to branch manager Sam Gardner; Coyne; Tom Aspell, branch manager at Los Angeles; George A. Hickey, west coast division sales manager; Gardner; Sid Schuster and Howard Harper, salesmen; Kay Hackett, head booker; Howard Herty, field press representative, Los Angeles; Florence Myers, secretary to west coast division press representative Ted Galanter; and Harry Hargreaves, booker.

Audience Awards Seen As Newspaper Natural

NEW YORK—Describing the Audience Awards election as "A Newspaper Natural," the 47th in the series of COMPO ads in Editor and Publisher last fortnight urges newspaper editors and promotion men to get in touch with their local theatre managers and work out promotions that will be mutually beneficial. The ad states that it is expected that at least 10,000 theatres will take part, and there is a possibility that the vote will be as high as 60,000,000.

"Although the election will be national in scope," the ad says, "it is bound to arouse great local interest in every community in which the voting is held. This is not theory; several local theatre polls somewhat similar to this one have been held over the last few years and without exception they have been hugely successful.

"It is here that newspapers enter the picture, for these local elections offer an excellent opportunity for them to tieup with theatres in a variety of promotions.

"We urge newspaper editors and promotion men to get in touch with their local theatre managers and work out arrangements that will be mutually beneficial. We are also asking theatre managers to take the matter up without delay with their local newspapers.

"The entire motion picture industry is backing this Audience Awards election with all its resources. Something should happen of benefit to us all."

Oklahoma Exhibs Name Slocum

OKLAHOMA CITY—E. R. Slocum, El Reno, Okla., exhibitor, was named executive secretary of the new United Theatre Owners of Oklahoma, it was announced last fortnight by Ed Thorne, president. An office of the fledgling organization will be opened shortly here under Slocum's full-time direction.

Thorne stressed that UTO is retaining affiliation with both Theatre Owners of America and National Allied, but that the group feels that Oklahoma exhibitors will profit by uniting into one strong association.

Jessel-Roberts Productions Formed For Theatre, TV

NEW YORK—A company to film theatrical features and TV film series was formed recently by George Jessel and Bob L. Roberts, to be known as Jessel-Roberts Productions, which will produce in Hollywood and in Europe.

Plans for the first year call for two theatre features, the first of which, "Mona Lisa," is being readied for the cameras. The initial series for TV will be "The George Jessel Show," slated for Hollywood shooting in the fall. At the same time, plans are being completed to film "The Lady From Scotland Yard" in Europe.

In the past, Jessel produced a number of pictures for 20th-Fox. Roberts has been a radio, TV, and theatre producer, who pioneered in using live music and talent with motion pictures supplying background effects.

Texas COMPO Acts To Avert Film Lack

DALLAS—Texas COMPO came through to solve a serious product shortage problem to south Texas exhibitors as a result of the actions of one of the film carrier lines in removing an important "through shipment" film schedule to Houston from Dallas for distribution southward by feeder lines. This meant a tieup of prints for an extra day, and in some cases two extra days, for such theatres involved, and a resultant cancellation of playdates.

The opening of the Columbia exchange in Houston, and the announcement that 20th-Fox will open Aug. 1, immediately threatened the revenue of the film transportation line between Dallas and Houston.

As a result, Gordon White announced the withdrawal of one of their trucks from service to take up the slack, effective July 1. The particular truck withdrawn carries "through shipment" film, making a connection in Houston with various feeder lines. This would mean a tieup of prints for an extra day and in some cases two extra days for each theatre involved, thus the reason for the cancellation of playdates.

Texas COMPO immediately called a meeting of the branch managers and bookers in Dallas, together with the head of the transportation line, White, and went into the situation as promptly as possible.

It was suggested that as a temporary measure the film companies obtain three or four additional prints on each picture for a limited period.

Col. H. A. Cole, co-chairman, Texas COMPO, personally called the general sales manager of each of the distribution companies involved to see if such arrangements could be made. MGM, Paramount, Warners, and U-I have assured Texas COMPO that sufficient extra prints will be furnished to take care of the emergency.

Theatre Ads Protested

NEW YORK—A priest, a police captain, and several business men last week opposed the renewal of an operating license for the Times Theatre, West 42nd Street, on the grounds that the house's advertising is "lewd," that it attracts degenerates, and that it thereby contributes to juvenile delinquency.

License Commissioner Bernard J. O'Connell, only recently appointed, held hearings because of the unusual number of complaints about a matter which is, ordinarily, routine. The principal objector was Msgr. Joseph A. McCaffrey, pastor, Holy Cross Roman Catholic Church, who spoke also for Holy Cross Academy, a parochial school for girls. He was joined by Police Captain William E. Coleman, Borough Headquarters, Manhattan West.

The Commissioner granted the request of the theatre's agent, Harold J. Klein, J. J. Theatres, to reply this Friday. The license, which expires Thursday, will be extended until a decision is made.

Paramount Sued On M-L Film

HOLLYWOOD—A suit filed in Federal Court last fortnight by Screen-Televideo Productions, Inc., charges Paramount with improperly distributing the film "At War With The Army," a Martin and Lewis release. It alleges that Paramount breached a distribution agreement made in 1950 and failed to account for the full gross receipts, on dates in 1952 and 1953. A complete accounting was sought and the court was requested to withhold distribution of the picture.

VARIETY NOTE: Tent 35 officially adjourned its luncheon meeting activities for the summer with the session at Toots Shor's last week, which featured an appearance by Warren Hull of "Strike It Rich" and other fame, who had much praise for the tent's project on epilepsy in children and who also offered to help in any way he could. The producer of the show, Walt Kramer, former theatre manager, also addressed the nice-sized gathering, reporting that the independent TV producer favors toll-TV. He opined that it should be of help to theatres. How exactly this was to come about he didn't make clear, but he did say that people would want to get out to their local theatres in ever-increasing numbers just for the sake of getting their kicks somewhere else except at home. Said Kramer, the theatre will never die.

Larry Morris, prominent theatre circuit executive, was luncheon chairman and toastmaster.

THE METROPOLITAN SCENE: Lots of excitement at a couple of openings last week on the great Broadway, namely for "Not As A Stranger" and for "The Seven Little Foys," at the Capitol and Criterion respectively. The Capitol had a "Gala Preview Performance" with lots of stars attending along with the public and a good deal of excitement. The Criterion had the works, searchlights, barricades, the usual number of photogs, celebs, etc., with the proceeds going to United Cerebral Palsy. Both should be strong business contenders. . . . The lobby of the Roxy saw prizes being presented concluding a contest sponsored by a candy company, the Roxy, and Walt Disney Productions in reference to "Lady And The Tramp," with youngsters and parents receiving a trip to Hollywood, pedigreed pups, etc. The theatre's managing director Bill Moclair and Disney's ad-pub chief in the east were on hand for the ceremonies. . . . "Virgin Queen" Debut To Aid Child Theatre

PORTLAND, MAINE—The Children's Theatre, one of the nation's leading juvenile theatrical groups, will benefit from the world premiere of 20th-Fox's "The Virgin Queen," which will take place July 22 at the Strand, it was announced last fortnight.

The film event will be surrounded by a regional celebration for which more than 100 entertainment luminaries, journalists, and TV and radio personalities from New York, Hollywood, and New England will converge, and will be a spectacular civic and entertainment event arranged at the request of Bette Davis, who stars as Queen Elizabeth I in the Charles Brackett production. Miss Davis is a leading citizen of Portland, and a director of the Children's Theatre.

Governor Edmund S. Muskie of Maine will head an imposing delegation of government executives who will join with the visiting stars and reporters for a day's festivities, including a lobster clambake and feast of Cape Elizabeth, a champagne party at the home of the film star and her actor-husband Gary Merrill, and the initial performance of the film.

The New York press delegation, expected to number 65 will fly to Portland the morning of the 22nd at the personal invitation of Miss Davis, and will be joined there by another press party from Boston. The New England party will number between 35 and 40. The arrival of 20th-Fox executives Rodney Bush, Edward E. Sullivan, Meyer Hutner, Leo Pillot, Ira Tulipan, Martin Michel, and Phil Engel garnered important page one picture and story treatment in all local newspapers. Local merchants will go all-out heralding the premiere via cooperative newspaper advertisements, window displays and in-store flags and buting calling attention to the event.

Judge Throws Out Ban On "Blackboard Jungle"

ATLANTA — Federal Judge Boyd Sloan U.S. District Court, last week ruled in favor of a temporary injunction to restrain the city from banning the exhibition of MGM's "The Blackboard Jungle."

At a preliminary hearing on the case earlier, Judge Sloan expressed "grave doubts" about the right of the city to restrain exhibitors from showing the picture, although he did not then, nor has he to date, made it clear whether he refers to censorship in general, or to the particular case. Atlanta has won previous cases contesting the censorship.

In bringing the suit seeking an injunction, Loew's, Inc., contended that the film violates no standards set in the city ordinance, and that in turning it down the censors deprived the firm of its rights to freedom of the press and due process of law. The city argued that the production is unfit to be shown under provisions of the ordinance, and announced that it will appeal the case.

Meanwhile, "The Blackboard Jungle" was scheduled to open a local engagement on July 15.

A two-day regional convention of Independent Exhibitors, Inc., of New England, the local unit of National Allied, will be held Oct. 24 and 25 at Toy Town Tavern, Winchendon, Mass. Other units of Allied, from Pennsylvania, New Jersey, and Connecticut, are to be represented for a get-together combining business meetings with entertainment in a relaxing atmosphere. Its golf course is one of the finest, there is good fishing and boating, and the New England foliage will be in full color. Nationally known speakers from distribution and exhibition will be heard and vital industry topics will be discussed. Edward Lider, president, Independent Exhibitors, is the chairman who, with his committee, is already at work on the agenda.

A large group of exhibitors and distributors were spurred to enthusiasm on hearing the address of Robert W. Coyne who explained the Audience Awards plan at the Hotel Bradford. He acknowledged the fine support the New England exhibitors have given COMPO since its inception. He also spoke briefly on the tax situation, giving credit to Samuel Pinanski for his tireless efforts on behalf of tax reduction and promised further efforts. He touched on the Academy Awards by saying, "Our Audience Award plan is a powerful companion to the Academy Awards and yet its make up is of entirely different character. They have 26 categories while we have only five. Yet Hollywood is behind us wholeheartedly, and the distributors see in our plan a great boon to the industry as a whole. There are a million local tieins to promote this plan for the benefit of your theatres for better business." All speakers pledged full support.

From the report of the condition of Joseph Liss, Stanley Warner district manager who is hovering between life and death at Worcester City Hospital following an automobile accident, the doctors state that he has a 50-50 chance of pulling through. The prayers of the district are with him. Eleven members of the Projectionists Union donated blood plasma to be sent to the Worcester Hospital for blood transfusions. . . . Two new drive-ins were ready for the July 4 weekend. The Den-Rock Drive-In, North Andover, opened its gates on July 1, while in Clinton, the Clinton Drive-In opened the following evening. . . . Regal Pictures Corporation is moving its offices from 246 Stuart Street to 47 Church Street, according to Irving Farber and Eddie Ruff, taking over the entire first floor of the Metro Premium Building. Embassy Pictures Corporation has the entire second floor offices. . . . The four drive-ins of the Levine-Yanofsky Circuit have joined Independent Exhibitors, Inc., of New England, the unit of National Allied. The drive-ins are in Springfield, Westfield, Hadley, and Boxboro, all in Massachusetts. . . . Commemorating the 50th anniversary of the motion picture theatre, the

Three New Boston Branch Managers Welcomed At Variety Club Meeting

BOSTON—Three new branch managers were introduced to the industry at a luncheon sponsored by the Variety Club of New England at the Hotel Bradford. Gasper Urban, Paramount; Al Levy, 20th-Fox; and William Kumins, Warners, were the honored guests. Michael Redstone opened the proceedings before an attendance of over 160 industrymen. Redstone was replacing chief barker Walter A. Brown, who was unable to be present. He turned the mike over to Theodore Fleisher, president, Interstate Theatres, who was emceeing for the first time at such an affair.

First he paid tribute to the three committeemen, Al Glaubinger, U. A.; Johnny Peckos, 20th-Fox; and Arnold Van Leer, Paramount. He also told of the Jimmy Fund drive of which he is co-chairman with Joe Cronin of the Boston Red Sox. "Soon your theatres will receive the pledge cards being sent out by Benn Rosenwald, chairman of distribution. I urge all of you to look ahead for extra effort on the part of your managers to take in that extra money that is needed this year."

Martin J. Mullin, president, New England Theatres, Inc., welcomed the new branch managers by saying that they are "a worthy addition to our right type of distributors in Boston."

Glenn Norris, eastern sales manager, 20th-Fox, who came on from New York, said, "I congratulate these three fine men. Al Levy has all the requirements necessary for his new post. His is the kind of integrity and character that this industry needs. But sitting here today I am struck by one thought. Here we are—a group of 160 men sitting around tables having luncheon, relaxing, laughing and joking. Both exhibitors and distributors alike. We seem to understand each other and our problems. Why can't we find a friendly way to solve these same problems among ourselves to a mutual advantage of both sides? I for one believe that distribution and exhibition can be coordinated to the satisfaction of all if we could have more friendly relations like this."

Fleisher called upon Archie Silverman to make the first desk set presentation to Urban. E. M. Loew was called upon to make the presentation to Levy. He asked that the branch managers be allowed to use their own judgment. "If you can sell the idea to your bosses not to be too tough on the little neighborhood houses, then we can stay open. I don't want to be overly dramatic, but the independent exhibitor must have more help to stay in existence. I must tell you that you branch managers will never find a better bunch of guys than the exhibitors in this area."

Levy said, "So far as the home office is concerned, we set the deals right here in Boston. My home office suggests, but we tell them what we can get. But remember, the branch manager's job is a tough one. We try to be right and fair."

Edward Lider, president, Independent Exhibitors of New England, was asked to present the desk set to Kumins, the third manager so honored.

Legion Protest Forces "Son Of Sinbad" Withdrawal

BUFFALO—In spite of the fact that the new Buffalo Twin Drive-In pulled "Son Of Sinbad," early in its run because of protests from the Legion of Decency, the Union and Echo, Buffalo Catholic Weekly, continued to publish a notice at the top of its theatre page saying, "since the Twin Drive-In . . . has shown the condemned motion picture . . . the Legion of Decency is asking . . . Catholics to avoid this theatre for the remainder of the . . . season." The Legion had planned to send out letters recommending that Catholics also stay away from two drive-ins affiliated with the Twin, but the idea was discarded after the film was pulled at the Twin.

Framingham (Mass.) News used a full page story with pictures telling of the background and history of the town's three houses and of its personnel. The article, by staff writer Virginia Lucier, ended with these words, "Framingham is proud of its motion picture industry which has progressed through the years. And with bigger and better movies on their way, this community is assured of still greater things to come for a history to be looked into 50 years hence." Managers Lloyd Mills, Irving Finn, and John Berry made arrangements for merchants' tieins to sponsor trips to New York for three lucky couples, for the News to offer free theatre tickets to subscribers with six children or more, for the proclamation of the Board of Selectmen setting aside July 19-25 as Golden Anniversary of the Motion Picture Theatre Week, for tieins with Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, General Motors dealers, etc. All three theatres are operated by Smith Management Company of Boston.

The Stadium and Auditorium Board's request for funds is now before the Capital Expenditures Committee. . . . The North Tonawanda plant of the Glowmeter Corporation, manufacturers of motion picture screen material, will be sold at public auction, according to Owen B. Augspurger, Jr., attorney for the corporation, which now is being re-organized under the Federal Bankruptcy Act.

Charlotte

The WOMPI sponsored a box supper recently at Freedom Park. Everyone stated a good time was had by all, and that it was a nice social affair as well as a fund-raising project. . . . E. G. Stellings is national co-chairman for the Theatre Owners of America convention to be held October 6 through 9 at Los Angeles. Stellings is president, Stewart and Everett Theatres. . . . H. H. Everett, Stewart and Everett Theatres, was honored recently by Queen College, which dedicated its yearbook to him. . . . Emery Wister, local movie editor, recently made his annual trip to Hollywood. He tells us that the party given by Sam Goldwyn for the press was a real occasion.

Charlotte WOMPI Sets Future Plans

CHARLOTTE—Thacker's Restaurant was the setting for June WOMPI luncheon meeting. Mrs. Myrtle Parker, president of the club, and secretary to Al Duren, branch manager, Paramount, presided over the business session after the luncheon. Mrs. Parker and Mrs. Gladys Hawkins, Wilby-Kincey Theatres, first vice-president, were elected to represent the Charlotte club at the national convention in New Orleans Sept. 30-Oct. 2.

The WOMPI club voted to continue its current charity project for another month, that of making smocks for girls at the Florence Crittenden Home. These gifts will be presented the girls next month and club will then start a new project. The club also held a picnic and cake walk at Freedom Park as a fund-raising project.

It was announced that Rev. C. C. Benton, pastor, Central Avenue Methodist Church, will be the guest speaker at the next luncheon meeting. Nancy Wilson, chairman, service project committee, announced that on July 9, MGM and the Charlotte Theatre Supply were to be hosts at the Variety Club and that Jack Reville, branch manager, MGM, wished her to extend an invitation to WOMPI.

Chicago

Jerry Marcks and Martin Rosenfield, owners, Sunset Drive-In, installed a few lawn chairs, which were quickly filled. Surprised, they added 400 more, which are fully occupied almost every night. . . . Advance interest in the combined convention and trade shows indicates record-breaking attendance for the meetings.

Controversy Still Rages On Ohio Censorship Bill

COLUMBUS, O.—Commendation from the Toledo Blade to Senator Charles Mosher for his leadership in the anti-censorship fight and the attack on the senator and the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio from the Catholic Times emerged as an aftermath of the industry's successful fight to prevent passage of a new state censorship law.

The Blade editorially praised Mosher's "stubbornness" and said that, thanks to him, "Ohio has removed itself from that dwindling category of states" that still have censorship. The Blade said that "highly organized pressure" would have forced many Senators to vote for the bill against their convictions, had the measure come to the floor for a vote.

The editorial stated that the failure of the Senate to approve Senator Bartunek's measure to take the bill out of the Education Committee "strengthens the impression that they didn't really want to, and were glad that Senator Mosher's stubbornness gave them the opportunity to drop it in such a way that they could shift all the blame to him. . . . About the only purpose its passage would have served would have been to show that Ohio remains a state where a highly organized pressure group can set itself up as judge of what other people should and shouldn't be allowed to see on the movie screen."

The Times editorial said: "It's rather a sorry state of affairs when the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio says it will do a good job in keeping . . . screens free of objectionable films following the failure of the Republican-dominated Ohio Legislature to give some protection . . . this group . . . must immediately be prepared to tell the people where they were when the flood of indecent movies came upon Ohio theatre screens after the lifting of censorship . . . And do they now expect citizens to believe that they will do any kind of censorship job If they were in no way effective before . . . what reason is there to put credence in their statement?"

The Legislature did, however, pass a new law providing stiff penalties for showing such films. Robert Wile, secretary, Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, said it is the hope of "every decent, law-abiding exhibitor in the state that any theatre owner who violates the new law be subjected to prosecution and full penalties." Wile said the industry "doesn't need this kind of picture." He added that "there obviously could be no capricious prosecutions."

A fine of not more than $1000 and imprisonment for not more than six months, or both, are provided for violation of the section which forbids exhibition to minors under 18 of any film which is obscene or has a tendency to corrupt morals. Wile said the question of guilt would be decided by judge and jury in "the traditional American way."

"It has been our contention," said Wile, "that this law, which is all that 44 other states have, is sufficient to protect the public against indecency and all the other things that the advocates of censorship have wanted to protect it against. However, such pictures as 'Blackboard Jungle' could not be prosecuted under this law, not even, in the opinion of industry lawyers, under the now-dead Ohio censor law."

Wile told Ohio exhibitoirs that the Motion Picture Producers Association will protect them against any arrest for showing any picture which bears the Production Code Seal. "You run pictures which do not bear the seal at your own risk, unless the producer agrees to protect you," said Wile. "No protection such a producer offers will keep you out of jail, however, so you will have to be extremely careful about showing any pictures about which there is any doubt. What may be shown in one county with impunity, for lack of complainants, may be prosecuted in another county."

for 3,500 dwellings, mostly in blighted areas. Forty-seven acres are to be improved on the South Side, and about 30 on the West Side. "The projects will erase blight from sections pointed out as the nation's largest uninterrupted slums," said Gen. William B. Kean, CHA executive director. There are 21 different sites where the CHA will build the homes, all of which are potential theatre sites, too.

Housing Project Theatre Set By Bluestone Group

NEW ORLEANS—A syndicate headed by Joel Bluestone completed plans for the construction of a modern air-conditioned 800-seat theatre in the St. Bernard Housing Project. The theatre will cater only to colored patronage. It will feature a wide screen, the latest in CinemaScope equipment, and a large modern concession stand which will be in operation from early morn to late at night. It will also boast a large area for parking.

Bluestone is well known in the film circle here. For the past five years or so he has been operating a buying and booking exchange, which bears his name, also distributing 16mm. film used on ships and trains. Prior to that he was on U-I's sales staff for a great number of years. Among others interested in the new project are merchants in the immediate vicinity.

Tight Bingo Laws Set By Connecticut

NEW HAVEN—New Bingo laws to go into effect in Connecticut next week will provide tight controls and state police will have wide powers to enforce them, with violation bringing a stiff penalty of fines up to $500, and up to six months in prison. Cash and liquor prizes will be done away with, and accurate records must be kept. The only organizations permitted by law to operate the games will be veterans, church, religious, civic, or fraternal associations, educational and charitable groups, or a recognized volunteer fire company.

The law stipulates that the games must be operated without profit for the sponsoring group membership, and applications for permits to operate must be made to the chief of police or to the selectmen of towns on forms provided by the state police. Within 30 days after games are played under one-day permits or, in the case of annual permits, by Feb. 1 of each year, the sponsoring group is required to furnish an affidavit showing the amount of the gross, the date and place of operation, the number of games, a list of prizes stating the amount paid for them or the retail value if donated, expense and expenditure items, and the net profit and its disposal. A duplicate of the affidavit will be held in state police headquarters for public inspection. The sponsoring organization will have to keep records to substantiate the affidavit under penalty of perjury.

In those communities where Bingo is prohibited now, five per cent of the electorate can petition the legislative body to submit the question to the electors at a special meeting within 21 days of the receipt of the petition. The vote would have to be taken on voting machines.

Neighbors Hit New Ozoner With Extra Charges In Suit

LANCASTER, PA.—Property owners Clarence and Ethel Reinhold last fortnight added more charges to a suit originally brought last month against By-Pass Theatres, Inc., operators of the new Comet Drive-In along Route 230 bypass, and Martin Brothers, builders of the ozoner. They now charge that the lights and noise from the open theatre endanger the well-being of their cattle and jeopardize their supply of milk. In the initial complaint, before the drive-in opened, the Reinholds sought an injunction to have their land, which they alleged was unlawfully entered and damaged in the installation of a drainage pipe for the theatre, restored to its original condition. They also seek compensating damages.

Hope Visit Pays Off At Reading Boxoffice

READING, PA.—Bob Hope's visit came off on schedule, with no mishaps. He arrived at noon by Textile Machine Works private plane; attended a luncheon with the Cerebral Palsy Committee at the Berkshire Country Club; after which he engaged in a round of golf before a gallery estimated at 1200 to 1500 people. He then left the club in appropriately bannered Chevrolets with both state and local police sirens whooping it up, and went to the Astor. Press and radio interviews were made, and Hope did his stage appearance in connection with "The Seven Little Foys." With the motorcade parked in front of the theatre, traffic was completely and thoroughly tied up on Penn Street. Hope then went to the airport for his flight to Harrisburg. Both newspapers came through with many publicity breaks, and the picture was most always tied in. Radio and TV stations cooperated fuly in advance, and announcement's were made over the public address systems at sporting events, such as the Reading Indians ball games and the automobile races, while bus company tieups, window cards, and other media furnished many plugs. A great number of people saw him, the whole town seemed to be Bob Hope-conscious, before and after. His visit paid off at the boxoffice and the picture got off to a good start.

by a fabulous fireworks display over the long holiday weekend, and the Ideal Drive-In had a "Dusk To Dawn" marathon, with free coffee and doughnuts available. . . . James B. McKinney, assistant treasurer, Comerford Theatres, Inc., last week was installed as treasurer, Scranton, Pa., chapter, National Association of Cost Accountants, at its outing at Elmhurst Country Club. . . . Landy Campbell, Capitol, affiliated with show business for 50 years, and a great personal friend of the late M. E. Comerford, as well as of many screen luminaries, was the subject of a newspaper story, complete with many pictures, in the amusement supplement of The Scranton Times. . . . "An Annapolis Story" evoked much comment at the Riviera, Scranton, when manager Neil Conway, with the cooperation of the Naval Recruiting Office, procured photographs of about 100 area young men who entered the Navy recently, and arranged an interesting lobby display of them. In addition, Conway secured several fine replicas of Navy fighting ships and jet planes, as well as numerous Navy flags, to complement the display.

Firemen were called to the Trans-Lux World to investigate gray clouds of smoke which filled the auditorium due to the air conditioning unit becoming a heat wave casualty. Fortunately, the incident occurred at a time the theatre was not in operation. . . . Marshall Seidman, brother-in-law to Columbia sales manager Dave Korson, has been appointed an assistant district attorney. . . . It's Warner branch manager Charles Beilan's "week," Aug. 21 to 27. . . . Industryites were invited to join in a fund-raising campaign to elect Victor H. He will enter the Pittsburgh University Medical College in September.

Circuit Charges Conspiracy In Distributor Anti-Trust Suit

SHAMOKIN, PA.—Buckley Amusement Enterprises, owners of theatres here and in neighboring communities, last week filed an anti-trust suit in the Federal District Court against the eight major film distributors, as well as American Broadcasting-Paramount Theatres, and its subsidiary, Penn Paramount Corporation, seeking to collect treble damages in the amount of $2,400,000 as the result of an alleged conspiracy to prevent the Circuit from obtaining first-run product.

The Buckley firm asserts it has been relegated to an inferior position as the result of the conspiracy, and compelled to wait until favored theatres in other cities have played the motion pictures, citing the period from 1937 to 1950, when the distributors were allegedly partial to theatres owned and operated by the Comerford-Publix circuit, then a Paramount subsidiary. The suit seeks, finally, an order requiring the defendants to license product to Buckley on an early run to provide local residents with new entertainment.

. . . V. L. Doc Wadkins, Manos Circuit booker, while on vacation with his wife and daughter, suffered a stroke and was confined to the Grace Hospital, and then moved to the Medical Center in Richmond, Va. . . . George Tice and George Saittis, Twin-Hi-Way Drive-In, announced an early opening for their new drive-in, which will be called the Woodland Drive-In. . . . Myrtle Militzer, with the Warner and Stanley Warner organization for over 25 years, has resigned to take the office managerial post for Buena Vista, under Leonard Mintz, who was a former UA branch manager here several years ago. . . . Mrs. Eleanor Larkin, is resigning at Screen Guild to await the stork. . . . Audry Esselmeyer, Warners contract department, and Paul Youkers were recently married. . . . Claire Neiderberger, RKO head booker, recently took a leave of absence due to the illness of her mother. . . . Strand, Dunbar, Pa., has closed. . . . Sally Cowell, widow of Tommy Cowell, will continue operation of all of Cowell's businesses including the drive-in in Erie, Pa.

Variety Club named David C. Silverman, local RKO branch manager, and William Finkel, Sam Speranza, and Ray Scott to a special Camp O'Connell committeee to arrange family nights at the camp every Wednesday during the 10 weeks of its operation. According to I. Elmer Ecker, chief barker, all sorts of entertainment will be offered.

Felton Pinner, SW circuit maintenance director, his wife, and daughter, went to Cody, Wyo., to attend the marriage of Felton, Jr., to Wiona Morrison. . . . The new Tri-State Drive-In, Slovan, Pa., opened recently. . . . A wide screen and anamorphic lenses have been installed at the Hiland, Natrona Heights, Pa. . . . Both Paul Blumer, SW Harris, Tarentum, Pa., and Dick Klein, SW Liberty, New Kensington, Pa., won war bonds for showmanship at their respective theatres.

Lester R. Kropp, co-general manager, Fred Wehrenberg Theatres Circuit, and president Missouri-Illinois Theatre Owners, has been suffering from a virus infection. . . . The last possibility that the proposed Kilgore Drive-In would ever materialize faded completely with the sale of the 13-acre tract of land by the Kilgore Amusement Corporation, headed by William Kilgore, to business interests who plan to erect a warehouse on the land.

San Antonio

The annual "Alec Guinness Festival" was held at the Josephine, operated by Tom Summers. Each film was selected by request. . . . Raymond B. Willie, general manager, Interstate Theatre Circuit, Dallas, presented a pair of fancy cowboy boots to Bob Hope when the comedian recently was here in behalf of his latest film, "The Seven Little Foys." . . . Several drive-ins are now accepting Interstate discount cards. Some are also accepting passes from the other drive-ins, to bolster their business. . . . San Antonio will soon have its fourth television station with the grant made to the Mission Telecasting Company, for a station to operate on Channel 12. The grant will become final if no objections are made by the Walmac Company, which also applied for the channel. . . . The Dusk Drive-In, Georgetown, Tex., has installed a new CinemaScope screen. . . . The Christian Drive-In has been opened, Kilgore, Tex. It features religious motion pictures with free admission. . . . S. J. Hodge, manager, H and H Drive-In, Stamford, Tex., installed a new wide-screen and CinemaScope. . . . Howard Stribling purchased the Slaton and Caprock Drive-In, Slaton, Tex., from the Frontier Theatres Circuit. Stribling was formerly manager, Sky Vue Drive-In, Slaton. Before that, he was city manager for Frontier in New Mexico cities, and at Denver City, Tex.

Bob Hope narrowly escaped serious injury while here recently when he fell through a glass table in the Menger Hotel patio while entertaining members of the press, radio, and TV. Clowning around, Hope leaped to the top of the table, which a cloth prevented him from seeing was glass, and he fell through, receiving a laceration of the ankle. However, it did not interfere with his appearance at the Majestic, to promote Paramount's "The Seven Little Foys." While in Austin, Tex., prior to coming here, Hope played a golf match with Governor Shivers which netted $2,500 for Cerebral Palsy.

Rex Reason was in town in conjunction with the opening of U-I's "This Island Earth" at the Aztec. . . . Abe Yeager, who retired from the staff, San Antonio Light, some months ago, will probably take a hand in the production end of the forthcoming Warners film based on the life of the pioneer airman, Billy Mitchell. . . . A drive-in air-conditioner has been developed by the A. R. A. Manufacturing Company, Fort Worth, Tex., which can be mounted on a stand beside a parked car. Two tubes are attached to the car window, one feeding cool air, the other pulling used air out. In the winter, warm and dehumidified air is fed into the car. . . . C. E. Barnes, manager, Palace, Plano, Tex., instituted a Saturday cash night. Barnes recently purchased the Palace from Roy Muse. . . . E. W. Buckalew installed RCA projectors in his Edgewood Drive-In, St. Augustine, Tex. Installation was made by the Southwestern Theatre Equipment Company, Houston. . . . Russell Rindy, manager, Tower, Houston, has been named assistant city manager, Interstate Theatres, Houston, replacing A. D. Deason, who went to the circuit's home office, Dallas. Al Lever, city manager, Interstate, has made several other staff changes. These include Ross Vallone, from manager, Eastwood, to manager, Tower; Hank Hannington, from manager, Santa Rosa, to manager, Eastwood; John Ellis, from manager, Wayside, to the Santa Rosa, and Oliver Klaus, from assistant manager, Majestic, to manager, Wayside.

Seattle

Dismantling of the old Liberty was begun recently. The 1600-seat house was one of the oldest, and among the first, major theatres erected in Seattle. Will J. Conner, general manager, John Hamrick Theatres, of which the Liberty was a unit, said the equipment will be moved to other houses in the chain. The company's lease on the house expired, and for the past year the theatre has been closed due to lack of product. The building is owned by Theatres, Inc., which has not yet formally announced future plans.

Charles H. Newman, 74, retired theatre manager, died recently at the home of his sister, Mrs. Helen Munger, with whom he resided since his return to Seattle nine months ago. Entombment was made in San Francisco. Newman was born in Victoria, B.C., and in 1907 he became treasurer of the Moore when it was opened by John Cort. When the Cort was opened in San Francisco in 1911, he became treasurer, and later resided in Salt Lake City, where his twin brother, Frank, who died several years ago, was manager of the Pantages.

Washington

District Commissioner Robert L. McLaughlin was made an honorary member of Variety Club of Washington, Tent No. 11, and was presented with his membership card at a luncheon with the board of governors. . . . Co-Chairmen Sam Galanty, George A. Crouch, and Albert W. Lewitt selected Aug. 26 for the Variety Club golf tournament and dinner dance, at the Manor Country Club, Norbeck, Md. . . . The Variety Club membership committee approved the following for membership: Lou Poller, president, station WARL, Thomas B. Jones, program director, station WTOP, the Honorable Joseph C. Nickels, assistant chief industrial engineer, U. S. Post Office Dept., associate member. The entertainment committee, under chairman Hirsh de La Viez, is planning a Variety Club party on July 23.

In connection with the third anniversary celebration of the Super Chief Drive-In, the first 100 patrons received a Hostess Cake. For the kiddies there was an ample supply of lollypops. On the last night, hundreds of dollars worth of merchandise, such as electric toasters, wallets, fishing rods and tackle, and other valuable prizes, were given away. . . . The Portuguese Ambassador and his family were guests of the Roth's Plaza management for a recent showing of "Cangaceiro." The house received some nice news breaks in the Latin American newspapers in Washington, circulating throughout the East. . . . COMEDY

ESTIMATE: Average series entry.

CAST: Leo Gorcey, Huntz Hall, Bernard Gorcey, Leon Askin, Sig Ruman, Veola Vonn, Lisa Davis, David Condon, Bennie Bartlett, Richard Benedict, Frank Richards, Linda Bennett. Produced by Ben Schwalb; directed by Edward Bernds.

STORY: Because Bernard Gorcey has a brother who was a general on the staff of King Sig Ruman of Truania, now in exile in the U. S. with daughter Lisa Davis, he is asked to await a message from Truania which would announce that it was safe for Ruman to return to the throne. Unbeknownst to all, "Loyal" followers Colonel Leon Askin and Lady Veola Vonn are in the pay of the dictator regime in power and keep an eye on Ruman hoping to trap him into returning. The Bowery Boys learn the identity of the villains but can't prove it. Their diligent plotting and counterplotting results in saving Davis from kidnapping, upsetting Askin's plot and getting the right information to Ruman, who rewards them with medals, etc.

X-RAY: Containing the usual nonsense with a little less action than is to be found in the predecessors, this latest in the series should be accepted by followers of the "Boys." The story is fair as is the acting, direction, and production. Bert Lawrence and Jerome S. Gottler are responsible for the screen play. It's for the lower half.

AD LINES: "Spies And The Bowery Boys Don't Mix As The Secret Agents Find Out To Their Dismay"; "The Bowery Boys In Action"; "They're Fast And Furious As They Rescue A King And His Pretty Princess And Get Rewarded In The End."

ESTIMATE: Well-made, interesting western.

CAST: Joel McCrea, Vera Miles, Lloyd Bridges, Wallace Ford, Edgar Buchanan, Peter Graves, Keith Larsen, Carl Benton Reid, John Smith, Walter Coy, Walter Sande. Produced by Walter Mirisch; directed by Jacques Tourneur.

STORY: Joel McCrea as Wyatt Earp approaches Wichita, looking to invest in a business and maybe settle down. He comes across a herd of cattle owned by Walter Sande, and when he sleeps, Lloyd Bridges and an associate try to steal his money, but he is too fast for them. In town, he frustrates a bank holdup and is offered the job of marshal by banker Walter Coy and Mayor Carl Benton Reid but turns it down. He makes the acquaintance of editor Wallace Ford and his young assistant, Keith Larsen, and a friendship forms. Since the town is wide open to attract cattle for shipment via the newly laid railroad track back east, the cowboys let off steam with plenty of gunplay. When a child is killed by their bullets, McCrea takes on the job of marshal and enforces a rule that no one is to carry a gun. Coy turns against him fearing he will drive business away, but he and Vera Miles, Coy's daughter, become friends. Another merchant, Edgar Buchanan, tries to hire gunmen to kill McCrea, but winds up trying to get his brothers, John Smith and Peter Graves, to kill him. Buchanan is driven from town. Seeking revenge, he hires Bridges and his partner to do the job. Their bullets accidentally kill Coy's wife, but McCrea gets them while Coy kills Buchanan. McCrea weds Miles.

X-RAY: Fast moving, with suspense, action aplenty, and containing an interesting yarn that holds up pretty well throughout, this entry should satisfy most fans who are action addicts. McCrea is good in the lead, and the use of color and CinemaScope should prove of assistance. Direction and production are in the good category. Given some support, the results on this could be better than average. The story and screen play are by Daniel B. Ullman.

TIP ON BIDDING: Fair program rates.

AD LINES: "The Story Of A City Built On Action And Gunplay"; "He Had A Job To Do And No One Would Stand In His Way"; "They Tried To Kill Him Once . . . But That Was Once Too Many."

The Man From Laramie

WESTERN
104M.

(CinemaScope)
(Color by Technicolor)

ESTIMATE: High rating western.

CAST: James Stewart, Arthur Kennedy, Donald Crisp, Cathy O'Donnell, Alex Nicol, Aline McMahon, Wallace Ford, Jack Elam, John War Eagle, James Millican, Gregg Barton, Boyd Stockman, Frank de Kova. Directed by Anthony Mann; a William Goetz production.

STORY: James Stewart arrives in New Mexico because he has a load of supplies in his wagon for Cathy O'Donnell and her store, and secondly he is after the man who sold guns to the Apaches who in turn killed his brother, a young cavalryman. On leave from the Army, he plans to kill the man when he finds him. Accompanying him is Wallace Ford, who has taken a fancy to Stewart. When he tries to load his empty wagons with salt, he is attacked by a force of men led by Alex Nicol and whipped and warned to get off the property owned by Nicol's father, Donald Crisp. He catches up with Nicol and gives him a deserved beating. Crisp offers to pay the damage. Stewart is befriended by Aline MacMahon, rival ranch owner and one-time sweetheart of Crisp, who helps get him out of jail when he is framed for a killing. He goes to work as foreman for her. Crisp warns his foreman, Arthur Kennedy, to keep an eye on Nicol and keep him out of trouble. Stewart is attacked by Nicol and his men, and when he wounds Nicol in the hand, the latter has Stewart held and wounds him similarly. Nicol tries to advise the Apaches to come get the guns he and Kennedy have gotten for them. Kennedy tries to argue him out of it, and when he fails, he kills him. Stewart is suspected. The half-blind Crisp tries to shoot Stewart but fails. A check of the accounts convinces Crisp that Nicol may have been involved in running guns to the Indians. When he tries to find the cache with Kennedy, the latter is forced to shove him over a cliff. He survives the fall but is blind. He tells Stewart that Kennedy tried to kill him and that he is probably responsible for Nicol's death as well as for supplying the guns to the Indians. Kennedy tries to summon the Apaches. Stewart forces him to destroy the weapons and leaves him to the Indians who kill him. He bids O'Donnell farewell and asks her to look him up at Fort Laramie on her way east, McMahon gets a chance to care for Crisp, whom she has loved all along.

X-RAY: Lots of action, some shots that will cause the squeamish to look elsewhere, an interesting yarn that holds up well throughout, colorful settings, good performances, particularly by Stewart, and better direction and production seem to insure better results for this entry. With a little selling it could give a good account for itself. It has many interesting facets, and fans who like action as well as taut drama should be satisfied with the result. The screen play is by Philip Yor-

Pearl Of The South Pacific (515)

ADVENTURE DRAMA
86M.

(Superscope)

ESTIMATE: Okey programmer.

CAST: Dennis Morgan, Virginia Mayo, David Farrar, Basil Ruysdael, Lance Fuller, Murvyn Vye, Lisa Montell. Produced by Benedict Bogeaus; directed by Allan Dwan.

STORY: South Pacific sea-trader Dennis Morgan, his partner, David Farrar, and adventuress Virginia Mayo set out on a schooner in search of black pearls on a remote island. The embittered and selfish trio finds the island an unspoiled paradise controlled by white priest Basil Ruysdael, who wishes to protect the natives from the evils of the outside world. He refuses to let them come ashore, suspecting their motives, but his son, Lance Fuller, eager to see the world, prevails on him to allow Mayo on the island, disguised as a missionary. She is distrusted by Ruysdael and the natives, but wins the affection of Fuller, who reveals that a horde of black pearls are hidden at the bottom of a forbidden lagoon, guarded by an octopus. Against his father's orders, he allows Morgan and Farrar to come ashore. They supply him and other natives with rum and, when he finds the group intoxicated, Ruysdael has a stroke, which is considered an evil omen. Fuller, in love with Mayo, decides to break the taboo of the lagoon by killing the octopus, taking the pearls, and fleeing with the whites to the outside world. He delivers some pearls to Farrar, who stabs him. The natives rise against them, and Farrar is killed in the ensuing battle. Morgan escapes, and Ruysdael recovers in time to save Mayo from being put to death. Realizing the whites have changed, Ruysdael allows them to stay on the island for good. Fuller returns to his native fiancee when Mayo realizes she is in love with Morgan.

X-RAY: Technicolor and Superscope help considerably to enhance the interest of this standard entry. The tropical landscapes are satisfying, if not unusual, and the photography is good. However, the story lacks its promised excitement, and the dialogue and direction are only fair. The exotic setting helps.

TIP ON BIDDING: Program price.

AD LINES: "A Thrilling Tale Of Adventure And Treasure In The South Pacific"; "They Went For Treasure, But Found Each Other"; "A Tough Trio Meets Fate In Paradise."

House Of Bamboo (516)

102M.

(CinemaScope)
(Color by De Luxe)
(Filmed in Japan)

ESTIMATE: Highly interesting meller .

CAST: Robert Ryan, Robert Stack, Shirley Yamaguchi, Cameron Mitchell, Brad Dexter, Sessue Hayakawa, Biff Elliott, Sandro Giglio, Elko Hanabusa, Harry Carey, Peter Gray, Robert Quarry, De Forest Kelley, John Doucette. Produced by Buddy Adler; directed by Samuel Fuller.

STORY: A freight train guarded by American and Japanese soldiers is halted and held up with a shipment of guns and ammunition stolen after an American guard is killed. The Japanese police, represented by inspector Sessue Hayakawa, and U. S. Army Intelligence, represented by Captain Brad Dexter, work on the case. A clue develops in the person of an American who turns up shot with some of the stolen ammunition by his teammates when he is wounded during a hold-up. The only clue gathered from him before he dies is the name of his secret wife, Shirley Yamaguchi, plus a letter from an American ex-convict friend who expects to join him upon his release from jail. Later, seedily dressed, Robert Stack debarks from a small steamer and locates Yamaguchi, who fears he is about to kill her as her husband was killed. He convinces her that he is her former husband's awaited friend. Without funds, he tries to exact protection from some of the gaming parlors in Tokyo, but this rates him an introduction to Robert Ryan, who warns him off. He is framed and taken to the police station where a check shows he has a bad record, at which point Ryan has him hauled back and offers him a part of his set-up, now sure that his criminal past entitles him to the spot. He meets with Dexter and Hayakawa and reports to them and later, to justify his delay, he tells Ryan he was with Yamaguchi, who reluctantly backs him up after some violence. Later she agrees to help him by coming to live in his quarters as his "kimono" to cover his activities. It develops that Ryan runs a gang of ex-GI's on a semi-military basis which robs, pillages and kills as necessary. A job is called off at the last minute because Ryan's undercover contact at police headquarters discovers Stack's identity. Ryan endeavors to set a trap whereby the police will kill Stack. This backfires, and he and his henchmen are killed as most of the city's population watches. Stack and Yamaguchi are free to carry on as two normal people in love, with his real identity as a Sergeant in the Army established.

X-RAY: Considerably aided and abetted by the authentic scenes and settings of the city of Tokyo and Japan, which are extremely interesting in themselves, this entry develops into a fast-moving, interesting meller that should please most fans seeking this type of entertainment. The cast does a good job, and the direction and production are in the better category. CinemaScope and color also aid in the presentation. The screen play is by Harry Kleiner.

TIP ON BIDDING: Higher program rates.

AD LINES: "Ripped From The Pages Of Today's Newpapers In Japan"; "A Film Guaranteed To Be Different And Highly Interesting"; "Action . . . Fast-Moving Adventure . . . Thrills . . . Illicit Romance —All In 'House Of Bamboo'."

Francis In The Navy (534)

FARCE
80M.

ESTIMATE: Average series entry.

STORY: When Army Lt. Donald O'Connor learns that his buddy Francis, the talking mule, is to be sold by the Navy as war surplus, he rushes to the naval station on a 30-day furlough pass to buy him. He is mistaken for a sailor, also Donald O'Connor, who is a war hero and who tends to go off on binges that involve women and almost anything else, but the officers and crew go easy on him because of his record. The sailor decides to switch places with the Army officer, With he help of Francis, he resigns himself to the position which includes the attentions of pretty nurses, WAVES, etc. On the eve of a big joint exercise, the real sailor shows up, apologizes to O'Connor, and offers to help him get off the base. This is easier said than done. Lt. O'Connor is forced to continue the masquerade and take part in the landing operations, but with the help of the mule he and his men come out okeh. He quickly changes places with sailor O'Connor and hopes to get off the base and maybe do a little romancing on his own with sailor O'Connor's sister, Martha Hyer.

X-RAY: For those fans who go for this series there is no reason to suppose that this won't make out as well as others that have preceded it. As a matter of fact, devotees will get more than their money's worth by being able to see two Donald O'Connors on the screen simultaneously. The story is fair, as is the acting, direction, and production. Devery Freeman is responsible for the story and screen play.

TIP ON BIDDING: Usual rates for the series.

AD LINES: "Francis Joins The Navy And Drives The Gobs Crazy"; "Fun Galore On The High Seas"; "Double Trouble In The Navy Plus Francis The Talking Mule."

DRAMA
94M.

(Technicolor)

ESTIMATE: Drama will have most appeal for women.

CAST: Anne Baxter, Rock Hudson, Julie Adams, Carl Benton Reid, Natalie Wood, William Hopper, Betty Garde, Barry Curtis, Adrienne Marden, Fay Morley, Vici Raaf, Lynne Milian. Produced by Ross Hunter; directed by Jerry Hopper.

STORY: Carefree gambler Rock Hudson, his young brother, Barry Curtis, and girl friend Anne Baxter move to Colorado following Hudson's dismissal from his job in the gambling house managed by Baxter. Baxter, in love with Hudson but unable to convince him to marry and settle down, makes a home for Curtis while Hudson lives in a hotel and gets a good job in a local bank. Baxter also takes in motherless Natalie Wood after her father is killed in a mine accident. Julie Adams, also in love with Hudson, has Baxter declared unfit to mother the two children and wins their custody while Hudson is out of town. Baxter returns to the gambling house, and Hudson, not knowing the true facts, marries Adams on his return. When Wood runs away to Baxter, the latter returns her to her home, and to spite Adams decides to open a gambling house near the Hudson home. Hudson, still in love with Baxter, quarrels with drunken Adams, who knocks over an oil lamp and is trapped in the ensuing fire. Hudson tries to rescue her but is unsecessful, and the blaze also destroys Baxter's uncompleted gambling house. Wiser now, Baxter and Hudson and the two youngsters are free to face a happier future.

ments of soap opera, this entry seems limited in appeal to the femme trade. Performances are adequate, direction and production okeh, and the Technicolor lensing good, but the story suffers in translation from novel to screen. The screen play is by Lawrence Roman and Robert Blees.

TIP ON BIDDING: Fair program rates.

AD LINES: "He Was Her One Desire, But She Had To Lose Him Before She Could Win Him"; "Her Clouded Past Followed Everywhere She Went, Ruined Everything She Loved"; "Men Had Given Her Everything But Her 'One Desire'."

The Private War Of Major Benson (533)

COMEDY DRAMA 105M.

(Technicolor)

ESTIMATE: High rating comedy drama has wide family appeal.

STORY: Charlton Heston, tough Army career officer, gets in trouble by sounding off about soft treatment of GI's and is forced by General Milburn Stone to accept a transfer as commandant of a military school. He finds to his horror that the students range in age from six to 15, and that the school is a religious one operated by nuns. Only the pretty doctor, Julie Adams, finds favor with Heston, who immediately incurs the hatred of the student body, with Tiny Tim Hovey terrified by his every apperance. Through the machinations of Adams, however, the warm side of Heston comes to the surface, and, with the student body backing him all the way, his administration is deemed a success, returning him to active duty with Adams by his side.

X-RAY: This is sure fire for the family trade, and proper exploitation can bring in better returns from all situations. Heston and Adams are excellent in leading adult roles, and the performances given by the juvenile members of the cast under Hopper's able direction are little short of inspired. Sure to win favor with all types of moviegoers is little Tim Hovey. There is an abundance of sentiment which never becomes sticky, and excellent production values, including fine Technicolor tints. This is wholesome entertainment, and given proper showmanship on the part of exhibitors, could prove to be a box office surprise. The story is by Joe Connelly and Bob Mosher.

AD LINES: "The Army Was Never Like This"; "The Major Versus The Minors, And You're The Entertainment Winner"; "The Most Heartwarming Movie Experience In Years."

Comedies

NOBODY'S HOME. Columbia—All-Star Comedies. 16½m. Wally Vernon and Eddie Quillan are neighbors, but due to constant bickering they decide to move away from each other. They both buy the same house from a crooked real estate salesman. Both families move into the house, with Vernon and Quillan nearly wrecking the place. In an effort to make repairs, the boys flood the cellar, break the water heater, and finally blow up the house. FAIR. (7416).

STONE AGE ROMEOS. Columbia—Three Stooges Comedies. 16m. The Three Stooges as bearded explorers are commissioned by a museum to embark for a strange land where it is belived cavemen can be found. The Stooges are promised money if they can produce evidence of their find. After a series of adventures, the trio return to the museum with a film of three beardless cave men. The curator discovers the film to be a trick, with the Stooges acting out the caveman roles. GOOD. (7408).

LETTERS

From BOSTON, MASS.

I am truly amazed and so must every right thinking person who read your editorial in your issue of July 6. To render an opinion, a fair one, you should be properly qualified, and how in God's name you qualify to render an opinion respecting the film, "THE NAKED AMAZON," is beyond anyone with average common sense, since you admit in your article that you have not seen this particular "documentary." How can you say anything so disparaging about someone else's property when you know so little about it, and one would think before you went out on the limb to damn someone or some picture you would not put yourself in a qualifying position and if you then found sufficient warranty for your damnation you take your own chances to express your opinion which is the God given right—but in expressing that opinion you should not unjustifiably injure someone else.

Your editorial takes issue with the opinions of many qualified respected members of our industry some of whom I have known for many years and I take personal exception to your damning them as well. I really think you have one helluva stinking nerve to say what you say about "NAKED AMAZON" and the people in our industry who have booked it. I have that right to tell you so and I only regret I have not the opportunity of telling you so in person.

This industry has enough problems on its hands at this time without its own members helping to tear down its structure and put it up to such unwarranted criticism as you are heaping upon it. It is time we had more praise about our great industry; if our own flock don't want to say nice things about it, this is no time to be throwing bricks at it. The use of adjectives, catchlines, etc., has been associated with show business ever since its inception and you who have been a member of this industry for so long should recognize it by this time; it is part of the business and if you don't know it, you should find out about it. Take your own issues, read through them, and you will run into catchlines that really have some heat in them; you run them in your magazine, you take money for such ads, you represent yourself as a member of our industry, then do things that will be constructive and not of an opposite nature. I could say lots more but I might be wasting time offering these sentiments to even you. Think it over in your calmness; I am sure you will regret attacks that are unwarranted if you have any sense of fairness—even the remotest.

You have a public trust being an editor of a paper that must be far reaching and you should uphold that trust by being fair in your expressions and also being properly qualified to render your opinion.

Your attacks on "THE NAKED AMAZON" and the people who booked it are certainly unwarranted—do you know that the official magazine of the American Museum of Natural History devoted seven full pages with pictures and a story about this expedition and also devoted the front cover of that magazine in color to a picture of the Indian tribe photographed; they are truly a very representative organization and properly qualified to talk about expeditions, etc.

I believe you owe a public retraction of your damnation, even if you saw the film; you might rise to being big enough to offer this warranted retraction to those you have unjustifiably attacked.

JACK MEYERS
Hub Film Exchange

P.S. Even the White Race has a lot of its folk that don't look so good externally so why attack anyone, even the poor Indians who may not look so "beautiful" to you.

EDITOR'S NOTE: If Mr. Meyers will reread our editorial (THE FAST BUCK . . . AND THE SLOW DEATH, July 6, 1955), he will note that Mr. Emanuel freely stated that he personally had not screened "NAKED AMAZON." His remarks were based on, and directed at, the advertising approach in the press book and in a tabloid size herald apparently intended for public distribution. This picture was reviewed, in our issue of June 29, 1955, and while admittedly interesting, it will be noted that our reviewers recommended caution due to the naked natives. Should there be any doubt in Mr. Meyers' mind regarding whether the advertising "gimmick" is to misrepresent the naked Amazonian as a white girl, we want to refer him to the attached picture of a street float as serviced to us from Loew's Metropolitan, Brooklyn, complete with leopard skins. We are sure this particular native of Brooklyn would have better graced the front cover of that "official magazine of the American Museum of Natural History!"

While Mr. Emanuel can't oblige with the public retraction that Mr. Meyers requests, we do want to show him, to use his own term, that we have the "helluva stinking nerve" to publish his views.

P.S. We can only hope that Mr. Meyers won't tell the Indians that we don't think they are beautiful.

All Unsolicited

From PHILADELPHIA, PA.

I don't know whether you saw what is called a motion picture titled "Karamoja," which was shown in the Stanton Theatre. Please don't look at it. I am sure it would make you violently ill as it has me. Never have I seen anything more disgusting, repellent, or nauseating than "Karamoja." Apparently we do not have a Censor Board anymore because I believe the courts have ruled that they have no value. I could be wrong about my opinion of Censor Boards—I don't think I am wrong about the quality of the stinking, repugnant, disgusting so-called motion picture. Neither Laura Lee, Philadelphia Bulletin, nor Mildred Martin, Philadelphia Inquirer, went far enough in their reviews.

ALFRED J. DAVIS
Fried Theatre Management Company

EDITOR'S NOTE: See our similar views in the editorial: "THE FAST BUCK . . . AND THE SLOW DEATH"—July 6 issue.

From BUFFALO, N. Y.

I want to compliment you on that wonderful editorial that appeared in the June 1 issue entitled "Showman Helps Legion of Decency." I know it is like hitting your head against a stone wall if you try to change the teachings of any religious group, but I believe if your editorial was sent to the cardinals and bishops of the Catholic Dioceses in the United States it might give them a clearer understanding of what we are trying to do in show business, and that pictures aren't made for any one group but are made for entertainment purposes. I want you to know that I mailed a copy of your editorial to Bishop Joseph Burke of the Buffalo Diocese and also to Msgr. Schwegler of the local Legion of Decency. All that I can do is pray that they read it and maybe have a better understanding of us.

GEORGE H. MACKENNA
Basil's Lafayette

EDITOR'S NOTE: We wish to correct Mr. Mackenna's choice of term. We have no quarrel with the Legion's "teachings" or objectives. We do believe that "the ladies" have abused their privileges, and have gone far beyond the position intended for them by the Catholic hierarchy.

THE OLD LEGAL "LOUSE-UP"

BETWEEN THE LAWYERS, and the judges, and the attempts to make this industry fit into the commerce and trade laws and restrictions, as though what we are selling is as tangible as a bar of soap, we are really getting loused-up.

Maybe the original mistake came from calling this an industry. It isn't and it never can be! It's just plain good old showbusiness—and there is even some question as to whether the latter half of that word isn't a misnomer. From the wandering minstrel, through Shakespeare's buskined boys, and through the gaslit vaudeville and legit stages to the wide screen and stereophonic sounded pictures of today, the major single commodity we sell is an ephemeral period of entertainment, that can run the full gamut from completely pleasing to completely displeasing the paying customer. This isn't a commodity that you can hold in your hand or wrap into bundles. You can't feel it, or see it, or taste it, or smell it, in order to evaluate its worth. And it isn't even a necessity, for many millions of people, at home and abroad, down through the centuries and even today, lived happy lives without ever buying commercial entertainment.

It is also a commodity that use does not consume, for 50,000,000 Americans can buy a particular piece of picture entertainment, and while its value may fall, the original negative that is its source still exists, as bright and as clear as ever. And when this original negative, that may have cost $1,500,000 is eventually sold to TV for $50,000, it won't be used up and it won't be worn out. The only thing that will have happened to it is that time has run and there aren't as many people available who haven't seen it and who are willing to pay a number of admissions to do so.

This latter situation is not so easily paralleled with the era from the minstrels to the legit stage, for their entertainment was controlled by their "one copy of the one best cast," and many a ticket speculator got rich on the "must see early" of clamoring patrons. But with the advent of movies, with their multiple prints of the same entertainment, and with "must see early" a most important part of the commodity offered, a system of clearances, from the deluxe first-runs in the larger cities down through the neighborhood and neighboring town subsequent runs, became the most important single foundation of our national gross and economic success. From the highest admission scale in the early runs, its price kept dropping in an orderly slide to the lowest admission scale in the last of the subsequent runs—and all of those weeks and all of those admission prices were necessary in order to support the quality of U. S. entertainment.

But then came selfish avarice and greed!

Seeing how little lawyers and judges understood of the structure of showbusiness and its difference from any other tangible commodity, service, or profession, and how easy it was to muddle and confuse them into bad legal decisions, many theatremen, sometimes without clean hands themselves, appealed to courts to upset the very clearances that ofttimes they had established themselves—so that they personally could have "an edge."

Current cases, in varying degrees of litigation, in Norristown (Pennsylvania), Pittsburgh, Miami, Chicago, and elsewhere from coast to coast, all hinge on some aspect of what constitutes fair clearance. To single out one: Philadelphia, being one of the four largest cities in the U. S. can command an admission price of $1.50 in a "must see early" run, and guarantees against percentage of $100,000 are not unusual (currently "LADY AND THE TRAMP" at the Trans Lux World). Norristown, a small county seat less than 15 miles away, but about to be connected with a modern expressway that will reduce to 15 minutes the travel time from its main stem to the center of Philadelphia, supports two theatres, can command an admission price of only 75 cents in a "must see early" run, and is reported to never have paid more than $2,500 for any picture. Clearance had been reduced to 21 days, but the Norristown showmen weren't satisfied and have already won the first round in their legal demands for day-and-date.

Should this latter be upheld, little county seat Norristown at only 50 per cent of the admission price, and only 15 minutes away, is going to play hob with Philadelphia's theatre economy.

But it couldn't stop there!

Still smaller communities at only 50 per cent of Norristown's admission price, and only one to five miles away, can win day-and-date with it, and can play hob with Norristown's theatre economy.

And when that time comes, producers will stop making pictures. And we'll all go out of business. Including the boys who started the chain reaction.

"Roberts" Lusty At Radio City

NEW YORK—Warners' "Mister Roberts" at the Radio City Music Hall and Walt Disney's "Lady And The Tramp," Roxy, created the most boxoffice excitement on an extremely hot weekend.

According to usually reliable sources reaching MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR, the breakdown was as follows:

"We're No Angels" (Paramount). Paramount reported $45,000 for second week.

"Lady And The Tramp" (Disney-Buena Vista) Roxy claimed $27,500 for Thursday through Sunday, with the last eight days, including the fourth and last week, sure to tally $50,000.

"Mister Roberts" (Warners). This opened to $107,000 for Thursday through Sunday, with a very excellent $182,000 in sight for the first week.

"The Seven Little Foys" (Warners). Criterion expected the third week to hit $31,000.

"Not As A Stranger" (UA). Capitol claimed $65,000 for the third week.

"Foxfire" (U-I). Globe anticipated the opening week at $14,000.

"House Of Bamboo" (20th-Fox). Mayfair was down to $10,500 on third week.

"Summertime" (UA). Astor was off to $35,000 on the fourth week.

"The Shrike" (U-I). Victoria was down to $25,000 on the second session.

"The Seven Year Itch" (20th-Fox). Loew's State looked for the seventh week to reach $21,500.

"MGM Parade" Plans Set

HOLLYWOOD—"The MGM Parade" will be launched by Loew's over ABC-TV on Sept. 14, it was announced last week, following conferences here to work out details which were conducted by Arthur Loew, president, Loew's International. Also attending the talks were E. J. Mannix, Charles Reagan, Howard Dietz, Orton Hicks, Howard Strickling, and Dan Terrill, for MGM, and Robert Weitman, Ernest Stern, and Stanton Kramer, for ABC.

Les Peterson has been named executive producer of the show, and George Murphy will be host. Thomas Luskin will be the network coordinator at the studio. The telecast will follow Walt Disney's "Disneyland" on the network.

New Warners Managers Named

NEW YORK—New Warners managers for Charlotte and Atlanta were announced last fortnight by distribution vice-president Ben Kalmenson. Grover Livingston was promoted from Charlotte branch manager to Atlanta branch manager, replacing C. T. Jordan, Jr., who resigned. John J. Kirby was promoted from local sales manager, Charlotte, to branch manager, Charlotte.

NEW YORK
By Mel Konecoff

BRIEF JUNKET 1: Amid entreaties from friends and family not to sign any papers, legal or illegal-looking documents, or even hasty autographs, we took off along with a few hundred exhibitors, press, magazine, television, and radio representatives for Fort Jay on Governor's Island in New York Harbor.

KONECOFF

A short bus ride, a shorter ferry ride, a brief bus ride, and there we were sitting in the picnic grove looking out on New York Harbor, a fried chicken leg in one hand, a bottle of beer in the other, and a pretty gal minding her own business elsewhere at the table. To top it off an Army band was on hand to serenade the group with selected musical selections which put everyone in a proper spirit for what followed, a guided tour of the island with a pretty WAC to explain the high and low points. One of the high points was a short historical lecture on some of the trophies in the principal church on the island by the assistant chaplain, a chap with a sense of humor.

We guess it's about time we reported the reason for the thing, which was to show U-I's "To Hell And Back," starring Audie Murphy and about Audie Murphy as a hero-soldier, to the assembled guests and Army officers and personnel. The fact that Murphy was along aided considerably, and he joined with post commanders of the First Army in inducting 108 new volunteers into the Army.

The film was shown in the post theatre and received good reaction from the audience, with the entry shaping up as a good war film based on Murphy's autobiography. This is but one of the many promotions participated in by Murphy, who appeared on countless radio and TV programs, posed for numerous fotos, and made himself available for a number of interviews.

Beneficial Results Seen From Distributor Talks Despite Differences On Need For Federal Control

NEW YORK — Continued cooperation, especially on trade practices, between National Allied and Theatre Owners of America appeared assured last fortnight when officials of both organizations expressed strong convictions that the joint TOA-Allied Committee has achieved some measure of success, and forcasted greater accomplishments following a longer period of association between the exhibition members.

It was maintained that concrete results from the individual company conferences conducted recently with distributors are already being enjoyed by many small theatres, although it was acknowledged at the same time that there remain problems to be faced, and that it will be some time before promises made by film company executives are put into general practice. Although the two groups are at odds on many issues, such as the advisability of seeking federal regulation of film rentals, it was pointed out that there are many areas for fruitful teamwork.

A concrete indication of the outlines of further cooperation will be forthcoming from the report due this week from the National Allied Emergency Defense Committee to the association's Washington convention; the EDC members are also members of the joint committee, and it is they who have pressed for government control of film rental practices. However, because of a backlog before adjournment, it was considered unlikely that the Senate Small Business Committee would consent to hear the EDC complaints or to take any action this year.

Benjamin Berger, EDC chairman, stated in Minneapolis last week that time is running out on the majors to make good on oral committments, and called on them to meet their pledges before this week's Washington meeting, to prevent National Allied from deciding on a course of seeking government film control. On the important issues involved with the majors, Berger said, no difference of opinion exists between TOA and Allied.

UA Pledges Effort At Exhibitor Relief

NEW YORK—A promise to do everything in their power to obtain the cooperation of their producers in relieving exhibition's problems was extracted from United Artists sales executives last week by members of the joint National Allied-Theatre Owners of America committee, it was revealed in a statement issued by UA distribution vice-president William J. Heineman, following a conference with Wilbur Snaper, Allied, and Walter Reade, Jr., TOA. The meeting closed the series of talks with distributors initiated by the joint committee.

Heineman said that the exhibitor spokesmen provided him and Bernard Kranze, general sales manager, with a complete picture of their problems and grievances, and that UA is sympathetic to many of their points, particularly the plight of the small theatreman. The statement declared the meeting had been an amiable one.

"Crockett" Suit Settled

NEW YORK—The litigation between Walt Disney Productions and Davy Crockett Enterprises , Inc., has been settled, it was jointly announced by both companies last week.

Walt Disney Productions has obtained for its licensees full rights under the Davy Crockett Enterprises, trade-mark owned by Davy Crockett Enterprises, and Davy Crockett Enterprises has obtained for its licensees all of the rights of Walt Disney's licensees, including the right to use the Walt Disney name, Fess Parker's name and picture, and the facilities of Walt Disney Productions' art department.

The trade-mark rights of Davy Crockett Enterprises will continue to be fully enforced, by infringement action in court where necessary.

RKO Honors Grainger With 16 Week Drive

NEW YORK—The J. R. Grainger Sales Drive, a 16-week cash competition for RKO exchanges throughout the United States and Canada, will launch the busiest period in recent years for the company on Aug. 12, it was announced last week by Herbert H. Greenblatt, domestic sales manager. The drive, which utilizes the product from the largest roster of independent producers in RKO history, marks the first time Grainger has given his name to a sales competition since becoming president.

Sixteen features will be available to the RKO exchanges, Greenblatt said, with cash prizes awarded to winning district and branch managers, and proportionate prizes to runners-up.

Pointing out that the name of the RKO president is "synonymous with good will in the industry," Greenblatt wired RKO district and branch managers that the high esteem in which Grainger is held "will enable you to enlist the wholehearted cooperation of exhibitors everywhere during this testimonial period in his honor."

C. J. Tevlin, vice-president in charge of operations at RKO studios, predicted "record billings" during the sales drive period which ends Dec. 1.

The roster of features to be released during the Grainger Drive are "Underwater!" "Tarzan's Hidden Jungle," "Hansel and Gretel," "Quest For The Lost City," "Wakamba!", "Rage At Dawn," "Escape To Burma," "Son Of Sinbad," "Pearl Of The South Pacific," "Bengazi," "The Conqueror," "The Young And The Brave," "Tennessee's Partner," "Glory," "Texas Lady," and "Treasure Of Pancho Villa."

Wage Law Ignores Theatres

WASHINGTON—No attempt was made last week by the House Labor Committee, following the lead of the Senate, to extend federal minimum wage coverage to theatres and similar groups, when it voted approval to an increase from 75 cents to $1 in the federal minimum wage law. The proposed house measure would make the increase effective March 1, whereas the Senate bill has voted the increase for Jan. 1. A fight is expected on the House floor to hold the increase to the 90 cents requested by the administration, which lost in the House committee on a tie vote. President Eisenhower had asked Congress to extend coverage to interstate circuits and other retail service organizations, but committees of both houses voted to postpone the question until next year.

RKO Switches Latin Posts

NEW YORK—Pedro Diaz, former RKO manager in Peru, has been promoted to manager, Colombia exchange, it was announced last week by Walter Branson, world-wide sales manager. Arthur Hershovitz takes the Peru post.

Myers Asks Congress To Continue Treble Damages In Anti-Trust Suits

WASHINGTON—The members of a House committee last week heard a plea from Allied States general counsel Abram F. Myers to defeat legislation which would delete the mandatory feature of treble damages in private anti-trust suits. He was joined in his appeal by Department of Justice anti-trust division head Stanley M. Barnes, and by Federal Trade Commission spokesman Earl Kintner.

Myers' attack on the proposed measure brought out many points. He asserted that independent exhibitors have suffered more from monopolistic practices than most business men; that, in spite of the Paramount case, distributors continue their unlawful practices; that the majority of anti-trust actions are civil, and settled by consent decrees in which judicial discretion is neither invoked nor exercised; and that the increased criminal penalties recently voted by Congress will be ineffective because they were rarely imposed when light. Myers went on to say that Congress should investigate the effectiveness of the decrees already entered before "handicapping" the victims of monopoly. Consent decrees in film cases have not helped the independent exhibitor, as witnessed by the fact the distributor revenues are increasing while theatres are closing, counsel said, adding that the claim that anti-trust laws are so indefinite as to lead to involuntary violations will not stand analysis, because the cost and difficulties of preparing and trying a case under the law are so great that it is doubtful many would be filed if it were not for the treble damages provision. Myers pointed out that the discretionary damages award was recommended by an attorney general's committee which included four lawyers who represented defendants in the Paramount case, and none who had ever represented an independent exhibitor. Concerning a proposal to amend the Clayton Anti-Trust Act to impose treble damages only on "wilful" violators, Myers said the term would only "becloud" the law.

Myers explained to the Congressmen that the film companies have drastically curtailed production, with the result that a starved market has been created that compels exhibition to buy virtually all pictures offered at prices in excess of their value, which are often more than the exhibitor can afford to pay. Myers accused the film companies of taking, through higher rentals, the benefits intended by Congress to accrue to the exhibitor in the reduction of the admission taxes.

The Motion Picture Association, represented by its law committee chairman Adolph Schimel, U-I vice-president and general counsel, warned that serious questions of statutory construction are raised by the "wilful violations" clause.

He went on to point out the economic factors influencing the industry today, and concluded by saying that exhibition is aware of the drain and jeopardy of the litigation which has plagued the industry.

Three King Brothers Films To Get RKO Distribution

HOLLYWOOD—King Brothers last week completed negotiations with J. R. Grainger, president, RKO, for distribution by RKO of their next three productions, "The Two-Headed Spy," to be filmed in Berlin and London; "The Seven Lanterns Of Japan," to be photographed in Japan; and "The Syndicate."

"Carnival Story," King production distributed by RKO, has grossed approximately $3,3000,000 in the United States and Canada, it was revealed.

Kefauver Softens Criticism

WASHINGTON—Senator Estes Kefauver, (D., Tenn.), chairman, Juvenile Delinquency Probe Committee, last week softened his criticism of the effect of film advertising material on juvenile behavior when interviewed by correspondents. Conceding that some ads do not distinguish between suggestiveness and pornography, the Senator said both are subject to control, adding that he believes the industry is doing a good job of self-discipline and will do better in the future. With the cooperation of the movie and TV industries, he said, the government can do something to control the amount of violence in production, which was one of the committee's chief complaints.

N. Y. Tax Brings $9,301,678

NEW YORK—Revenue of $9,301,678 was derived in the fiscal year ended June 30 from all sources of taxable amusements in the five boroughs of New York, it was learned last week from a spokesman for the City Tax Collectors Office. The tax collected under the five per cent amusement tax in the last quarter of the fiscal year, including motion picture theatre returns, was $3,101,028.

In one of the most unusual exhibitor and press previews of a film ever held, the U. S. Army acted as host at Governors Island, New York, recently for an invitational showing of U-I's "To Hell And Back." Seen, during a sightseeing tour of the Island with the Statue of Liberty in the background are Charles Moss; Charles Drake, who is featured in the picture; Charles J. Feldman, U-I vice-president and general sales manager; Audie Murphy, star of the film; Samuel Rinzler; Eugene Picker; and Ray Moon, U-I assistant general sales manager.

Wolf Succeds Netter As Altec Sales Head

NEW YORK—Marty Wolf, assistant sales manager, Altec Service Corporation, has been appointed sales manager of the company, according to an announcement recently by H. M. Bessey, executive vice-president. Wolf takes over the post vacated by the recent resignation of L. D. Netter, Jr., who is now a vice-president, Todd-AO.

The new Altec sales manager, who will direct the sales activities of the company's six division offices and numerous branches throughout the United States, is well and favorably known to theatre executives, managers, and equipment purchasers due to a long association with ERPI (Electrical Research Products, Inc.) and its successor, Altec Service Corporation, in various capacities.

Wolf joined ERPI in 1928. Following the formation of Altec in 1937, he was assigned to sales activities, and became credit manager of the company's Philadelphia branch office in 1941. Transferred to New York, he served as branch manager for several years. In 1948, he was appointed sales representative.

NT's Rhoden Reveals Production Plans For Five In Cine-Miracle

DENVER—National Theatres president Elmer Rhoden opened the company's eastern division annual convention in the Hotel Cosmopolitan last week with an address revealing that NT is ready with Cine-Miracle and that it will ask the government for permission to make five films in the process and to equip 50 theatres to show them.

He asserted that the industry has weathered the challenge of television, noting that business is good when product is good, and that more top-quality films are being produced. Rhoden announced that NT will throw its weight behind the COMPO Audience Awards Poll, in the expectation that it will uncover the new talent the industry desperately needs. He also disclosed that NT has plans for roofed theatres covering six acres, to offer every kind of service from parking lots to individual group seating.

In a luncheon address, guest speaker Joseph Ross, president, Daniels and Fisher department store, pointed out that the problems of downtown theatres are similar to those of department stores in that they both resolve themselves into a necessity for aggressive and courteous merchandising. He advised exhibitors to design their showmanship in keeping with the times, and to redesign their theatres, if necessary.

Managers from Fox Inter-Mountain Amusement Corporation and Fox Wisconsin Amusement Corporation joined Dave Izdal, Fox, Detroit; Harold Seidenberg, Fox, Philadelphia; and William Moclair, Roxy, New York, in the three-day gathering presided over by Inter-Mountain president Frank H. Ricketson, Jr., who hosted a lawn party in his Denver home the first evening.

Among other speakers at the convention were Robert Selig, division manager; Gordon Hewitt, Wisconsin division manager; Ray Davis, Denver district manager; Harold Rich, southern head; Jack McGee, Montana manager; and Tom Brennan, northern chief. Ralph Russel, manager, Palace, Canto, O., was a special guest speaker, and his address was followed by talks by Dick Conley, Butte, Mont.; John Tella, Durango, Colo.; Les Newkirk, Boulder, Colo.; Alan Bamossy, North Platte, Neb.; Robert Bothwell, Great Falls, Mont.; Charles Allum, Laramie, Wyo.; Alvin Plioff, Denver purchasing office; Al Frank, Wisconsin manager; Harry Green, Inter-Mountain treasurer; Mike Zalesny, Las Cruces, N. M.; and Robert Garland, real estate department.

Conventioneers attended the City Opera in nearby Central City, inspected the Centre and Denver Theatres, and adjourned the meeting with a luncheon at Green Gables Country Club.

Mrs. Epstein Dies

PHILADELPHIA — Condolences are extended upon the death of Mrs. Pearl Epstein, wife, Izzy Epstein, head, Atlantic Theatres Circuit, last week, in Jefferson Hospital.

Gloria Grahame, who co-stars in UA's "Not As A Stranger," was recently greeted by UA President Arthur B. Krim at the gala Capitol premiere of the film on Broadway, New York.

EFFG Area Chairmen Named By Pinanski

BOSTON—The first area chairmen appointments in the campaign to widen support for the Exhibitors Film Financial Group were announced last week by Samuel Pinanski, president, who is also honorary chairman of the board, Theatre Owners of America, which sponsors the EFFG as a means of financing independent production.

The initial appointments cover half of the exchange areas, and area chairmen for the rest of the country will be announced shortly, Pinanski said. Those named were E. D. Martin and Nat Williams, Atlanta; Arthur Lockwood and Edward Lider, Boston; George MacKenna, Buffalo; George Kerasotes, Chicago; John Rowley, Dallas; Pat McGee, Denver; Myron Blank, Des Moines; Horace Denning and Mark Chartrand, Jacksonville; Burton Jones, Los Angeles; Albert M. Pickus, New Haven; Abe Berenson, New Orleans; Henry Griffing, Oklahoma City; Robert Livingston, Omaha; Sam Gillette and Sid Cohen, Salt Lake City; Nate Blumenfeld, San Francisco; and Will J. Conner, Fred Danz, Jr., and Joseph Rosenfield, Seattle.

At the completion of the showing, a cocktail reception was held in the Officer's Club and then back to the city still a civilian.

BRIEF JUNKET 2: This question is directed at localities who travel the subways of this wondrous city: Did you ever dream of traveling in a private subway car, feet comfortably propped up, being able to smoke at will and also being able to beckon to a waiting attendant who would bring cold beer or Coca-Cola or both while the stations rushed by without hindrance or stopping for anyone else until you reached your destination?

To start at the beginning, we received a very humorous invite from ace public relations gal Kay Norton to join in a junket to Brooklyn in lieu of one further away, which they didn't have at the moment. Stuffing toothbrush, clean socks, and an extra frayed shirt in several pockets, we subwayed down to City Hall where Council President Abe Stark bid us fond farewell and safe journey, and the next thing we knew we were Brooklyn bound on a chartered BMT express.

Double-talk expert Al Kelly and a host of aids were sloshing beer and coke over everything and into everyone, waving at bewildered ordinary would-be passengers on station platforms as we whizzed by and generally entertaining some 50 members of ye press who were Flatbush-bound to witness some shooting for the film "Patterns," a United Artists' release, which is the first feature motion picture to be made at the old Warner Brothers Brocklyn studio in 26 years.

A band serenaded the group as they hit the terra firma of Brooklyn and like the Pied Piper, the lambs were led to the studio where they witnessed star Van Heflin go through a scene three times under the direction of Fielder Cook, as producers Jed Harris and Michael Myerberg and guests looked on. Also featured in the cast are Beatrice Straight, Everett Sloane, Ed Begley, Elizabeth Wilson, and Joanna Roos. Satisfied at last with the takes, two of which were to be printed, the group adjourned to a local eatery known as Cooky's where various members of the cast circulated with each course. At our table, it worked out so that Everett Sloane, a very nice guy by the way, ordered roast beef, and Beatrice Straight wound up eating it, with Sloane probably eating something someone else had ordered. Rod Serling, who wrote the television play, which was presented twice on TV within a short period and on which the film was based, was able to have dessert with us and report that at the moment there seems to be more freedom in story telling on TV than movies.

At about this time, the cast and production crew had to return to the studio, and we had to catch our "Patterns Special" back to Manhattan which again was non-stop to the point of origin. Everybody took a last smoke before the train pulled into the station because smoking is verboten when you are an ordinary traveler.

The whole operation was very neatly handled by Norton, Bob Condon, and the rest of the staff.

First-Run Upsurge Cut By Neighborhood Loss

TORONTO—Decline in secondary business has overbalanced the improvement in the first-run business, John J. Fitzgibbons, president and managing director, Famous Players Canadian Corporation, notes in a message to the company's 8,560 Canadian shareholders. The message accompanied the 37½ cent quarterly dividend.

Fitzgibbons pointed out that business in the first-run houses has "favorably reflected the good effect of better motion pictures and the revolutionary new methods of producing and presenting films."

The increasing number of TV sets is blamed for the decline in business in the neighborhood theatres and those in smaller towns, which "follows the experience of motion picture theatre operators in the United States up to 18 months ago, when due to the improvement in the quality of films and new systems of presentation, an upturn in business began to take place and has since continued."

Fitzgibbons said that with the improvements in the motion pictures "immediately at hand," the period of attendance adjustment in Canada should be considerably shortened as compared with the U.S. experience. "For the moment the decline in the secondary theatres overbalances the first-run theatre improvement with a consequently lower profit," he said.

He said that the future, however, gave reason "to look forward with confidence to the boxoffice results that should be obtained from the exceptionally strong product available to us for our fall and winter seasons."

He then went on to cite the titles of various new films, mentioning such names as "Strategic Air Command," "Daddy Long Legs," "Love Me Or Leave Me," as being pictures which have shown strength.

Canadian Comment

Two newspapers in Canada made editorial pleas on behalf of the motion picture industry as well. One was the Hamilton Review, in Hamilton, a weekly in which writer Joe Yule wrote, "I'd like to take a minute of your time and see if I can convince you that there is no better way to enjoy yourself these hot nights than at the movies." The writer, using a pseudonym, pointed out there were more people going to the movies than to baseball games, horse races, or any sport event you can mention. "There must be a reason, and as a diehard movie fan I can say it's because there is an enjoyment to be found at the movies that you don't get from doing or seeing other things." From the Sudbury Daily Star, Sudbury, Ont., came an editorial pointing out that the movies theatres "that operate in a city can be quite properly described as an industry, and an important one, for the employment they provide for a great number of people and the economic contributions they make to the community." The editorial reminded its readers, on the occasion of the 50th anniversary of movies, "to recall the lift to morale that movie theatres provided during the years of the depression. Here was one medium of entertainment that stayed within the reach of individuals whose financial means were extremely meagre indeed. The movie theatres still provide the best medium by which people can see the world come alive through action, spoken words, and pictures. An evening at the movies will always be an entertaining and informative experience in Sudbury, because of the great variety of films offered to the public, and because a movie story is one told in one chapter."

Foreign Exhibs Prosper As Economies Improve

NEW YORK—Sam Rosen, executive vice-president, Stanley Warner Corporation, returned last week on the Queen Elizabeth from a month in Europe, which included a visit to the Cinerama installations. He said Cinerama was enjoying tremendous popularity both in England and on the continent and that the general improvement in economic conditions in western Europe was an important factor in the healthy motion picture business in free Europe generally.

Rosen said that exhibition was more prosperous abroad than here due to a combination of factors, which included foreign releases of the better pictures which have already played throughout the United States, plus good foreign product, plus the economic improvement. He said it was probable that we would play an increasing number of English pictures as production was attuned to the needs of a world market, rather than produced mainly for the British Isles.

Rosen was met at the dock by S. H. Fabian, president, Stanley Warner; Harry M. Kalmine, vice-president and general manager; and Harry Goldberg, head, advertising department. Returning with Rosen were members of his family who attended the wedding of his son, Arthur, in Paris, including Mrs. Rosen, Dr. and Mrs. J. Yellin, and his sons, Charles and David.

Lab Personnel Shortage Seen

NEW YORK—A shortage of skilled film laboratory personnel was predicted for the near future by Herbert R. Pilzer, president, Circle Film Laboratories, last fortnight. He asserted that the industry must take positive action to forestall that possibility in order to prevent a serious situation from developing.

He explained that the demands of television and color films have caused enormous expansion and that the point is being reached where the existing pool of help is exhausted. Pilzer suggested that some move be made on an industry basis to acquaint young people interested in a film career with the advantages of laboratory work.

WINNING ENTRY

"American Story" Scores In Third Sweepstakes For Utah Theatreman

PHILADELPHIA—Ted Kirkmeyer, manager, Ogden, Ogden, Utah, has come through as first prize winner in contest number three of SHOWMANSHIP SWEEPSTAKES, with his entry on "The American Story."

There was little doubt from the very beginning that Kirkmeyer had hit on a natural. Many exhibitors, following in the line of the various entries so far, may well adopt the stunt and capitalize upon it for themselves.

This one is outstanding and wins the $100 hands down. Some of the judges' remarks state, "Good for school tieups"; "An original idea"; "I'm still for anything fresh that brings new people to the boxoffice."

A new contest starts each and every week. If you didn't win in the third group of five entries, keep trying.

Proofs for next week's consideration by the judges are now in their hands. Keep plugging!

"Recently the president of one of the Latter Day Saint Church Relief Societies came to the office and inquired if I could assist her in securing a 16mm. film on 'The Constitution,' 'Declaration of Independence,' etc., which she understood were available for schools.

"She advised that one of the objectives of the Relief Society was to familiarize LDS members with outstanding American events so that each could better appreciate his American heritage. I informed her that the motion picture industry had available many outstanding films depicting these studies and we would be happy to work with her group in blending these selected films into one program and call it 'THE AMERICAN STORY.'

"We contacted the various film exchanges and secured a list of available subjects.

"A meeting was held with the representatives of each of the 11 stakes in this area (each stake has eight wards or churches) and a plan was approved whereby the church would rent the theatre outright for this film program and distribute special tickets to its members. The rental of the theatre was 40 per cent of our average weekly gross. The program was set for a Monday and a Tuesday, and the theatre is usually closed on Mondays.

"The program consisted of the following short subjects: 'Declaration Of Independence,' 'The Monroe Doctrine,' 'Man Without A Country,' 'America For Me,' 'House Of Knowledge,' (The Smithsonian Institute), 'Untroubled Border' (U.S.-Canada); 'Flag Of Humanity' (American Red Cross); and was two hours and 10 minutes long and ran continuous from one p.m. each day. The program was so well patronized that the theatre played to capacity with a holdout each evening at peak hours.

"We were enthused about the possibilities of this program from the beginning. However, it was not until we received the warm handshake of patrons leaving the theatre and noticed how deeply moved they were in seeing the enactment of such famous American documents, etc., that we realized how much this program meant to all who attended.

"Those who attended were not our average patrons, but infrequent moviegoers, many of whom had not attended a motion picture theatre since the advent of television. This proved without a doubt to be the greatest public relation activity we have ever encountered. Schools were dismissed so that youngsters might attend, and special announcements were made in each of the 88 LDS churches.

"Since this marks the first time, to my knowledge, that anyone was privileged to see all these treasured films on one program, I definitely feel that such a program would be well received in every community in America. The industry can be rightfully proud of making such a program possible.

"Although our program was sponsored by the LDS Church, it blends itself to a perfect sponsorship for Civic Clubs, Retail Merchants Associations, Patriotic Groups, or any large industry or firm, Parents Teachers Association, etc. If held on any patriotic date it should be all the more of a 'natural.'

"Special admission cards were printed and distributed by the sponsoring organization. There were plainly printed and read on the bottom: 'NOTICE: This ticket was purchased in advance. Please present it at the boxoffice in exchange for admission at no extra charge.' This kept close tally on attendance.

"Letters of commendation were received by the theatre from the Weber Shake Relief Society; the Riverdale Stake Relief Society; the Far West Relief Society Board; the Superintendent of Ogden Public Schools, who said, 'Congratulations on your cooperation with church, school, and community agencies . . . it was most helpful to have this type of presentation available in a motion picture program . . . and I would recommend it without hesitation as a splendid example of combining recreation and education."

"Also I received a letter from a partially blind woman, who said: 'Enclosed are two tickets which I should have given to your doorman last evening when I took my young grandson to see "The Story Of America". I had planned to meet him after school, and discovered I had left the tickets at home. The doorman was absent when I entered, and I asked the girl at the refreshment stand if she could let us in and I would send the tickets in today. She was very kind to let us in and I am keeping my word with her. I attend your theatre often. I wish to congratulate you on the extreme courtesy and intelligence of your employes, especially the man at the door and the girls at the refreshment bar.'

"About the only cost to us, other than the film rental, was the making of several lobby frame signs, one of which is shown in the illustration."

It was inevitable that "Davy Crockett" hit the SWEEPSTAKES sooner or later. Let, then, this be the first and last of the entrants on the Walt Disney-Buena Vista live-action feature "Davy Crockett—King Of The Wild Frontier."

This fellow Mizell went all out for window and department displays in stores featuring the Davy Crockett merchandise; and this wasn't so hard to do as there is plenty of this here Davy stuff the kids are plumb crazy about. However, when you round up an even dozen of them all over town, it shapes up as a job well done.

And then when you keep in there plugging with the merchants' association, which sponsored a Carnival Days promotion on a Friday and Saturday, when you were playing the ol' Davy picture, you know you've done a job, yes sir!

In cooperation with a shoe store Mizell had a man dressed in a Davy Crockett outfit riding a horse and playin' guitar and singin'. He made appearance on the stage at the special kiddie show, at which prizes were handed out for the best outfitted little Davy Crockett in the audience. The Davy Crockett character also made an appearance on Sam Neels' TV program. And a corral of pine slabs was erected in the street by the cooperating shoe store for the horse, with full credits for the picture and theatre.

Also during the merchants' Carnival Days an usher dressed in a clown suit and coonskin cap was out selling popcorn and orange juice smack on the sidewalk in front of the theatre.

Three merchants were persuaded to give free tickets to children for which they reimbursed the theatre at full price.

The Columbus, Ga., Ledger went all out in giving publicity to the theatre-merchants co-op and the Davy Crockett doings; and, well they should have when they grabbed themselves over six and a half pages, of Davy Crockett advertising that they otherwise wouldn't have got. And did that Crockett merchandise, such as fringed twill longies, T-shirts, suits, coonskin caps, records, mocassins, belts, suspenders, ties, etc., sell like wild-fire to the small fry! One market in on the deal gave away passes to see the film doin's of Davy in return from labels from any Southern Maid products; and gave the kids Davy Crockett color comic books with every package of weiners, as well.

All in all, Mizell did himself right proud in cookin' up a storm of co-op interest in pal "Davy."

Using his campaign for a guide, we suppose you all can do the same.

RUNNER-UP NUMBER 2

GOOD CONDUCT CERTIFICATES

Submitted by J. E. DeSilva
Playhouse, Canandaigua, N. Y.

960 Seats • 60 Cents Top Adult Admission
Family Type Patronage

This contestant comes up with a novel idea bound to have favorable repercussions among the small fry of his town.

He suggested to a local dentist that instead of giving candy, as was his custom, to the kids, why not give them theatre tickets. The dentist liked the idea so much that he had printed up a special award ticket (see illustration) at his own expense.

Now, these will be presented at the box-office and exchanged for tickets. Once a month the dentist will pick them up and pay the charges on them. The cashier will mark each one as to whether it was used for a regular show or a special show. The special award tickets are issued only to children 12 years old and under.

In this there is a terrific idea on which you can go to work. You don't have to confine your approach to dentists. Try your doctors, barbers, shoe stores, etc. It is felt that when you show them this attractive special award idea, they will be eager to latch onto it because it is different and attractive.

DeSilva has since been transferred to the Riviera, Rochester, N. Y., where he has also put the stunt to work.

DOCTOR IN THE HOUSE

Submitted by Jack M. Mahon

Rural and Urban Type Patronage

Here's a 10-point sales campaign worked out to sell and promote Republic's spoof on doctors, nurses, hospitals, etc., "Doctor In The House."

All of the male house staff were attired in doctor's gowns and skull caps; while the female staff members wore nurses' uniforms. The lobby was made to resemble a hospital, with appropriate signs; and appropriate "hospital" signs were posted around the theatre, such as "For Walking patients only" at exit doors. The candy bar was embellished by a local druggist, with colored bottles and pills. This made a very attention-getting display.

One boy was out on the streets with one-sheet boards; while another lad was bandaged up as if he had met with an accident, with a sign on his back.

The drug store handed out theatre flyers to all customers and had some 11 x 14's in his window display.

Special flyers were placed on all doctor's cars while parked behind their clinics.

Flyers were also delivered in individual envelopes to nurses and student nurses at the local hospital.

This was one picture that, according to Mahon, once the ball started rolling, one exploitation gag led to another. Everyone seemed to enjoy working out the stunts, all of which can be inexpensively and readily carried out by any theatre playing the picture.

Stating that "We got television competition about 20 months ago and dozens of families who were formerly regular patrons have not been to the theatre since they bought their sets.

"After we remodeled and installed CinemaScope equipment, we felt it would be good business to invite these folks in for a sample of the "new look."

"We printed invitations reading: 'We haven't seen you folks at the theatre for some time and we are wondering if you have forgotten how enjoyable movies are. We have recently done a lot of remodeling and have installed new wide-screen and CinemaScope equipment and we are mighty proud of the results. Many folks have told us we have the best looking big screen picture they have seen. We think you will agree with them, so we would like to have you see it.

"We have a picture coming which we think you will especially like, so if you will just present this invitation at the door you will see the picture as our guests. This includes the family, if they come as a group. The date and the picture: .....

"Sincerely,
"THE RICKETTS FAMILY."

Ricketts continues, "Each invitation had the name of the family and the show to which we were inviting them typed in and were mailed first class. We aroused some interest; got some complaints; and we think the effort was successful. We are very much opposed to 'free passes'; but we make rather heavy use of 'guest tickets,' sending them on any occasion that we think will do us some good. However, we think we have not cheapened our merchandise. We stress the term 'be our guest' on any ticket we use for this purpose."

$$$-ADDITIONAL PRIZES-$$$

While $100.00-per-week will be awarded each and every week throughout the year by the SHOWMANSHIP SWEEPSTAKES editors, certain film distributors will post from time to time additional CASH PRIZES to focus attention on a particular picture. Theatre, Playground Tieup Increases Summer Business

ILION, N. Y.—An enterprising guy is Ray Leveque, Schine's Capitol, who has the local playground commission working hand-in-glove with him throughout the summer. A few of the things lined up are a program to select a King and Queen to reign for the summer. Then there will be a costume contest, a "big sister" and "little brother" contest; an amateur night; etc.

He has arranged for all of the contests to have their finals on the stage of the theatre and has also sold the playground directors and commission on the idea of a rainy day activity to be held at the theatre when inclement weather prevents outdoor activity. He has offered them the privilege of purchasing gift books for this.

There's Money In Rentals

MALONE, N. Y.—One highly lucrative method of increasing business and yet, for some reason or other, one frequently overlooked is that of lining up rentals.

The Schine organization is one group of theatres whose managers seem to specialize in the activity.

For example, Irwin Promisel, Malone, Malone, has a July 23 rental set with Sears for a matinee. He also has back-to-school and Christmas rentals already lined up, and in between these, he has set a Thanksgiving rental with Malone Dairy. On top of this, he is working on a Kiwanis rental and a Safety Club rental.

BETTER MANAGEMENT DEPARTMENT

George Nonamaker
Editor

THERE IS NO NEED to tell you that summer is truly the dog days of the year.

Naturally, this holds good more for the conventional, indoor theatre, than for the drive-ins, most of which, according to their locations, thrive in the heat.

But it is possible to sell your air conditioning just a trifle more than a lot of spots have done. It is too valuable an installation to let pass by with a matter of fact attitude, assuming that the general public takes it for granted you have it; that it has become one of those accepted, commonplace things that customers expect and demand, rather than something added you can actually sell if you set your minds to it. Those puny "air conditioned" banners hanging limp in the non-breeze heat of the day outside the theatres are no inducement and give no incentive to passersby to rush in to get cool. The least you can do is to create an artificial breeze behind them and make them blow, or create a spirit of coolness by the use of light blue, light green, or other cool colored signs on your front.

We heard of a case in point recently that proves that ingenuity is not dead in this business. The Strand, Mystic, Conn., started selling a "naturally iced air cooling system." All that this amounted to was the management capitalizing upon the fact that in a room off from the main auditorium there is an ice box with fan set up whereby the air is taken from the outside, pushed through the ice chamber, where there is a 1,000 pound ice delivery daily, into the theatre. Of course, this is merely making do with an antiquated system, but it's the try that counts.

A few more hot ideas on selling your cool setups might help.

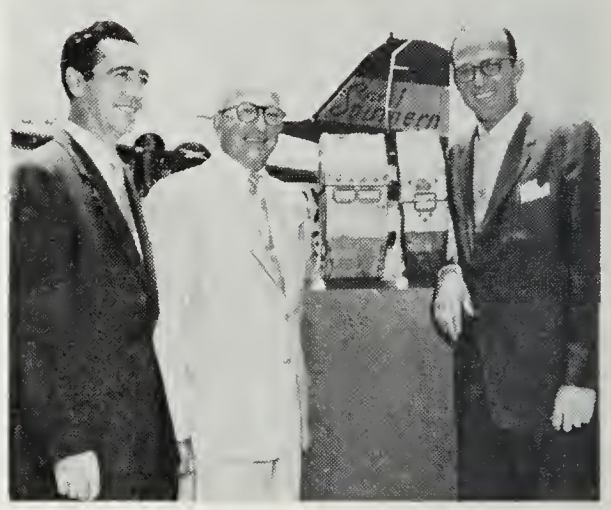
Alabama Law Officer Lauds "Phenix City"

PHENIX CITY, ALA.—John Patterson, attorney general of Alabama, last week deseribed Allied Artists' "The Phenix City Story" as "a motion pieture that will strike a powerful blow against erime and eorruption in every city in the United States." Patterson, obviously emotionally impressed by the film that recreates the brutal murder of his father, referred to the pieture as "a powerful objeet lesson for all Amcrica. The pieture direetly shows what organized erime can do to a city when the eitizens allow the gangs to take over. . . . does a great serviee for the people of Alabama beeause it impresses upon them, probably as no other medium eould, what happens when gamblers and gangsters first ease in and eventually take over a whole soeiety."



Samuel Bischoff, center, co-producer with David Diamond of Allied Artists' "The Phenix City Story," is seen recently arriving in Columbus, Ga., with the first print of the film in advance of its world premiere at the Phenix City Drive-In and Palace, Phenix City, and Georgia, Columbus, Ga. Greeting Bischoff are Carl Patrick, left, general manager, Martin Theatre Circuit; and E. D. Martin, national president, TOA, and president, Martin Theatres Circuit.

The pieture was screened for Patterson, editorial members of the Columbus, Georgia Ledger, the newspaper that recently won the Pulitzer Prize for their Phenix City story coverage, and eivie leaders of Phenix City and Columbus.

The enthusiasm for the pieture was so overwhelming that the "Committee of 200," the group of eivie offieials and leaders devoted to helping Phenix City continue its fight against viee-overlords, stated plans to sponsor the world premiere of "The Phenix City Story" at three loeal theatres yesterday (July 19).

Pieture was to open at the Georgia, Columbus, Ga., and the Palaee and the Phenix City Drive-In. All proeeeds were tieketed for a fund to eontinue the fight to keep Phenix City free of erime and vice.

Final plans were being arranged with committee members and E. D. Martin, Roy Martin, and Carl Patriek, top exeeutives, Martin Theatres.

NEWS OF THE TERRITORIES . . .

Censor Board Confused Over "Jungle Decision"

ATLANTA—A Federal Court order to allow a banned picture to be shown in Atlanta may affect future efforts to censor motion pictures. Although future policy is not to be considered by the Atlanta Library Board, the local censoring authority, before its regular meeting, attorneys are studying the decision and its implications. Bartow Bloodworth, assistant attorney, who defended the action of Mrs. Christine Gilliam, censor, and the board in banning "The Blackboard Jungle," said he had not conferred with city attorney Jack Savage, or other members of the staff, concerning action.

The city could ask a stay of the court injunction which Federal Judge Boyd Sloan granted. If he agreed to postpone making the order effective, an appeal could be taken, but, in the absence of a stay of the order, the picture could be shown and gone before a decision could be obtained on appeal. William F. Floyd, Jr., president of the board, said he has not discussed the matter and probably will not do so before the meeting.

Bloodworth pointed out that Judge Sloan decided no constitutional question, although he did discuss the right and immunities conferred by the Fourteenth Amendment. "The decision does not necessarily mean that our right to censor is ended" Bloodworth said. "We will determine our course after conferences, and after the court order has been handed down."

N. Y. Censor Selection Marks Time With Bowen

ALBANY—Dr. Ward C. Bowen, recently appointed acting director, Motion Picture Division, State Education Department, will serve as acting chief censor for an indefinite period. It probably will be mid-August before the department officials consider the question of filling the post permanently. The presumption is that the Commissioner-elect, Dr. James E. Allen, Jr., now Deputy Commissioner, will decide that a new list should be established and an examination given by the Civil Service Commission. How long it would take to arrange the test and to fix eligibility requirements is not known, but several months might well pass before details are set.

Meanwhile, Dr. Bowen will continue as acting chief censor, spending much of his time in the New York offices. A member of State Education Department staff since 1923, and an instructor at Cornell prior to that, he is not believed to be a candidate for MPD director.

Mass. Exhibs Warned About Doubtful Films

BOSTON—Cautioning Massachusetts exhibitors against buying doubtful films from peddlers flooding the mails with announcements of their product since the Supreme Judicial Court declared prior censorship of Sunday films unconstitutional, Edward Lider, president, Independent Exhibitors, Inc., of New England, a unit of National Allied said, "The decision of the Supreme Judicial Court does not mean that exhibitors can show films contrary to the public welfare or those which are immoral or obscene. A city has the right to stop the exhibition of any motion picture classed as indecent. This is a proper exercise of the so-called police power by the government to protect the welfare of its citizens and to prevent a breach of the peace. This is true now as it was before the decision and this police power can be exercised seven days a week. We therefore caution exhibitors to stay away from doubtful films which may offend patrons and those which could arouse public opinion against the operation of theatres, thus inviting adverse legislation which could restrict exhibitors more closely than ever in freedom of exhibition."

Regarding the problem of licensing fees for Sunday showings, in the Commonwealth, Lider explained that a final decree must be entertained in the Superior Court of Boston as ordered by the Supreme Judicial Court before the ruling is completely effective. "Each exhibitor should contact his local city clerk if he has been paying a city license, and he should contact his state inspector to see if he should continue to apply for his state Sunday license of $2. In other words, until the final decree is entered in the lower court, it is still not clear whether an application for a Sunday license should be filed in each locale or city. However, if it is required, a refund will be made on each application."

Boston

The world's largest drive-in, a dual-type ozoner for 3600 cars, 1800 on each side, will be erected in the metropolitan area by Smith Management Company. "I cannot disclose the actual site of this newest drive-in of ours," said Philip Smith, president, "until a small legal technicality has been ironed out, but this twin drive-in will be actually two huge drive-ins in one, with two complete concession buildings, projection booths, entrances, and exits. . . . Construction should get rolling around Sept. 1, for a spring opening." The expansion of this circuit, which has 20 drive-ins scattered throughout the east, including three theatres to be open to the public by Aug. 1. On July 15 the company was slated to open the gates of its Jersey City Drive-In, accommodating 1800 cars. On July 22, its Hartford Theatre, in the heart of the Connecticut city, will open for 2100 cars, and on July 29, the circuit will unveil its Timonium, Md., ozoner, which was started by Freeman and Lerner of New York, but was taken over by Smith before completion. The Smiths changed the original plans, enlarging the theatre, and altered the concession building to conform to their specifications.

Herman Rifkin, president, Rifkin circuit, has closed the Majestic, Springfield, Mass., for the summer. With the circuit's Suffolk, Holyoke, Mass., leased to Western Massachusetts Theatres and the Liberty, Springfield, closed over a year ago, the Rifkins operate only two walled theatres today, the Jefferson and Phillips, both in Springfield. The circuit operates six drive-ins, five in Massachusetts and one in Rhode

Catholic Drive-In Ban Ends As "Sinbad" Quits

BUFFALO—The Legion of Decency in the Catholic diocese of Buffalo lifted its ban against the new Twin Drive-In Theatre, where the Legion-condemned RKO's "Son Of Sinbad" was withdrawn two days before the time stipulated in its contract, the very Rev. Msgr. Edward S. Schwegler, Legion diocesan director, has announced.

The Legion originally asked Catholics to stay away from the drive-in for six months. In announcing the lifting of the ban, Msgr. Schwegler pointed out that the owner regretted he had run the picture and said he was not fully aware of the Legion's objection to the film.

The Rochester, N. Y., Deanery Holy Name Society protested the showing of "Son Of Sinbad," when it opened at the North Park Drive-In there. Frank J. Lange, Society president, said a letter signed by him and the presidents of seven church Holy Name units, was sent to Francis Maxwell, RKO, Buffalo, saying that the manager of the drive-in, Anthony Sulkowski, had informed him he has no control over the bookings.

"We wish to state," the letter contined, "that we do not care for this kind of picture in the neighborhood. We ourselves will not patronize this theatre and we will urge all members of our organization to do likewise until we are assured this theatre will present as a matter of policy decent pictures to which we can take our families. For your own future welfare we urge you to withdraw this picture at once."

Island. . . . It was a sad July 4 for Edward Wiswell, display artist, Loew's Boston Theatres. His 17-year-old son, Richard, suffered a heart attack while swimming, and died under water. . . . D-I, Refreshment Firms Planned In Buffalo, Florida

BUFFALO—Joseph H. Schinstock, suburban Eggertsville, former general manager, Sears Roebuck, announced the formation of two firms, one to operate in Buffalo and the other in Florida. The Florida setup will be known as Schinstock Enterprises, and will build two drive-ins, one in Fort Lauderdale and another in West Hollywood.

The Buffalo organization will be known as Schinstock and Maroone, John J. Maroone vice-president, and this outfit will develop refreshment stands and car-washing establishments in the Central Park Shopping Center and the Thruway Plaza. Schinstock's associates in the two companies are Walter A. Yates, Dean Becker, and Maroone, all of Buffalo; Steven C. O'Connell and Chet J. Maxson, Fort Lauderdale, and Merle Smith, West Palm Beach, Fla. The projects are to be completed this fall.

Buffalo

Joe Friedman, Warners' exploitation staff, was in conferring with Arthur Krolick and Charles B. Taylor, UPT executive offices, on the personal appearance of Jack Webb early in August, in connection with his forthcoming "Pete Kelly's Blues." . . . Variety Club delegates to the Los Angeles convention reported to members at a general luncheon in the Delaware Avenue headquarters, on the convention's decisions, by-law changes, and other actions affecting the Buffalo Tent. . . . David Miller, assistant manager, Paramount, Rochester, N. Y., was married to Arlene Sutherland, cashier, Arnett, Rochester. . . . After 20 years of operation, the Schine Theatres, Inc., film buying and booking office in the Crosby building, closed. Chris Pope, manager, has gone to the home office in Gloversville, as buyer and booker for both the Buffalo and Albany zones. This post will cover all Schine theatres in New York state. Heretofore Pope took in houses west of Syracuse. Harry Goldsmith, a predecessor in the Buffalo office, now is district manager, Buffalo, Lockport, Rochester, and Salamanca. His office is in the Palace, Lockport.

Charlotte

John W. Kirby has been named branch manager, Warners, succeeding Grover Livingston who goes to Atlanta as branch manager. . . . E. G. Stellings, president, Stewart and Everett Theatres, has been named co-chairman for the Theatre Owners of America convention to be held in Los Angeles, Oct. 6 through 9. . . . H. H. Everett, Stewart and Everett Theatres, is making quite a name for himself in civic and community circles. In addition to honors which have been conferred on him in the past, he acquired two more recently. The new Howard Johnson Restaurant opened, representing an investment of $150,000, and is operated by Queen Charlotte Restaurants, Inc., of which Everett is president. He was also one of the members of an 18-man panel which met at Memorial Hospital to consider the recommendation of its executive committee on a study of architectural plans and specifications for a 250-bed addition to take care of existing needs at the hospital and of the Negro population, costing approximately five million dollars.

Chicago

Scenes for "God Was In My Corner," the story of ex-champ Barney Ross, are scheduled for shooting in his old neighborhood. . . . The maintenance and storage of films will be a topic at the National Audio-Visual convention, Hotel Sherman, July 22 through 27. . . . La Rabida Sanitorium, Variety Club's main charity, benefitted by a $1,000 contribution from Morris B. Sachs, newly-elected city treasurer, who gives his monthly salary check to some worthy purpose. . . . The Astor, a downtown landmark, is to be razed, starting Sept. 1, to make way for additional frontage for the Chicago Loop Orthodox Synagogue, and also for a restaurant. Owner Daniel Newman has operated the Astor for several years as an all-night house, and its passing leaves but two all-night theatres in the Loop, the Clark, and Edwin Silverman's Woods.

A new office schedule at 20th-Fox, starting at 8:30 a.m., and ending at 4:00 p.m., was particularly welcome during the recent heat wave. . . . Just after friends of Danny Newman, Astor owner, received postcards telling about the joyous time he and his actress wife, Dina Halpern, were having in Israel, the distressing news came that the theatre in which she was appearing had been bombed. They were not injured, but unnerved.

The 400 was reopened, after a three-year closing, in prosperous Rogers Park, to the delight of residents and merchants. Milton Reingold, who bought the business block housing the theatre, modernized it and erected a brilliant marquee. . . . Jimmy Frisina, Taylorville, Ill., buyer, Frisina Amusement Company, came close to winning his fourth Illinois amateur golf championship. . . . Several theatres are negotiating for showing of Notre Dame football games, via TV, from Miami and Southern California, and Navy and Iowa, at Notre Dame. . . . Southside theatre owners were heartened by the news of the congressional appropriation of $4 million to begin widening the Calumet-Sag Canal, which will be a part of the St. Lawrence waterway for ocean going vessels. Completion of the project will give all businesses in that section a tremendous impetus. . . . Jack Shaffer, Marbro assistant manager, resigned to enter engineering sales. . . . Louis Nizer, famed New York lawyer, came to defend Paramount and Balaban and Katz in the $30 million anti-trust suit filed by Edwin Silverman, president, Essaness. The case comes up for trial this fall. . . . Veteran manager Charles A. Lansky resigned from the Astor to become manager, Crawford.

A room was dedicated at La Rabida Sanitarium to the Women's Auxiliary of Variety Club. . . . Nat Nathanson, Allied Artists' branch manager, was elected president, and Jack Kirsch was elected chairman of the board, Cinema Lodge, B'nai B'rith. . . . Richard Welling was appointed Alger Theatres managers, Urbana, Ill. . . . A new civic organization, to stimulate activities in the downtown area, is being formed. Co-chairmen Leo Sheridan, real estate tycoon, and Harold Moore, vice-president, Chicago Title and Trust, are receiving the support of theatremen. . . . Ervin Chapin was named manager, La Salle, La Salle, Ill. . . . Phil Sears was named publicity director, Double and Sunset Drive-Ins. . . . William Marshall was appointed manager, Apollo, Princeton, Ill.

Theatres in the North Side will benefit through a $400,000,000 redevelopment program in the historic Fort Dearborn area, made possible by action of the state legislature. . . . A number of Chicago faces will be recognized in "Chicago Syndicate," at the Roosevelt. Shootings were made here. . . . H. F. Wall closed his Ace, Pleasant Hill, Ill., for the summer. . . . Bruce Trinz, Clark general manager, now has his family in a new residence he purchased at suburban Highland Park.

Police Commissioner O'Connor is standing pat on his refusal to grant a permit for the showing of the French film, "Game Of Love," on the grounds that it is not acceptable to standards of decency. The Times Film Company filed a petition in U. S. District Court, which is now pending before Federal Judge Samuel Perry, asking that Mayor Richard Daley and the city withdraw the ban and for an injunction to restrain officials from interfering with the showing of the picture. . . . The Regal will resume stage shows, which have been successful in the past with motion pictures, on Sept. 28. . . . James Jovan, head, Globe Film Company, and owner, Monroe, is overdue from Europe, where he has been visiting production centers to secure product. His son, William, has been managing the Monroe in his absence.

Cincinnati

The Shubert-Cox Theatre Company filed suit in Common Pleas Court for damages of $103,880, against RKO Midwest Corporation, for failing to maintain the Shubert as allegedly required under a 20-year lease which expired last Feb. 28. When the house was surrendered, the suit said, the premises were in a condition of disrepair, filth, and dilapidation, and it was impossible for the plaintiff to operate the house as a theatre. . . . Chakeres Circuit reopened the Sidney, Sidney, O., after extensive renovation, with a $2 admission screening of U-I's "The Private War Of Major Benson" for the benefit of the Will Rogers Memorial Hospital Fund. . . . George Keating is new short subjects booker, Chakeres Circuit, succeeding Ben Hathaway, now a U-I student booker. . . . Robert McNab, 20th-Fox branch manager, was in Jewish Hospital recovering from a crushed leg suffered in an unusual accident. He was helping remove a tree blown down in a windstorm, when he slipped and the tree pinned his leg. . . . In a tight race in the 20th-Fox "Clean Sweep" drive, the Indianapolis exchange won over this city's branch by eight-tenths of one per cent. . . . Robert Wile, Columbus, O., executive secretary, Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, discussed the present movie situation at a luncheon of the local Exchange Club. . . . New drive-ins opened recently include the Sunset, Beattysville, Ky., J. M. McHaffie, owner, and MC-33, Lancaster, O., Homer McBee, owner. . . . The Butler, Butler, Ky., has been closed by C. B. Peebles, owner.

Governor Frank Lausche vetoed the State House underground parking garage bill, passed by the Legislature, saying that he did not want the state to get into the commercial garage business. The garage, which would give much-needed relief for Columbus, O., theatres, may yet be built if the Legislature passes the bill over the chief executive's veto. Proponents believe they can muster enough votes to override the veto when the Legislature reconvenes. . . . Mrs. Ethel Miles booked a number of stage acts into her drive-ins, the East Main, the North High, the Scioto, and the West Broad. The acts include Grits and Gravy, Reggie Rymal, and the Harmonaires. . . . Ohio exhibitors who are unable to buy 20th-Fox films because of price are advised by Robert Wile, secretary, Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, to write him. "You should be able to make a deal immediately," said Wile, who quoted a statement by President Spyros P. Skouras, who asked the Emergency Defense Committee to notify him of any theatre which cannot buy his company's pictures because of price.

Ohio Exhibs Ask Producers For C'Scope Sound Option

COLUMBUS, O.—Resolutions urging producers of CinemaScope films to continue issuing them in both optical and stereophonic sound prints, and commending William J. Heineman, United Artists, for his stand in refusing to distribute any picture which has previously been shown on television, were approved by the board of directors, Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio.

The board said that while it heartily approved the policies of companies in making optical sound prints available for small theatres and drive-ins, it hoped that stereophonic sound prints would not be abandoned, since many large Ohio theatres had spent thousands of dollars to equip with stereophonic sound. "To abandon this improvement would be a step backward, something the industry has never before done," said the board.

Sunday Movie Vote Set For Statesville, N. C.

CHARLOTTE—The City Board of Elections at Statesville, N. C., has called a special election to be held Aug. 9 to determine whether or not local citizens want Sunday movies. A 1947 ordinance prohibits the showing of commercial or free "moving pictures" on Sunday, and the issue of repealing the statute arose recently when the operator of one house announced that he would begin Sunday movies to test the law. The City Council, however, asked the operator to call off his plans and said that it would call an election on the issue if he agreed not to go ahead in the absence of a referendum. To this, the operator agreed.

Mosher Terms Dead Censor Law "A Fraud"

COLUMBUS, O.—Ohio's proposed censorship law "was a fraud," said Senator Charles A. Mosher, Rep., Oberlin, leader of the successful fight to kill the legislation, in a letter to the editor, Ohio State Journal. Mosher's letter was in reply to one signed "Worried Teacher," who said "thousands of children will become criminals in Ohio during the next 18 months" because of lack of film censorship.

"Though well-intentioned and cleverly written," said Mosher, "its practical results could have been little more than zero. But, had it been voted, thousands of parents would have been lulled into a false sense of security and relieved of responsibility, by the the mere motion that the state censors were 'protecting' their kids from bad movies . . . and in the same way theatremen would have been relieved of responsibility for what pictures they chose to show. Every boy or girl could see any show with the excuse that 'Well, the state censor says it's O.K.'" Mosher said that "Blackboard Jungle" could not have been banned under provisions of House Bill 29, contrary to a statement by "Worried Teacher."

Mosher added that passage of the obscene movie and comic book bill places the responsibility "where it belongs," that is "with theatre owners, parents, teachers, local police, and the public in general." He said it is a "misleading notion" that a state bureau can "protect" you, or me, or our children by censoring movies. "This idea is utterly foreign to this nation's traditions and all of human history proves it false," he said. Mosher said that if the bill had been approved by the Senate it would have been "only because of pressure." He said a two-year cooling-off period "is all to the good," and that the comic book bill "really has teeth in it." "Use that weapon and you'll get much better results than censorship will ever produce in cleaning out the really raw films."

R. M. Eyman state director of education and chief film censor, announced the virtual disbanding of the Division of Film Censorship. He said that most of the eight censorship division employes have been transferred to the department's surplus property division, at least for the month of July. The new biennial budget has no provision for the censorship division. "After Aug. 1, I don't know what we will do," said Eyman, "some of the employes may have to go." The audio-visual division will be moved to the censorship quarters. Equipment, including CinemaScope facilities installed last year, will remain in the screening room, Eyman said.

Cleveland

Mrs. Rose Bialorucki, who, with her late husband, Henry, built the 1400-seat Ohio, Toledo, died suddenly at 71. The theatre is now operated by her son, Edwin. For several years, Jack O'Connell ran it under lease. Also surviving Mrs. Bialorucki are a daughter and two other sons. . . . Herbert Horstemeier, buyer-booker for independent theatres, attended the annual Shrine convention in Chicago.

Drive-In Suit Loses Several Defendants

CLEVELAND—All of the defendants except James J. Barton and Emma T. Barton, have been dismissed as parties to the suit recently filed in Common Pleas Court by Jack L. Gertz, John Stuart Cangney, and John M. Urbansky, charging violation of a contract to build a drive-in on Pearl Road in Middleburg Heights.

The motion filed to dismiss as defendants the Capital Bank of Cleveland, Berlo Vending Company, Herbert Ochs, and Ben L. Ogron was granted by Common Pleas Judge Joseph Artl.

Gertz, Cangney and Urbansky based their claim of contract violation and $500,000 damages on a contract entered into on Sept. 14, 1949, with James J. and Emma T. Barton, in which Barton was to furnish the property and the other three parties to it were to finance the construction. They were to own equal shares in the corporation to be formed to complete the project.

The brief pointed out the contract under dispute was signed only by James J. Barton and Emma T. Barton, and that they are the only parties to the agreement which is the subject of this action. Attorney Gnau contends that the others "were included as defendants solely for the purpose of embarrassing and interfering with them in the transaction of legitimate business which has nothing to do with whether or not the plaintiffs have a cause of action against the parties to the contract which is the predicate for their claim." The theatre will open on schedule.

Four City Premiere Launches "Laramie"

DALLAS—The giant four-city Texas premiere festival for Columbia's "The Man From Laramie" hit here after its first two big openings in San Antonio and Houston. Star Jimmy Stewart and the rest of the caravan arrived by chartered plane after a full day of activity in Houston.

Press breakfasts, western style parades in mid-city, and Kleig-lighted evening openings with stage appearances were the big doings for the world premiere at the Majestic, San Antonio, and the opening at the showcase of the same name in Houston. Openings at the Majestic, here, and the Worth, Fort Worth, wound up the festival.

Among the film industry figures present were Interstate's Robert J. O'Donnell and Raymond Willie; two Columbia vice-presidents, A. Montague, general sales manager, and Paul N. Lazarus, Jr., in charge of advertising and publicity; and William Goetz, producer of "The Man From Laramie," first picture from his organization for Columbia release.

Joining Stewart for the four-city trek was his fellow cast member, Donald Crisp. Columbia also sent in four of its loveliest young stars, Kathryn Grant, Lucy Marlow, Cleo Moore, and Connie Towers, to act both as advance "men" and to appear with the film's stars. Several effective tieups were used.

This miniature aircraft carrier, "Forrestal, Jr.," 38 feet long and 12 feet high, on wheels, was built by Navy personnel and is an exact duplicate of the original "Forrestal." It was stationed recently at Court Square, right in the heart of downtown Memphis, with placards calling attention to the opening of Republic's "The Eternal Sea," Plaza, and then moved to the theatre for the run of the film. Republic's Memphis branch manager Nat Wyse and A. J. Cianciolo, manager, Plaza, worked with Commander Coy, Public Information Officer in Memphis on the stunt.

Drive-In Approval Starts Political Hassle

DETROIT—A lenghty political fight over the establishment of drive-ins in Warren Township is being aired in Macomb County Circuit Court.

Attorney Charles H. Earl, representing a group of township residents, is seeking an injunction to halt construction of a million-dollar drive-in at Van Dyke and Fourteen Mile Road, outside of Detroit, by Elliott Cohen, Cohen Theatres. Approval for the theatre was a victory for two township trustees, Louis Kelsey and Paul Puzzuoli.

Drive-in theatres were prohibited by ordinance in Warren Township in 1952. Early this spring, the Virginia Park Apartments Company, Inc., moved to get approval for a proposed theatre, and they obtained a 46-acre tract of industrially-zoned property. The firm retained Howard R. Carroll, former state representative who is now a partner of Edward Gallagher, township attorney. They went first to the planning commission, which recommended to the township board that the prohibition against drive-ins be lifted, subject to the commission's approval; three times Kelsey and Puzzuoli attempted to lift the prohibition, and each time they were defeated, four to three.

Finally, at a special meeting May 31, they moved to lift the restriction and give the planning commission the required authority. Clerk Hildegarde M. Lowe, who had voted against them previously, voted with them and the motion carried; the planning commission gave quick approval, and construction began. Mrs. Lowe said she changed her vote because she was in favor of the planning commission having control over the theatre question.

Supervisor Arthur J. Miller said most of the board had felt that the property should be kept for industrial use because of its high tax potential. Miller, along with treasurer William A. Shaw and trustee John J. Dunn, Sr., fought the change. Earl's suit charges that the township board refused to inform interested parties when the matter was up for discussion; that the action of the planning commission was "arbitrary, unconstitutional, unlawful, and unreasonable," and that the township board acted "unlawfully" in delegating authority over drive-ins to the planning commission. He is asking that the board's actions be voided and construction of the theatre enjoined. The hearing will be before Circuit Judge James E. Spier.

Sidney B. Lust, Pioneer Exhibitor, Dies At 71

WASHINGTON—Sidney B. Lust, theatre circuit owner here and in Maryland, died unexpectedly of a heart attack at his summer home at Dare Beach, Md.

Lust, who would have been 71 the day after his death, started in show business more than 50 years ago as a stagehand in New York City. He came from his native city in 1914 as a partner with Warner Brothers in opening their local film exchange. A year or so later he went into business for himself, buying, distributing, and selling motion picture films for independent producers in West Virginia, Maryland, Delaware, Virginia, and the District of Columbia.

In the early 1920's he leased his first theatre, and when he died he was operating 11, including three drive-ins. They were in Allen, Bethesda, Cheverly, Hyattsville, Kaywood, Marlboro, Milo, Viers Mill, Beltsville Drive-In, Hampton Drive-In, and Hillside Drive-In. He was also actively engaged in real estate.

For the last 20 years he had sponsored an Easter Egg Hunt in Magruder Park, Hyattesville, Md., and also held toy and canned food matinees at Christmas time in each of his theatres. He also provided the use of his theatre for many charity and civic drives.

Lust was past chief barker of Variety Club and a director of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America and the Metropolitan Police Boys Club. He was also a member of Motion Picture Pioneers. He was active in many groups to combat juvenile delinquency, had been chairman of several war bond campaigns, and was a sportsman.

Survivors are his widow and a son, Bernard, both partners in his theatre business, a daughter, and four grandchildren.

Pittsburgh Drive-Ins Launch Hospital Drive

PITTSBURGH—The Pittsburgh area drive-ins jumped the gun on the Will Rogers Hospital audience collection, and patrons of 14 ozoners contributed $2400, the result of a three-day weekend collection, June 24 through 26. The drive was sparked by four energetic leaders, distributor chairman Larry Siedleman, Republic branch manager, exhibitor chairman Harry Hendel, Allied MPTOA, and drive-in chairman Jack Judd, Columbia branch manager, as well as national exhibitor chairman M. A. Silver, Stanley Warner zone manager.

A comprehensive "patron-education" program preceded the collection, featuring a specially written screen trailer and a hard-selling herald, both explaining the purpose of the Will Rogers Hospital, and outlining the important tuberculosis research work being done. Audience reaction was reported excellent, and volunteer workers from the exchanges, from manager down, passed the coin boxes.

Progress Continues

When the industry went through a violent and sudden period of progress in projection and sound systems almost three years ago, there were some who said that the barrel was emptied too quickly, and that there was nothing new left to be developed. As it is with most of the predictions of the perpetual pessimist, this fear was completely unfounded.

Within the last few weeks reports have come out describing a new electronic lens system of photography that holds out promise of an interesting new addition to the wide screen form of film presentation. Another recent announcement describes an entirely new and novel method of film presentation using a screen shaped in a complete 360 degree circle. Although it does not yet have an immediate use in commercial motion picture houses, it does indicate new things to come.

Not completely new, but more positive proof that the technological arm of the film industry has definitely not gone back into its former Rip Van Winkle role, is the Todd-AO system, which is scheduled to be introduced next September. The development of the horizontal form of VistaVision is still another recent entry.

However, this continued progress is, happily, not confined only to complete new systems. In this issue, for instance, there are reports about a device to prevent film buckling, new integrated optical and magnetic sound systems, a new projector and arc lamp. It would be just as simple to point out similar advances reported in last month's issue and the one before.

As an exhibitor, naturally your reaction to this progress is, what will it mean to me? There seems to be little doubt that it will mean continued and increased interest on the part of the public in the motion picture industry, which in turn means continued and increased attendance. And when the public comes to see the improvements, they will be treated to fine films presented in a manner that is far more exciting and far more interesting than anything any other mass entertainment medium can offer.

Although there is still quite a bit of time left, it could do no harm to remind the reader that he will be able to get first hand information about the new equipment and developments at the two conventions and trade shows which will be held this Fall.

The old complaint from some production quarters that they were restricted in what they put on film because the production techniques were limited by the reproduction techniques, no longer is valid. It is our belief that it never again will be heard as an argument. The art of reproducing sound and sight on film has caught up with the art of film making, and the news from the laboratories, manufacturers, studios, and circuits guarantees that the situation will be permanent.

WATER-COOLED CARBON CONTACTS

as optional equipment

- 18″ f 1.7 or 16-1/2″ f 1.9 reflector.
- Readily adaptable to all modern screen presentation techniques.
- Burn a choice of four carbon trims (9, 10, or 11 mm regular or 10mm Hitex.)
- Correct amperage selection by a single control.
- Long-life positive carbon contacts.
- Ventilated reflector and reflector frame.
- Reflect-O-Heat unit reduces heat at the aperture. Removable holder cooled by blower.
- The Automatic Crater Positioning Control System insures that both carbons are so fed as to maintain a correct arc gap length and to keep the position of the positive crater at the exact focal point of the reflector. Thus, the screen light is always of the same color, without variations from white to either blue or brown.
- The arc is stabilized by a stream of air which maintains a prescribed system of ventilation of the area surrounding the arc. This air jet prevents the hot tail flame of the arc from reaching the reflector, supplies enough oxygen so that no black soot is produced, and keeps white soot from collecting on the reflector in such quantity as to absorb heat which would cause breakage.
- Unit construction permits easy removal of elements for inspection in servicing.

Patron Services and Crowd Control Should Be Given Serious Consideration When

DECORATING THE LOUNGE

By BARCLAY ADAMS

Executive Director, American Society of Interior Design

RADICAL changes in theatre design and decoration currently are taking place. Theatres are being designed today with patron satisfaction and comfort as the dominant theme of their planning, a trend that especially is marked in the luxurious waiting space provided by commodious lounges of contemporary design and appointments.

Whether new or remodeled, whether intimate art theatre, center city palace, or neighborhood house flanked by suburban shopping district stores, modern theatre construction is demonstrating an acute recognition of the boxoffice importance of optimum ease and pleasant surroundings for patrons. As never before, theatres are being built with a purpose.

Demand Luxury

Conditioned, no doubt, by television viewing in the relaxed atmosphere of their homes, today's motion picture theatre patrons demand the utmost in comfort and enjoyable surroundings, created by well planned design. Profit-minded management is recognizing this important trend in public taste and recreation pattern, a development of the last half dozen years. It realizes that the great majority of today's patrons insist on waiting until a show starts anew, rather than be seated in the auditorium during a picture.

Sumptuous lounges are being installed to meet this special, sharply defined need for catering to the comfort and mood of a waiting public, and to help offset competition from other forms of entertainment. New decorative media and some interesting new uses of long-established materials are being utilized to provide comfort and beauty that function with a maximum of efficiency, yet keep maintenance and replacement costs at the lowest possible minimum.

Since the lounge, in comparison with other parts of the theatre, such as the auditorium, is constantly lighted, unusual and eye-pleasing treatments of its facilities are of major importance. Real opportunity for tasteful use of color and design is offered. Walls, ceiling, floor, draperies, seating and lighting effects must be correlated for greatest attractiveness and functionalism.

Use Of Color

Leading specialists in theatre design and decoration agree that color, properly used, is one of the greatest factors in creating an atmosphere of relaxation in theatre lounges. A feeling of grace and luxury, of freshness and pleasure can be induced by tasteful use of color, they say. Most important of all, perhaps, skillful handling of decorative color can help put the audience in a mood to enjoy the entertainment they are buying.

Sets The Mood

Color can help maintain the atmosphere of intimacy desirable in the small art-type house, which usually operates on a long run policy. It can give great glamour to the big and spectacular midtown motion picture palace. In neighborhood houses its value in creating a friendly air without sacrifice of prestige or importance cannot be overestimated.

A famous interior decorator, who has done extensive psychological research on the emotional effects of different colors on human beings, says he is convinced that color profoundly affects their emotions and unconsciously shapes their attitudes.

A drab decorative ensemble, he warns, has a depressing emotional effect, tending to make people depressed or resistant. Conversely, a light, airy, colorful decor was a cheerful, relaxing effect, inducing an attitude of receptivity.

Modern decoration employs color-dynamic principles, this authority says. This means the use of a light or dark color value on one lounge wall as accent for the color of the other three walls, or using sharply contrasting, but harmonious, colors in combination with each other.

Floor Decoration Important

The modern theory is that the decorative plans for any interior should begin with a decision regarding the material and color of the floor. The right floor covering for a theatre lounge must meet a number of definite and exacting requirements. Its color must be pleasing, the floor must be easy and restful to walk on, it must be resistant to slipping, with a non-porous and perfectly smooth surface to shed dirt, resist stains, be easy to clean and inexpensive to maintain. Because of its use by many persons, in all kinds and degrees of weather, the floor must be extremely durable.

PHYSICAL THEATRE

Vol. 10, No. 8 July 20, 1955

Gay and brilliant colors are used to give an air of sophistication and opulence to large midtown motion picture palaces, where a highly dramatic atmosphere seems most desirable as background for colossal stage productions and wide screen or first run presentations. Here, too, patron comfort and pleasure are adequately achieved only through skillful planning of furnishings in combinations contrived for greatest effectiveness.

Exciting red is an obvious first choice as key color for a big center city theatre decor, since most people associate all shades of red with activity and stimulation. Crisp Cardinal red, carnelian, deep Toledo red, or dark-toned quarry red combine beautifully with shades of tan or beige, citron yellow, gold, off-white, orange and green.

The daily wear and tear on floors caused by heavy traffic, and the marring and soiling of wall finishes, whether plaster, paint or wallpaper, add up to regular renewal or replacement. This especially is true in theatre lounges. Inevitably greasy popcorn or peanuts, sticky candy or other refreshments, are ground underfoot and careless fingers stain the walls.

Wall And Floor Coverings

For walls of permanent beauty, smart coloring and long life, which require little upkeep and eliminate the need for regular redecoration, theatre owners more and more are using asphalt vinyl, rubber or cork tile for wall coverings as well as floors. Available in a wide range of plain and marbleized colors, plus a wide range of decorative insets which give unlimited design possibilities in eye-catching motifs, directional signs and traffic lanes, these resilient tiles give low cost colorful beauty and modern efficiency to theatres.

The Roxy, Kansas City, with seating capacity for approximately 1,000 persons, installed vinyl tile in front of the concession stand and special grease-proof asphalt tiles, which are three-sixteenths of an inch thick, behind the stand. Adjacent to the lounge, 720 square feet of asphalt tiles were used on rest room walls and 320 square feet on the floors, choosing a combination of Rouge Acajou red and Sicilian blue with black feature strips for one, and Cippolino dark green and Gardenia light green with a floor of Grammont light brown for the other, with double black feature strips and black base.

Unusual and attractive, the Valencis, Jamaica, New York, has a lounge that is a reproduction of the great hall of a medieval Spanish castle.

Smart color decors for large center city theatre lounges are Napoleon gray asphalt tile walls, if the room is below grade, or cool looking green and white marbleized white ivy vinyl tile, underscored by floor tiles of bright Rouge Acajou red asphalt, Chinese red vinyl or Rosso DiLevanto red rubber tiles. Black or red borders and feature strips add drama to the decoration and bold patterned or wide striped draperies of red, gray, beige and black, with light gray furniture upholstered in deep red, provide an inviting ensemble.

natural cork tile tones, which range from light oak to dark walnut, make ideal wall and floor treatment for distinguished theatres of every size and type. Restful to the eyes and sound absorbent, it provides a subtle background for modern drapery fabric and smart decorator colors.

Nature's color, green, is an excellent color for the decorative ensemble of a neighborhood theatre which caters to the entire family. Pastel green walls and leaf green woodwork accented with leaf green printed draperies, and natural blond wood lounge furnishing upholstered in Toledo red fabric may be underlined with a floor of Greek Skyros beige tile with a modern design linear pattern of Cardinal red or Aspen green stripes.

Owners of suburban or neighborhood theatres have come to regard the lounges as the living rooms of their houses, and are making them more attractive by modernization and redecoration, Management of the Century Theatres Circuit, a chain of 35 neighborhood theatres with a combined seating capacity of approximately 50,000 in Brooklyn, Queens, and Long Island localities is carrying out an extensive program designed to make these theatres more attractive to patrons.

New mirrors, upholstery, floor coverings and modern lighting fixtures have been installed and particular attention has been given to making the lounges comfortable and pleasant. By using bright colors for decoration of lounges an air of gaiety is created with promise of entertainment in the theatre's program.

Shades of blue, from navy to sky blue, are a good choice for walls and ceiling in a conservative theatre lounge, with asphalt tile flooring in Napoleon gray and Travertine gray and furnishings upholstered in deep green, pewter gray or citron red. Accessory notes of off-white, soft pinks, brown, tan, or terra cotta may be used to accent the decor.

Within one year from date of factory shipment, replacement is made with no charge; within 2 years, at 33⅓% of replacement price; within 3 years, at 66⅔% of replacement price.

Efficient operation of each type and rating of projection arc necessitates a rectifier specifically engineered to its particular requirements. That is why Strong manufactures a complete line of rectifiers, which includes one for every type of lamp. Every Strong rectifier assures smooth output current, long life, low operating temperature, and flexibility in control. Transformer taps provide adjustment to compensate for supply voltage variations through a range of 10% above or 10% below the rated A. C. input voltage throughout the output rating range. Fine taps on the primary are connected to an 8-point external manually controlled switch which permits output adjustment while the arc is burning and without the necessity of reconnecting wires.

Restroom Remodeling Can Be Simple and Inexpensive If You

Tile It Yourself

BIG things are happening in plastic wall tile, and it's all for the good insofar as theatres are concerned.

Three significant developments have created unprecedented interest in plastic wall tile:

1. Quality of both plastic tiles and mastic cement has been improved greatly in recent months;

2. New and widely varied colors are now being made available;

3. Innumerable sizes and shapes are available in the quality tile lines on the market.

Most important, many concerns including neighborhood houses, have discovered that they can "Do-it-themselves" with plastic wall tile.

The "Do-it-yourself" trend in plastic wall tile has been fantastic, mainly because installation is so easy to do.

Installation Easy

It can be done commercially by anyone who has a little spare time. The important thing, just as in the case of doing it at home, is to select a quality plastic wall tile that will stay looking good.

For instance, tile made of heavy gauge Styron will not peel, chip or craze, and will last a life-time. Be sure that the tile you buy equals or exceeds the standards for thickness of plastic.

The Tilemaster Corporation, Chicago, one of the largest manufacturers of plastic wall tile, has just introduced an eight and one-half-inch square tile in six pearlescent colors and in six solid colors. The large size tile offers an opportunity for more luxurious decorative planning. If you want a wider range of colors, Tilemaster has 40 choices in the four-and-one-quarter-inch size.

Things To Look For

There are a number of things to look for in making sure that you are buying a quality plastic wall tile that can stand up under heavy duty usage. For example, look for tile with arched-construction which prevents dishing-in or cupping. You can tell if a tile has the desired arched-construction by placing a straight stick across the top of the tile. You should be able to see three-dimensional depth and the all-over rounded contour of the tile.

Also, look at the back side of the individual tile for a ribbed construction that will effectively seal in the mastic which holds the tile to the wall. This is especially important for installation in shower stalls, kitchens, powder rooms, utility room walls or wherever it is possible for water to seep behind the tile. A mastic-seal rib will help lock the tile to the wall and at the same time seal out the water.

You will find it easier and more economical to add a decorative trim and "finishing touches" if your plastic wall tile comes with molded tile pieces for all of the sizes, shapes for corners, and all of the special requirements resulting from new concepts of interior design. With the molded tile pieces, the need for bending tile or for metal or rubber substitutes is eliminated.

Plastic Wall Tile Kit

You will be wise and money ahead if you use plastic wall tile that comes with a complete "do-it-yourself" kit. Such a kit should include a level and rule, a coping saw, chalk, a notched trowel, a scraper, a chalk line, and, of course, a well written and well illustrated instruction book. Your dealer can also rent you heavy duty tools that can speed the installation.

Before you can order your tile, you

Putting on the base tile is fairly simple. The mastic cement is spread on the bottom row of field tile and the base is merely overlayed.

Integrated Sound Systems Announced By NTS

NEW YORK—The new XL-500 series of Simplex XL Sound Systems are designed especially for the large number of existing theatres with optical sound systems, and for new theatre installations desiring to install magnetic stereophonic sound, it was announced by National Theatre Supply.

These systems provide regular optical operations from the existing optical sound heads without additional cost or auxiliary equipment, it is claimed. Using only the existing optical sound heads and exciter lamp power supply, the optical sound components are completely replaced by the new system. In the case of a four channel stereophonic sound installation the existing power amplifier may be used if desired.

In the new Simplex XL-500 systems both optical and magnetic controls have been integrated so that a single sound changeover box at each station provides for both stereo and regular changeover thereby eliminating an undesirable duplicity of optical and magnetic sound changeover controls on the front wall, it is said.

A valuable feature of the new system, according to NTS, is the unique preselector switch. System operation is changed automatically when the sound changeover button is depressed. Magnetic stereo sound, regular optical sound or non-sync may be pre-selected while the show is running. After the pre-selector switch has been set with a feature magnetic stereo sound print running on projector number one it is only necessary to operate the sound changeover to bring in an optical recorded print of projector number two.

Another feature of the new system is a conveniently located emergency selector switch which will provide for standby operation under all conditions. If necessary, stereo sound from the center channel can be mixed into the left and right channels. Stereo sound from the left and right channels can be mixed into the center channel only. The same selector switch will also permit playing regular optical sound through all three power amplifier channels and backstage speakers.

Built-in facilities for the non-sync input are also provided for. During the last reel of the show the system preselector switch is set to "Non-Sync" and changeover to non-sync is accomplished by merely a press of the changeover button at the end of the reel.

The same volume control is used for both regular optical and magnetic stereophonic sound. A separate volume control is used for the fourth channel. The balancing of the optical and magnetic systems has also been provided for.

All operating controls are conveniently located on the front wall of the projection room, according to NTS.

Provisions have been made for the addition of third projector equipment, either magnetic stereo and/or regular optical.

Plug-in optical and magnetic preamplifiers provide for easy replacement and service. The new packaging of individual major system components requires a minimum of wall space for mounting, and insures the utmost in flexibility and ease of adaption to any new sound recording system which may be forthcoming in the future.

Improved Projection Equipment From RCA

CAMDEN, N. J.—A new type of wide-screen lamp system which generates the brilliance necessary for proper lighting of theatre screens having widths greater than 80 feet has been announced by the engineering products division, Radio Corporation of America.

mauve gray woodwork, furnished in bleached wood with Toledo red or leaf green upholstery, could be highlighted with an asphalt tile floor in veined Carnerlian or Travertine gray.

A main floor or mezzanine lounge can be attractively decorated by using a vinyl tile floor or gay pink with arresting rouge inserts, lemon yellow walls and a white acoustical tile ceiling, set off by vari-colored drapes and bright red accents.

Brown tile relieved with wide strips of pale beige tile may be used for the floor with one gray-green wall and three sand-yellow walls and a white acoustical tile ceiling. Drapes with alternating wide stripes of blue-green, beige, gray and black, and light gray wood furniture upholstered in deep red would complete this attractive decor.

Small lounges can be given a more spacious look by the use of light colors; darker colors will make large lounges seem more intimate. Greens and blues are cool looking colors that give a restful, relaxed air, while shades of red, yellow and pink make artificially lighted lounges appear warmer and friendlier and have a stimulating effect on patrons.

Correction

In the article, "New Projection Lenses," written by Mr. John R. Miles and appearing in the June 22 issue of PHYSICAL THEATRE, the captions accompanying the two illustrations used read, "Figure III shows the double Gauss type of projection lens. This type of lens has eight air-glass surfaces that decrease the light in the center but increases the light on the edges of the field. Figure IV shows the construction of the new Super Hilux series of motion picture projection lenses."

Mr. Miles, in a letter, suggests that the following information be added to avoid any confusion, "The new Super Hilux has larger edge bundle, and thus greater illumination on the edge of the screen than the double Gauss. This is brought out to some extent by the illustration itself (Fig. IV) showing the two edge bundle as 1.3 inches for the double Gauss and 1.56 for the Super Hilux."

Rug Pile Lifter

A new rug pile lifter vacuum for use in cleaning heavily used rugs, as would be the case in theatres, is available from the Hild Floor Machine Company. This newly designed machine is said to raise matted pile and loosen buried, caked dirt, thereby returning rugs and carpets to their full beauty.

This machine is claimed to be particularly adapted to preparing carpets for shampooing. If used before shampooing, it will insure the operator of a brighter cleaner rug when finished with scrubbing and drying, according to the manufacturer.

This newly designed rug pile lifter vacuum is capable of cleaning heavily used rugs and carpets, and can be transported like a suitcase.

The rug pile lifter vacuum is lightweight, and has an easily detachable handle. The base casting is made of magnesium with a disappearing handle at the side of the casting which permits the user to carry the machine like a suitcase. The wide wheels and casters have nonmarking, neoprene rubber treads. The rear caster can be raised or lowered to increase or decrease the pressure of the nylon brush at the forward end of the machine. It is claimed that tests have shown that the bristles of this six-section, nylon brush have a life of 3,000 hours.

Auto Umbrella

One of the problems that faces an outdoor theatre is rain. A sharp drop in attendance develops in rainy weather, because it is usually necessary for patrons to keep their engines going in order to use their windshield wipers. This inconvenience, plus the use of gas and batteries, and the possible overheating of engines, will keep patrons away.

A possible solution to this problem is the Sightmaster Rain-Visor being offered by the Sightmaster Corporation. It is made of durable vinyl plastic and when not needed can be rolled up conveniently for storage in the car trunk, it is said. The size of the Rain-Visor is 48 inches long and 18 inches wide. To make it universal, two elastic straps with clamps on the ends are furnished so that it is adjustable for attachment to the rain gutter of any car. There are also suction cup attachments that fit to the base of the windshield.

Air Freshener

The Williams Chemical Company recently announced a new fan-operated air freshener which they guarantee will neutralize unwanted odors. According to the manufacturer, this new unit will deodorize areas up to 7,500 cubic feet, and is suggested for use in rest rooms and any other areas in indoor and outdoor theatres where patrons may be subjected to unpleasant odors.

In neutralizing objectionable odors, the Wilco Air Freshener replaces them with such fragrances as spice, pine, floral bouquets, or cedar. It is claimed that the operating costs, on a 24 hour basis, amounts to only a few cents per month.

This fan-operated air freshener is said to be capable of deodorizing areas up to 7,500 cubic feet, and could be used in theatre rest rooms.

It operates simply by plugging into any a.c. electric outlet.

16mm Anamorphic Lens

A new anamorphic 16mm. lens that fits all projectors is now in production by Vidoscope, it was announced by company president Walter Futter.

The new lens, which is said to be designed exactly like the company's Vidoscope 35mm. anarmorphic lens, is equipped with screw mountings and attaches without brackets to 16mm. professional and amateur projection machines. It is claimed that it is unnecessary to purchase new objective lenses.

Futter stated that the lens improves picture clarity, eliminates distortion and can be used with any lens in a 16mm. projector. It fits the Victor, Ampro, RCA, Natco, Formay, Bell & Howell, Keystone, Revere and others.

A special adaptor is available for attaching the lens to Jan or Bell & Howell professional projectors. The company also supplies adaptors for their regular 35mm. lens so that it can be used with the Jan and Bell & Howell 16mm. professional type projectors. This, it is claimed, permits wide screen viewing in limited throw areas.

The Vidoscope new 16mm anamorphic lens can be used on any 16mm projector, and is said to improve picture clarity and reduce distortion.

Film Buckling Problem Solved By MGM

HOLLYWOOD—Development of a technical advancement to overcome what has been considered one of the exhibitors' greatest projection problems, has been accomplished by MGM technical research, according to an announcement by E. J. Mannix, studio general manager.

"Buckling" of film, creating erratic focus changes and sometimes breaking of film, can now be eliminated, it was stated, through the inventiveness of Merle Chamberlin, MGM studio projection head.

This problem, caused by the drying out of film under the heat of projection lamps, has been increased, it was said, because of the added amperage required for wide screen exhibition, especially in drive-in theatres.

Chamberlin's development is an automatic vaporizer, added to the film rewind cabinet, maintaining the uniform moisture required for trouble-free projection. It has been equipped experimentally in a number of theatres with successful results, it was reported.

The research and development was conducted under direction of Douglas Shearer, head of the sound division at the studio, and will be detailed to the industry through the Motion Picture Research Council, International Projectionists' Union, and technical journals of the trade.

Internat'l Cinema Standards Group Votes on 14 Proposals

NEW YORK—Cinematographers voted on 14 proposals which will further international exchange of film products.

More than 40 delegates from Russia, Germany, France, Belgium, Czechoslovakia, Italy, the United Kingdom, Sweden and the United States, attended the five-day meeting in Stockholm on cinematography. The meetings were sponsored by the International Organization for Standardization.

A U.S. proposal for the cutting and perforating of 35mm. film for use in CinemaScope was adopted.

Safety film definition and methods of testing were also agreed upon by the delegates. An International procedure for marking safety film was launched after a three-day study of methods used.

A committee was authorized to draft an international standard on multilingual sound tracks to cover one present optical and two new magnetic tracks on a single standard release print.

Tile It Yourself

must measure the restroom, or other areas in the theatre to be tiled. Merely measure the wall distance around the room and multiply this by the desired height of tile on the wall, usually five feet. Deduct from this, large openings such as windows and doors. Add five per cent for waste in cutting. Measure, in running feet, around the room the amount of feet that will be needed. Your dealer can advise you just how much tile to order.

Here is another tip: Don't skimp on liberal use of mastic. Mastic cement will usually cover from 35 to 40 square feet per gallon.

Preparing The Walls

The next thing to do is to prepare the walls. Remove everything that is loose or can become loose, such as wallpaper, calcimine, linoleum, loose or flaky paint, loose or rotten plaster. Thoroughly wash off grease or oils. Patch all holes with patching plaster or plaster board. Make walls as smooth as possible by scraping or filling in. Remember, a tile installation is only as smooth as the wall under it.

Do It Yourself

Now you are ready to go to work and here is what you do:

1. Draw a level line, using level and rule, clear around the room at the desired height. In figuring height, be sure to leave not less than a half tile cut over tubs, lavatories, etc.

2. Spread the mastic downward with a wavy motion, using a notched trowel. Hold the trowel at right angles to the wall and spread enough mastic for about three hours tiling. Do not let exposed mastic harden on the wall.

3. Set the half-tile cap (or bullnose cap) first along the level line. Plan tiling to avoid narrow cuts in the corners, if possible. Where there is an outcorner, start setting your tiles there. By snapping the tile into place carefully, a neat, clean job is possible with a minimum of mastic on the tile face. Press the tile firmly at the center and along the edges to embed it firmly into the mastic. Do not overlap tile edges or allow wide, unsightly spaces between tile.

4. Where tiles meet in inside corners, cut the tile as carefully as possible to butt closely against each other and fill in openings with mastic.

5. For circular cuts around pipes, etc., use a coping saw.

Base tile goes up easily by merely buttering the tile and overlaying it over the bottom row of field tile which should come to about two inches from the floor.

Excess mastic should be cleaned off every few square feet as the job progresses, with a tile cleaner. In about a week or 10 days, the tile should be washed with soap and water or a detergent. Don't use an abrasive.

If you want to create special designs using different colored tiles, work out your plans from the very beginning. Many of the manufacturers have attractive booklets that illustrate many different colors, ideas and patterns.

National Theatres' Cine-Miracle Process Unveiled

Los Angeles—Elmer C. Rhoden, president of National Theatres, Inc., recently announced the completion of working arrangements with the Smith-Dieterich Corporation of New York City for the development from basic patents of a new electronic lens system of photography, and the intention of National Theatres to produce a motion picture with the new technique.

Cine-Miracle, as the new photographic technique has been named, will permit the simultaneous photography of three strips of film and their meshing or blending as if it were one continuous film with no joining lines, Rhoden pointed out.

Manufacture of cameras for use in motion picture production has already begun under the guidance of engineers and optics consultants of Smith-Dieterich, and it is expected that they will be available for filming entertainment features within six months, Rhoden told newsmen at a press conference following a demonstration of projection from an experimental three projector booth in the Melrose Theatre here.

Preliminary discussions have already been entered into by Rhoden with producers familiar with the requirements of three panel motion picture presentation.

"Cine-Miracle will make possible two great advances in wide screen photography," Rhoden said, "It suppresses the distracting joining line that has characterized the first picture of this kind, and it also overcomes the disturbing parallax which has frequently seemed to make rivers run uphill in pictures."

Rhoden indicated National Theatres' plans to push the electronic lens development so as to take advantage of the compact projection booth it has also created for the housing of three projection machines in one booth and the simultaneous projection of three strip film on a large curved three panel screen without horizontal or vertical distortion. The booth and screen are so constructed as to be efficiently and economically transported from theatre to theatre.

"The booth that has been developed after two and one-half years of experimentation by R. H. McCullough, National's technical director, will enable three strip motion pictures to be shown practically in almost any theatre," Rhoden pointed out. "It will save many seats that must now be removed for current three strip pictures, and it will be more economical in operation."

McCullough, in commenting on the new system, told the press:

"This system is based upon studies revealing that no wide screen process, no matter how large the negative or positive may be, can ever achieve the illusion of participation comparable to the triple camera and projection vision."

Technical Data

This new triple camera unit produces an uninterrupted, optically perfect, composite picture, it is claimed.

The Smith-Dieterich equipment eliminates mismatch caused by the parallax factor now inherent in existing systems and the matching lines are not visible on the three panel projection screen.

Vignetting of the overlaps, which combines the triple images, is taken care of in the camera. The Smith Dieterich three-panel photography is projected with projectors which are free from any special vignetting attachments.

Cine-Miracle uses a new type three-projector system with three projectors installed in one projection room, which operate simultaneously, projecting a three-panel picture on a large curved screen without a horizontal or vertical distortion.

This equipment includes special lenses, mirrors and vignetting devices which are covered by patent applications. The projection room housing this equipment is installed at the center of the rear of the auditorium. The equipment in this room includes three special built, interlocked, six-sprocket, pull down projectors, one standard projector rectifiers, rewind and film storage equipment, projection mirrors, stereophonic sound reproducer and amplifier equipment, electric switching and special relay equipment.

The stereophonic sound reproducer is electrically interlocked with the three projectors and hi fidelity sound is reproduced from a separate film with seven sound tracks. There are five sets of speakers behind the projection screen, and eight auditorium speakers.

Circarama Introduces Films In The Round

Hollywood—An advanced motion picture development, Circarama, consisting of a continuous image focused on a 360 degree screen, was to be introduced at Disneyland Park on July 17 by American Motors Corporation, according to George Romney, president.

Contracts for the completion of the technical work on Circarama have been signed by the Detroit automobile and appliance manufacturer.

Circarama is planned as a free attraction in American Motors' exhibit in the Tomorrowland area of Walt Disney's amusement park, at Anaheim, Calif., 22 miles south of downtown Los Angeles.

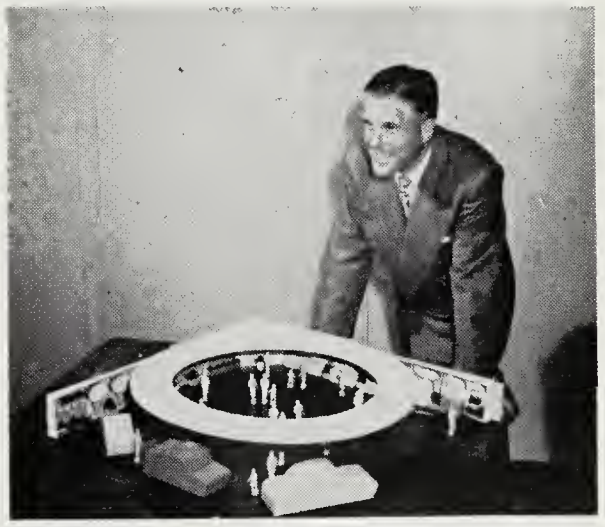
A new step forward in the motion picture art, Circarama consists of a synchronized battery of Eastman 16mm. Model 25 projectors which simultaneously focus color movies on 11 individual screens arranged in a complete circle.

Circarama constitutes the first known application of sound motion pictures to the circular screen. Spectators, standing in the middle of a specially built theatre, view the continuous action on an overhead screen eight feet high and 40 feet in diameter, which completely encircles the audience. The new method of presentation, therefore, is inverse to the Egyptian and early Greek "theatre in the round" developed 4,000 years ago and later superseded by the proscenium arrangement for dramatic presentation. The Circarama screen built in Hollywood for American Motors has no counterpart in the entire history of drama, it is claimed.

In actual operation, a series of images appear on Circarama screen No. 1 and move consecultively to the adjoining screen until they reach screen No. 11, when they give way to ensuing photographic frames, projected in sequence. This technique, therefore, not only provides the visual sensations that come through the recently introduced wide angle movie screens, but gives a completely new thrill by projecting dramatic action all around the theatre audience's heads, it was said.

Making of the Circarama motion picture film calls for a battery of 11 Cine-Kodak special movie cameras, joined together and synchronized.

The camera and projection devices required for Circarama represents the research work of technicians from the Disney Studios, Eastman Kodak Company and the Ralke Company, an Eastman Audio-visual dealer in Los Angeles.



George Romeny, President, American Motors, is seen with a scale model of Circarama. The system consists of 25 synchronized 16mm projectors which focus on 11 screens arranged in a circle.

A Pioneer Drive-In Goes Modern

By

Fifi Harding

A NEW concession stand and snack bar has been added to the Saco Maine Drive-In, owned by Eugene Boragine. This theatre was the first to be built in Maine, and Boragine believes it to be the second in New England. Built in 1937, it was erected one year after the opening of the Weymouth Drive-In, Weymouth, Mass., which is New England's first and the third outdoor theatre in the nation.

When Boragine took over the ownership in 1948, the theatre had space for only 275 cars. Each year he has added space and improvements until this season, when, with 600 cars, he added the new snack bar and concession building which was built in the center of the ramps. Prior to this expansion he had used a wooden building at the right side of the theatre. He is proud of his new building and spent a great deal of thought and consideration before he built it. A graduate of the Rhode Island School of Design, Boragine worked closely with the architect and contractors and added many a personal touch to the decor. He painted the attractive floral murals on the inside walls himself, and ordered the formica, lucite or stainless steel trimmings in the counter space. He is also proud of the corrugated glass partitions separating the ladies' lounge from the toilet section, an idea of his own.

The Saco theatre is on Route 1, between Saco and Portland and is situated in an attractive setting amid pine and spruce trees. Here Boragine used his ingenuity when he added a new picnic area this past season. He felled several trees to make space to install wooden benches and tables for family-style picnicing. This area is in the rear of the theatre near the playground and is centered in an attractive pine grove. It is conveniently near the new snack bar and has proved to be a drawing point for families.

The new projection booth with all new RCA equipment, is atop the concession building. The widened screen is 84 feet in width. Inside the building are two curved counter lanes for self-service style operation. The usual snacks are served, Pizzas (family style 60c pies), hot dogs, potato chips, popcorn, hot and cold drinks, ice cream, etc. Theatre Candy Company of Boston installed much of the equipment, including the Pizza ovens. A Manley Aristocrat popcorn machine was purchased this year also.

True knotty pine from Maine is used in the counters, all with formica tops. The picture below shows the cashier's cage, with room for two girls simultaneously. The floors are of asphalt and the ceilings of Solatax with a stainless steel ceiling over the working area. The partitions are of Lucite.

In the picture of the screen, it can be seen where Boragine has landscaped the area attractively with a trellis effect of rambler roses and planted Maine Blue spruces directly in front of the screen.

DRIVE-IN THEATRES

This view of the Scao Maine Drive-In (top) has been a familiar sight since 1937 when it first opened. The operator of the theatre recently remodeled and put in a modern concession snack bar (left). He also put in new projection equipment and a wide screen (right) to keep pace with progress made.

Cut Along Dotted Line

The A.R.A. Manufacturing Ca., Ft. Worth, Tex., is offering a drive-in air-conditioner that is made up of two tubes, one feeding cool air and the other pulling the stale air out of the automobile.

acting requirements of wide-screen drive-in theatre operations, the new RCA Dyn-Arc lamp provides up to 36 per cent greater light output than the RCA Wide-Arc system, according to A. J. Platt, manager, RCA Theatre Equipment Sales. The Dyn-Arc can be used with any type theatre projector designed for indoor or outdoor wide-screen or 3-D use, it is claimed.

The new lamp features an 18-inch f-1.64 reflector, Platt said, and can be used with either 10mm. and 11mm. carbons. Anticipating development of more advanced types of wide-screen projectors and projection lenses, the Dyn-Arc will accommodate even larger carbons at higher amperages.

The RCA Dyn-Arc lamp, when used with an f-1.9 projection lens, provides 15 per cent greater light output than the RCA Wide-Arc system, and 36 per cent greater output when used with an f-1.7 projection lens, Platt stated.

Other features of the Dyn-Arc lamp include a dichroic heat-reflecting glass with blower, an exhaust blower, water-cooled positive carbon, and sterling silver guides for the positive carbons. Approximately one pound of sterling is used in each lamp. An RCA water circulator operating directly from the arc voltage, is available for necessary cooling. The water circulator starts automatically when dc power is supplied to the arc lamp.

New Projector

A new motion picture film projector which provides double rear shutter, water-cooled film trap, and other features for operating quality, convenience, and safety was also announced recently by the RCA engineering products division.

The new projector, the RCA-200, is designed for both indoor and drive-in theatre use and replaces the RCA-100 type, according to Platt.

Water-cooled aperture-unit mechanisms are available to enable larger indoor and outdoor theatres to present a large picture screen and increased illumination, and still maintain a cool picture aperture and film trap.

Other features include: main and reverse shutters housed together in a single rear casing, but with the reverse shutter independently driven by its own drive gear, and four-inch lens mount.

MEMBER AUDIT BUREAU OF CIRCULATIONS

JULY 27, 1955

JUST AS TRUE IN JULY . . . AS IT WAS IN FEBRUARY

As EACH DAY seems to produce additional stories about the legal end of state and municipal censor boards that ruled on the "can see" and "can't see" of current movies over larger parts of the nation for many years, our editorial message of last Feb. 2 (THE END OF LOCAL CENSORSHIP BRINGS NEW RESPONSIBILITIES) seems to gather new importance and to warrant reemphasizing in our own columns just as it is being amplified in those of contemporaries.

To quote from those thoughts of nearly six months ago: There were actually two by-products of censorship about which few theatremen thought very much. First of all, the fact that each picture, whether feature or short, had been submitted for review to a legally constituted authority, and "Passed by the State Board of Censors" served as a defense against all criticism of the theatreman, whether based on race, color, or religious beliefs. Faced by individuals or by large or small organized groups, he could draw himself up with self-righteousness and state, "This picture has been judged and found acceptable by a legally constituted group chosen by your elected representatives. Why bring me your objections? Who am I to high-handedly place my judgment, or your judgment, above that of your legally appointed judges?" And he was legally right, too! What local constable, or police chief, would pit his judgment of what was or was not decent, or of what contributed to the delinquency of minors, or of a whole flock of other possibilities, against the established judgment of a qualified censor board? And, if he did, what local court would uphold him?

Secondly, and equally important in keeping in check the fringe producers and "fast buck" boys who play Johnny-one-note on sex and violence, has been the economic importance of most of the states where censorship applied. In the national distribution picture, it wasn't possible to overlook or forget states like New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Maryland, and Virginia, and still plan on dividends to the investors. And the producer never lived who was willing to go "dirty" and lose money doing it.

So, now that bureaucratic previewing and pre-censoring seems to be either entirely out-the-window or without the power to enforce its findings, the responsibility for what is shown on the screen of his theatre rests squarely on the shoulders of the theatre operator. With the removal of the bureau, local police and local courts, subject to the intimacy of local pressure groups, can harass even the best intentioned showman. On the judgment of some policeman, who possibly never graduated from sixth grade, prints can be confiscated and days lost. Dependent on local laws, fines can be imposed or theatremen can spend some days in the hoosegow. What is right or wrong is now a matter of exhibition, and the apprehension of wrong-doing a matter for the cops or the district attorney.

All of this may be good law and we certainly aren't defending censorship. But it certainly places the theatreman in a different legal position, and any that think of dipping into the new supplies of cheap sensationalism in order to build boxoffice grosses had better think again. The "fast buck" is surrounded with a little more personal danger than usual.

This is a matter of great importance, but one which each theatreman must watch for himself. Virtually every contemporary trade paper is now editorializing on this subject in an effort to alert their readerships. Certainly no theatreman wants to become the first example of the local prosecution that will most probably take place. So if any picture is questionable, insist on looking at it before you show it publicly. If you show it, it is "your baby" to defend.

DIRECTORIAL COMMENTS: Arthur Lubin, veteran director, last week returned from three months abroad, having spent some time working on his latest feature, "Footsteps In The Fog," in London, which Columbia is to release in the fall; Barcelona for the U-I convention; Paris, Istanbul, Greece, Zurich, and Israel. He enthused about the possibility of doing a comedy feature in the latter country with Mrs. Wallace Reid having spent some time gathering material on a screen play in that country.

KONECOFF

While he has nothing set as to who will finance or distribute the film, he was working on a plan to possibly interest all companies who have frozen funds in the country and have the end result emerge as a possible all-industry release. He has been promised full cooperation by the Israeli government for the venture, and he thought to show the wonders of the country via the comedy mean. He would also like to make a feature in Istanbul and Greece.

In the countries he visited, Lubin reported that the only place he encountered any feelings that America wasn't doing right by foreign-made features was in England, with distribution still under par as to their releases. He opined that the primary reasons that English releases don't do well is because they are local in theme and not appreciated outside the country and because the dialects are limiting.

On the other hand, the foreign market for American features is very big, with Europeans in love with our releases, appreciating most the action, musicals, and westerns. The only complaint he ran into was that more research should go into the authenticity of costuming, events, and customs in period films which

"Roberts" Leads Surge

NEW YORK—Business in the Broadway first-runs had an upsurge over the week-end, with Radio City Music Hall, the Roxy, the Criterion, Astor and Capitol all reporting above average business.

According to usually reliable sources reaching MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR, the breakdown was as follows:

"We're No Angels" (Paramount). Paramount announced $33,000 for the third week.

"How To Be Very, Very Popular" (20th-Fox). Roxy claimed $27,551 for Friday through Sunday, with the opening week heading toward $54,000.

"Mister Roberts" (Warners). Radio City Music Hall had $105,000 in the till for Thursday through Sunday, with the second session sure to top $175,000.

"The Seven Little Foys" (Paramount). Criterion was holding steady with $30,000 in sight for the fourth week.

"Not As A Stranger" (UA). Capitol claimed $60,000 for the fourth week.

"Foxfire" (U-I) Globe expected the second and last week to tally $10,500.

"House Of Bamboo" (20th-Fox). Mayfair expected the last four days of the fourth week to reach $6,000.

"Summertime" (UA). Astor held steady at $35,000 for the fifth week.

"The Shrike" (U-I). Victoria expected the third week to reach $21,500.

"The Seven Year Itch" (20th-Fox). Loew's State looked for the eighth week to reach $19,000.

Admissions Rise

WASHINGTON—The Commerce Department reported last week that theatre admissions in 1954 showed the first rise since 1946. Last year Americans spent in the vicinity of $1,275,000,000 on motion pictures, compared with $1,692,000,000 in 1946, according to the Department's annual "National Income Number" of the survey of current business which summarizes major economic trends for the previous year.

In spite of the increase in general box-office receipts, the percentage of total recreation spending going to theatre admissions remained almost the same last year as in 1953 because of the steady rise in that spending category. Film admissions accounted for just over 10 per cent of total recreation spending, whereas in the 1920's and 1930's it was 20 per cent.

All branches of the industry contributed $964,000,000 to the total national income last year, compared with a peak of $1,133,000,000 in 1946 and a recent low of $839,000,000 in 1953. Payrolls amounted to $709,000,000, although industry employment continued to drop; the average person made more. There were 206,000 employes, off 3,000 from the previous year. Mean annual earnings per full-time employe rose to a record $3,244 last year, almost $200 more than in 1953.

Hughes Sells RKO For $25,000,000 Cash

General Tire and Rubber Company, Headed By Thomas O'Neil, Is New Owner In Largest Industry Transaction

LAS VEGAS, NEV.—In one of the largest cash financial deals in the history of American finance, Thomas F. O'Neil, head, General Tire and Rubber Company, purchased RKO Radio Pictures, Inc., last week from Howard Hughes for $25,000,000. The check for the transaction is slated to change hands this week.

The sale comprised the major producing and distributing company with extensive studio and production facilities in Hollywood and Culver City, Cal.; control of New York studios; access through part-ownership to producing facilities in Mexico City; 101 domestic and foreign film exchanges in a world-wide distributing system, and the facilities of RKO Pathe, Inc., and RKO Television, Inc. An extensive library of old films, possibly numbering 600 to 800, and several multi-million dollar unreleased new films were also involved in the deal. It was speculated that the films might be shown on television by General Teleradio, Inc., a General Tire subsidiary of which O'Neil is president, and that the studio facilities might be devoted in part or entirely to the production of TV films sometime in the future, although O'Neil announced that for the present RKO will continue to produce and distribute theatrical films. Not involved in the sale was the former holding company, RKO Pictures Corporation, the parent of RKO Radio Pictures, Inc.

According to the terms of the sale, employes need have no fear for their jobs. O'Neil said that he plans no personnel changes, although policy changes will be made to secure more extensive use of facilities. The acquisition of RKO is another step in the "aggressive" diversification program of General Tire, O'Neil reported. The company also owns the Mutual Broadcasting System, The Yankee Network, the Don Lee Broadcasting System, and radio and television stations in Boston, New York, Los Angeles, Memphis, and San Francisco. One of the conditions of the agreement, it was said, was that the new owners would continue operation of the studio which has been almost inactive for two years. If RKO production were returned to normal, it would provide welcome relief for exhibitors pressed by product shortage. RKO has only three features scheduled for release between Aug. 31 and Oct. 5.

In his first personnel appointment last week, O'Neil named Charles L. Glett to the executive staff of General Teleradio, to concentrate on the motion picture activities of the subsidiary. Glett is expected to head RKO production eventually, and to integrate that department as a division of Teleradio, and he will be responsible at present for getting the studio back into operation. Recently network service vice-president, CBS-TV, Glett has wide experience in production.

MPAA Rejects Proposal To Sponsor "Oscar" Telecasts

NEW YORK—A proposal to sponsor the telecasting of the Academy Awards nominations and the presentation of Oscars was rejected by the board of directors of the Motion Picture Association of America last week, following a similar stand taken earlier by the Association of Motion Picture Producers on the west coast. It had been estimated that the two telecasts would have cost approximately $900,000. Consideration of the project was the result of dissatisfaction in some industry quarters with the sponsorship of this year's awards.

Eric Johnston, MPAA president, presided at the directors' meeting, and reported on his recent Hollywood visit and on some facets of the foreign situation. He announced at the same time the appointment of Morris Everstein, Warners' legal department, to head the MPAA copyright committee, succeeding Adolph Schimel, U-I vice-president and general counsel, who was appointed recently to the chairmanship of the law committee.

Cohen Suggests One Tongue

NEW YORK—A suggestion to eliminate dubbing costs by making all films in a universal language, i.e., English, was made last fortnight by Columbia executive vice-president Jack Cohn as he returned here on the French Line's "Liberte" after six weeks abroad.

Toll-TV Forces Map Congressional Strategy

WASHINGTON—The proponents of subscription television were reported last week to be arming themselves for a Congressional battle over the controversial proposal with confidence that they can emerge victorious.

Strategy to block federal legislation against the toll system was shaping up in many forms. One of the most important weapons appeared to be the willingness to remind Senators and Representatives that the theatre interests now concerned with preserving free TV for the home are largely those which persuaded them that admissions tax relief was necessary because of the competition of TV, that they are still the victims of home television, and that their dedication to its preservation is inconsistent. Other vital points of attack were expected to be the assertion that free TV is a smoke screen raised to hide the real intent to kill off in advance further TV competition, already charged by Zenith president Eugene F. McDonald, Jr., and that exhibition wants to develop theatre television at the expense of home TV, eliminating the various subscription systems before they can get under way, in order to establish their own "monopoly."

It was anticipated, in the case of a legislative fight, that the disparity between theatre prices for closed circuit TV shows and the proposed toll-TV tariffs would be emphasized by the system's proponents to show that the former covers a single admission, while the latter's price covers as many persons as can assemble before one set in the home. Further, attention could be directed to the fact that in the two years since the Federal Communications Commission opened its doors for exhibitors to petition for a theatre TV network, nothing has been done, with the result that this extends to withholding from the insolvent UHF and VHF stations the badly needed revenue of toll-TV.

Skiatron's Levey Hopes For Favorable Action

NEW YORK—Hopes for action favorable to subscription television by the Federal Communications Commission by the end of the year were expressed last week by Arthur Levey, president, Skiatron Electronics and Television Corporation, in a letter to stockholders, reporting on the current FCC status of the toll system.

Levey discussed the comments filed in response to the FCC's invitation, and asserted that many of those who filed opposing briefs fear that their selfish interests will be adversely affected by approval of toll-TV, citing in particular theatre owners and networks. The fact that letters received by Commission concerning the issue split about evenly was accepted by Levey as "encouraging."

Allied To Seek Government Aid; Distributor Talks Unsatisfactory

WASHINGTON—A decision to press for Congressional legislation regulating film rentals and other trade practices was reached last week by the National Allied board of directors at its meeting in the Hotel Statler. Displeased with the results of the recently concluded individual conferences with film company heads conducted by the joint Allied-Theatre Owners of America committee, the board announced that it is now "prepared and determined" to go ahead with the full program proposed by the Allied Emergency Defense Committee to seek relief for exhibitors.

The board's action was motivated by the belief that the measures for relief offered by distributors do not approximate a fair and equitable division of the box-office dollar between distributors and exhibitors as embodied in the EDC resolution. In general, the directors felt that the talks fell "far short" of expectations, and that virtually all exhibitors, large and small, require relief or adjustment of some kind to survive.

Allied general counsel Abram F. Myers, questioned after the meeting, ruled out the possibility of legislation being introduced to Congress in this session, and said that no decision had been made to try to arrange Senate subcommittee hearings during the recess. If a committee were involved, such as the judiciary, a bill would be a necessary basis for hearings, it was noted.

According to the board's statement, information acquired in Europe by National Allied secretary Julius Gordon and by Myers was expected to influence the thinking and attitude of Congress about the film rental regulation and to reassure those exhibitors intimidated by film company propaganda about the dire consequences to exhibition if such legislation is enacted. The directors asserted that in almost all European countries there is some form of government-imposed rental ceilings and in some what amounts to compulsory arbitration on rentals, and that under these regulations, and evidently because of them, the foreign exhibitor is prosperous. Allied is determined to find out, the directors said, if foreign quota restrictions are having the indirect effect of regulating production in this country and, if so, what the government intends to do about it.

The EDC resolution adopted by the board embodies four provisions, one of them calling for a petition to Congress for a bill regulating rentals. The others call for the dissemination among the Allied membership of accurate information and opinions about market conditions, the encouragement of independent film production to relieve the starved market, and for keeping the door open at all times for consideration of distribution proposals offered to relieve the intolerable conditions which have been forced upon exhibitors.

16mm. Anti-Trust Suit To Be Tried On Sept. 29

HOLLYWOOD—The trial of Government's anti-trust suit charging producers, distributors, and others with conspiracy to restrain 16mm. interstate trade was postponed last week, and will now be held Sept. 29 before Federal Judge Leon Yankwich, to whom it was transferred by Federal Judge Harry Westover, who had had jury trial set for Sept. 6 in his court.

The defendants named in the action are 20th-Fox, Warners, RKO, Republic, Columbia, Screen Gems, Universal, United World Films, and Pictorial Films, as well as Theatre Owners of America, which was named with four others as a co-conspirator.

AB-PT Doubles Net In Second Quarter

NEW YORK—Leonard H. Goldenson, president, American Broadcasting-Paramount Theatres, Inc., reported last week that estimated net operating profit for the 1955 second quarter was double the earnings for the same quarter last year, $1,438,000 or 32 cents per share on 4,119,542 common shares outstanding as compared with $715,000 or 14 cents per share on 3,967,496 common shares outstanding at the end of the same quarter last year. For the six months of 1955, estimated net operating profit was $3,355,000 or 77 cents per share as compared with $1,754,000 or 37 cents per share common in the like period of 1954, based on the number of shares outstanding at the end of each quarter.

Goldenson reported that theatre earnings were ahead for the six months. Theatre business was off slightly in the seasonally weak second quarter, principally because of a lack of sufficient number of good pictures released. A number of pictures to be released in the third quarter look very promising and the outlook is for good third quarter business, Goldenson said.

"The ABC Division in the second quarter as in the first three months of the year continued to operate at a profitable level, showing a marked improvement over 1954," Goldenson said. While there is a seasonal downturn in TV business in the summer months, Goldenson said that ABC is expected to do considerably better in the third quarter than it did last year. TV program sales already made for the fourth quarter are indicative of increased advertiser acceptance and ABC's continued growth as a major network. One of the new fall television shows will be produced by MGM. With Disney and Warners, MGM is the third major motion picture company to be associated with ABC-TV.

Poll Nominations Bared At Industry Luncheon

HOLLYWOOD—Elmer C. Rhoden, national chairman of COMPO's new Audience Awards Poll, last week announced that the first nominees for the national election will be made public at a combined industry and press luncheon today (July 27) in the Crystal Room at the Beverly Hills Hotel.

The initial voting by exhibitors, Rhoden said, is based upon pictures released from Oct. 1, 1954, to March 31, 1955, inclusive. Considering these dates, exhibitors have been asked to vote for 10 entries in best pictures, best performance by an actor, best performance by an actress, most promising new male personality, and most promising new female personality.

The July 27 luncheon is to be attended by approximately 300 people, Rhoden said, representing leading Hollywood press, industry leaders, and exhibitors.

Nominations for the second period close in August and for the third in October. Combined, the three periods for which the exhibitors are casting ballots will cover a full year of released pictures.

On the basis of these selections, the national public will be asked to cast its ballots in theatre lobbies, to determine final winners, during the public voting period, Nov. 17 to Nov. 27. Each ballot will have blank spaces for the names of write-in candidates.

The final winners will be announced in Hollywood early in December at an internationally publicized ceremony. Rhoden pointed out that all balloting by exhibitors is being tabulated by Price Waterhouse and Company.

Union Fined, Enjoined

NEW YORK—A consent judgment last week terminated a civil and criminal anti-trust proceeding of the Theatrical Truck Drivers, Chauffeurs, and Helpers, Local 817, International Brotherhood of Teamsters, and Edward O'Donnell, secretary-treasurer. Other defendants consented to a judgment in April and Local 817 entered a nolo contendere plea, and was in turn fined $2500 by the Federal District Court.

In 1953, the anti-trust division sued the union and four New York firms, charging that an attempt had been made to monopolize the moving of film and theatre scenery in the city. Companion criminal and civil actions were brought, and the four firms agreed to a consent judgment with the promise not to fix prices, allocate customers, and or carry on other activities. They also pleaded nolo contendere and were fined a total of $10,000. The union entered the no contest plea to the criminal suit and entered the consent judgment in the civil suit, which will bar the unions from future price-fixing agreements.

Directors Must Own Stock

WASHINGTON—A Paramount report to the Securities and Exchange Commission last fortnight revealed that a new by-law adopted by the board requires each Paramount Director to own beneficially at least 100 shares of the company's common stock. Another by-law change reduced the required quorum to six.

UA Foreign Conclave Is Opened By Picker

TOKYO—Opening the United Artists' international convention here last week, distribution vice-president Eugene F. Picker, presiding with vice-president Max E. Youngstein, told UA executives and representatives from the U.S. and 11 foreign countries that the company's grosses in the Orient and Australia for the first six months of this year exceed those of the comparable 1954 period by 80 per cent, representing the highest returns in these areas since UA was founded in 1919. Picker predicted that the quality product slated for foreign release later this year would boost 1955 grosses a full 100 per cent over those of 1954.

Youngstein disclosed to the conclave in the Imperial Hotel that more than 100 important features will be available for world-wide distribution in the next three years as the result of recently consummated distribution agreements bringing the industry's foremost directors, producers, stars, and writers into the UA fold. Thirty features will be released in the area in the next twelve months, he said.

Messages of greeting to the delegates were received from UA board chairman Robert S. Benjamin and foreign department general manager Louis Leber, citing the company gains of the last few years and emphasizing forthcoming product. Among the many Far Eastern industry leaders present were key executives of the Shochiku Company, the largest Japanese production, distribution, and exhibition combine, including president Shiro Kido, managing director Shuichi Yamakazi, and members of the board and sales force. UA foreign executives were led by Japan manager Milton Schneiderman, Conrade de Jesus, manager, Philippines; John W. Neal, manager, Thailand; Richard Guardian, Hong Kong supervisor; Morton Raven, acting manager, Singapore; Constantin Golden, representative, Indonesia; Ron Michaels, manager, Australasia; Harry Gribble, manager, New Zealand; Terry Linder, representative, India; Chow Li-Change, manager, Taiwan, and H. Baigehamed, Pakistan distributor. Far Eastern distribution plans for the next year were set by Andy Albeck, home office staff.

The Tokyo conference, the second in UA's global sales meetings, will be followed by another convention in Latin America this fall.

Gibraltar Exchanges Set

HOLLYWOOD—Returning last week from a nine-week nationwide tour, Sam Nathanson, president, Gibraltar Motion Picture Distributors, Inc., announced the establishment of exchanges in 24 cities to handle five films which the company now has in release.

The exchange offices have been set up in Dallas, Oklahoma City, New Orleans, Memphis, Atlanta, Charlotte, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Seattle, Portland, Denver, Salt Lake City, St. Louis, Chicago, Detroit, Cleveland, Washington, Philadelphia, New York, Boston, Albany, Buffalo, New Haven, and Cincinnati.

TOA's Levy Analyzes Effects Of Texas Anti-Trust Decision

NEW YORK—The significance and importance to all theatremen of the Texas jury verdict in the I. B. Adelman anti-trust suit was analyzed last week by Herman M. Levy, general counsel, Theatre Owners of America, who opined that the decision has the potentiality of being one of supreme industry importance. Adelman brought his suit against Interstate Theatres and eight major distributors seeking $2,436,000 in treble damages, representing $500,000 for the alleged forced sale of the neighborhood Dolman, Houston, and $312,000 for alleged conspiracy to deny first-run product, and the jury returned a verdict of $20,000 in Federal Court, which set a hearing for Aug. 22 on the matter of equitable relief.

LEVY

Levy stated that it is "difficult to set forth the full meaning of the decision because it was rendered by a jury . . . there was no memorandum of decision of a judge by which to be guided. However . . . the gist of the . . . claim was that he (Adelman) had an adequate house for the showing of first-run pictures, but that he was denied the opportunity to negotiate for first-run as against the downtown theatres . . . " The attorney recalled the Crest case in Maryland in which the U. S. Supreme Court refused to upset a lower Court's decision that a suburban house was not entitled to negotiate first-run, which would appear to be in conflict with the Texas decision. But a distribution attorney explained that the Texas theatre was not really a neighborhood one in the sense that the Maryland one was and that first-run of some art and foreign product was granted to another house near Adelman's without affording him the opportunity to get those films or films not restricted to art exhibition.

The Aug. 22 hearing set for Adelman's request for injunctive relief compelling distributors to permit him to bid competitively for first-run product will be determined by the judge, not by a jury, Levy pointed out. This interesting and important item is one of the few instances where an exhibitor has threatened litigation or went to court to compel the use of competitive bidding.

Federal Judge Lamar Cecil, who presided over the trial, set the injunction hearing for Beaumont, Tex.

Wallace Heads Crescent Board

NASHVILLE—Jo Wallace, a bank officer and lumber dealer, was elected chairman of the board, Crescent Amusement Company, at a meeting last week, which left the office of president open indefinitely. Kermit Stengel, former president, resigned in June. It was also revealed that Mrs. Tony Sudekum, widow of the founder, has resigned as a director and is now traveling abroad.

Directors reelected were Mrs. R. E. Baulch, Howell Campbell, Sr., and William F. Holman.

Commission Recommends Local Admission Tax Administration

WASHINGTON—A recommendation that the federal and state governments surrender the admission tax to local legislative bodies, or at least allow local admission taxes to be credited against state or federal taxes, was made public recently by a special advisory committee of the Commission on Intragovernmental Relations, headed by former Louisiana governor Sam H. Jones, and including mayors and other public officials from across the country, as well as public opinion expert George H. Gallup.

The Commission, created by the President and Congress to study problems existing between state, federal, and local governments, made its report and was dissolved June 30, asserting that there is no easy solution to the problem of overlapping taxes, but maintained that the admission tax can be effectively administered locally.

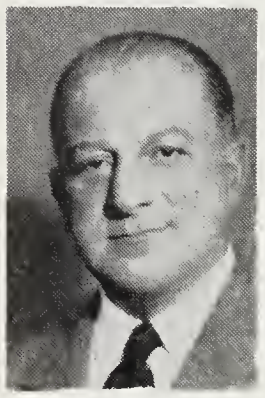
Fabian Reports SW Profit Rise To $2,222,000 Or $1.01 A Share

NEW YORK—S. H. Fabian, president, Stanley Warner Corporation, announced last week that Stanley Warner Corporation and subsidiary companies for the 39 weeks ending May 28, 1955, showed an operating profit of $5,270,700 before losses arising from the sales of fixed assets and provisions for contingencies and Federal and Canadian income taxes. The operating profit computed on a similar basis for the 39 weeks ended May 29, 1954, amounted to $2,614,100.



FABIAN

The net profit after all charges for the 39 weeks amounted to $2,222,000, equivalent to $1.01 per share on the common stock outstanding, as compared with a net profit of $1,495,000 for the same period last year, equivalent to 64 cents per share on the common stock then outstanding.

Included in the expenses for the 39 week period ended May 28, 1955, were charges for depreciation and amortization totaling $3,373,800 which compares with similar charges of $2,328,100 for the corresponding period last year. Theatre admissions and merchandise sales, rents from tenants, etc., aggregated $68,630,600 for the current 39 week period, which compares with $44,236,400 for the comparable period last year.

A loss of $123,600 was sustained on sales of fixed assets as compared with a profit of $80,800 from similar sales during the same period last year. The provision for contingencies amounted to $75,000 as compared with a charge of $100,000 last year. Provision for estimated Federal and Canadian income taxes amounted to $2,850,000 in the 1955 period as compared with $1,100,000 for the 1954 period.

Stanley Warner Corporation operates approximately 275 theatres in the United States and is the producer and exhibitor of Cinerama pictures. One of Stanley Warner's wholly owned subsidiaries is International Latex Corporation, a leading producer of girdles, bras, Latex gloves, and infants wear, sold under the trade name, "Playtex." The income statement includes only the operations of International Latex Corporation subsequent to the date of its acquisition, April 30, 1954.

Rhoden Buys NT Shares

NEW YORK—A Stock Exchange report revealed last week that National Theatres president Elmer C. Rhoden has acquired 46,000 shares of NT common stock. Rhoden bought 10,000 shares to increase his direct holdings to 34,800 shares, and purchased 36,000 shares to increase the holdings of Rhoden Investment of 38,000 shares.

American Broadcasting-Paramount Theatres comptroller and assistant treasurer James L. Brown, the report also stated, acquired 1500 common shares of AB-PT on stock option.

Bob Coyne, COMPO, recently explained the workings of the Audience Awards movie poll to Samuel Pinanski, Charles Kurtzman, Edward Lider, and Martin J. Mullin at the Hotel Bradford, Boston, and a large group of New England exhibitors and distributors.

Warners Launches TV Program

HOLLYWOOD—Production was underway last week on the first of thirteen "Casablanca" television films for the forthcoming "Warner Brothers Presents" series on ABC-TV, due to bow over the coast-to-coast network September 13.

The Warners' program will feature three series of films, each taking its title from a noteworthy Warners release, "Casablanca," "King's Row," and "Cheyenne." The weekly presentations will be self-contained stories, and a minimum of six minutes of each program will be devoted to a segment dealing with behind-the-scenes activities at the studio.

Lab Strike Threatened

NEW YORK—A request for permission to strike against eastern laboratories reached the desk of IATSE president Richard F. Walst last fortnight from Local 702, Motion Picture Laboratory Technicians Union, which voted the walkout after turning down employers' offers of a 12½ cent wage increase and a $4 weekly fund contribution for each employe. Failure of management to agree to a demand for a three-week paid vacation was said to be the principal reason for rejection of the offer.

James R. Grainger, RKO president, for the first time since joining the company, is having a sales drive held in his honor.

Quebec Exhibitor Unit Affiliates With TOA

NEW YORK—E. D. Martin, president, Theatre Owners of America, announced recently the affiliation of the Theatre Owners Association of Quebec, Inc., founded a little over a year ago, representing independent exhibitors in the Montreal area. E. N. Tabah, president, and J. H. Strauss, chairman of the executive committee, attended TOA's combined board of directors and executive committee meetings last February in Washington. Subsequently, Alfred Starr addressed the first annual meeting of the Association and the organization was welded into a solid group through the efforts of Tabah and Strauss. The association, representing 120 theatres, has extended membership invitations to all exhibitors, large and small.

Formal acceptance and induction by the TOA board of directors of the newest affiliate will be one of the highlights of the 1955 Annual Convention.

The officers of TOA have long advocated world organization. This affiliation marks the first step toward this aim of international unity. Martin has extended a personal invitation to all the new members to participate in all TOA activities and functions. Delegates from Canada and other foreign countries will be represented at the Los Angeles Convention, Oct. 6-9, at the Biltmore Hotel.

Under consideration at the convention will be the possibility of TOA membership in the Union International de l'Exploitation Cinematographique. An invitation to UIEC officers to attend the convention has been forwarded. I. Gemini, president, and other key officers are expected to attend.

Shea Managers Transferred

NEW YORK—The Jamestown Amusement Company last week announced several transfers of key manager personnel on the Shea Circuit through president and general manager Gerald Shea.

Joseph W. Scanlan, former manager of the Shea operations in Zanesville, O., took over the management of the Fulton, Pittsburgh, it was revealed. Other changes announced were: Dale F. Tysinger, manager, Ashtabula, O., to manager, Zanesville; Durward Duty from manager, Marietta, O., to manager, Ashtabula; Dale C. McCoy from manager, Cambridge, O., to manager, Marietta; Lee McFerren from assistant manager, Fulton, Pittsburgh, to manager, State, Conneaut, O.; Bob Ellison from assistant manager, Newark, O., to the staff of the Fulton, Pittsburgh; Don Parker from the Fulton staff, Pittsburgh, to the Newark staff under Bill Gilliam; William E. Kibrige from manager, Park, Westfield, Mass., to manager, Cambridge, O., and Harry Buck from manager, State, Conneaut, to manager, Park, Westfield. Most of the reassignments were effective last week.

WINNING ENTRY

"Prom Night" Promotion Cops Fourth "Sweepstakes" Contest

PHILADELPHIA—Contest number four in SHOWMANSHIP SWEEPSTAKES has been won by Aaron Gardner, manager, La Porte, La Porte, Ind.

A tabulation of the voting shows, with all due respect to other entries in the July 27 running, that Gardner's "Prom Night" civic promotion ran way ahead of the field.

Walter Reade, Jr., Walter Reade Theatres, Oakhurst, N. J., one of the 54 theatre executives acting as judges of the contest, was so enthused over Gardner's entry, that he commented, "I am only voting for one this week. This fellow has no competition."

Another judge, A. Fuller Sama, Jr., Statesville Theatre Corporation, Statesville, N. C., says, " 'Prom Night' should fit into most towns as a service as well as good will builder par excellence."

Gardner's $100 check is on its way to him.

PROM NIGHT

Submitted by Aaron Gardner, manager, La Porte Theatre, La Porte, Ind.

1540 seats • 70 cents top adult admission Family patronage

This event was started several years ago by the theatre; and has grown in importance each year, until this year it reached an all-time high in importance in school and civic affairs.

Prom Night originated as a civic good will builder. The whole idea is to give the high school juniors and seniors something to do after their regular prom dance and thus keep them under control, off the highways and preventing possible accidents.

The students, after their regular prom, gather at the local Moose Hall, and at midnight are brought to the theatre in private cars, furnished by car dealers. At the theatre they are greeted by City, School officials and a Master of Ceremonies.

The theatre is decorated to simulate a Hollywood premiere, complete with red carpets and giant search lights. Thousands of parents and friends gathered outside the theatre to watch the proceedings, with the theatre most certainly the center of attraction for this entire event.

Scene outside the La Porte, La Porte, Ind., as students arrive for special premiere arranged by manager Aaron Gardner, the local Chamber of Commerce, and other groups for "Prom Night."

Each couple are interviewed as they enter the theatre and these interviews are made by the master of ceremonies over a public address system and are taped at the same time and played on the local radio station the following day.

Inside the theatre, the students are seated by ushers dressed in tuxedos. These ushers are members of various service organizations.

The students are treated to a first-run film and suitable short subjects, a two hour show. The feature being one never before shown in La Porte.

After the theatre party the students are again picked up by limousines and taken back to Moose Hall, where they are fed a wonderful meal and are entertained with a dance band and several professional vaudeville acts, with this all having the atmosphere of a night club.

The event ends about 5.30 or 6.00 a.m. As a result we have kept over 400 students busy for the entire night, kept them off the highways, and, perhaps, saved a few lives.

Prom Night requires a lot of work and money. It is sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce and the event is worked out by a committee composed of members of each organization in town plus the theatre manager. These committee members, in turn, appoint various jobs to members in their organization, and in this way everyone gets into the act. The students themselves participate in the planning and pay for the event at the rate of $3 per couple. Strangely enough the students look forward to this event and have no feeling that they are being controlled. To them it is the BIG night of their Junior-Senior years.

Moneywise the theatre receives a flat $100 for the use of the theatre. This is supplemented by a tremendous concession business. All employes contribute their services, so actually all the expense the theatre has is film rental and power.

The affair, due to the importance of the people involved, receives tremendous publicity in the local press, with just reams of copy and photos used on all phases of the event. The La Porte Chamber of Commerce has furnished written appreciation to the theatre for its cooperation, and the La Porte Herald-Argus had a lead editorial favorable to the event, saying: " . . . If the activities for the prom-goers after the prom becomes as traditional as the prom itself a good many parents here will feel much easier in their minds each year when their sons and daughters, happy and eager for the fun which the auditorium brings, leave for the prom . . . This is a co-operative effort which has as its only goal the providing of a safe and happy time for the teen-agers during the remainder of the prom night . . . "

MISS CINDERELLA

Submitted by Earl Arnold Rialto, Allentown, Pa.

1600 seats • 85 cents top adult admission General patronage

Three days prior to the arrival of MGM's "The Glass Slipper" float, the Call and Chronicle newspapers carried stories of it's coming to town and the selection of Mrs. Jeanette Smith as "Allentown's Cinderella" due to the fact that Mrs. Smith had won the title of Mrs. Lehigh Valley for national competition in the Mrs. America contest made her a popular choice.

With a police escort, a Ford thunderbird and three flashy Ford convertibles, promoted from a local motor dealer, escorted by 13 Allentown High School Majorettes costumed as mice, "Cinderella" attired in royal robe and wearing a crown, occupied central spot on the Glass Slipper float; her throne being the Glass Slipper. The 13 Majorettes were decked on the top of the three Ford convertibles. Placards announced the coming of "The Glass Slipper" to the Rialto. The ballyhoo street parade was held from three to five thirty p.m.

En route, the parade stopped at the United Gas Improvement Company, where Cinderella was presented with a $300 (Mrs. America) gas range for winning the Mrs. Lehigh Valley contest. Next stop was at City Hall, where the Mayor mounted the float to present Cinderella with a large gold key to the City of Allentown. This event attracted hundreds of spectators.

Another stop was at a local shoe store, where Cinderella was fitted to slippers and pumps of her choice which were presented to her with the store's compliments. The fittings were photographed and the store ran a 3 x 9 co-op ad with the picture publicizing the Glass Slipper at the Rialto.

At the conclusion of the parade, the float was on exhibition in front of the theatre for the evening. Cinderella and the 13 Majorettes were escorted to one of the town's best restaurants, for an eight-course dinner. The entire affair was broadcast over WEAB with a 10-minute interview with Mrs. Lehigh Valley and numerous plugs for the picture. This event was plugged for four days by the "Lounge's" master of ceremonies.

A Cinderella gown give-away was worked along the lines of "Who will be Allentown's Cinderella Bride" with a drawing for a $160 evening or bridal gown given away free by a local merchant, with other merchants distributing some 25,000 tickets. Window display co-op ads were also used.

Total giveaways were a gas range, valued at $300; a Cinderella gown, $160; shoes, $45; dinners, $28; printing, $56; blow-ups, $22.50; signs and art work, $20; special trailer, $10.34. The theatre for the cost of a trailer, $10.34, thus obtained value totaling $631.50, and the picture grossed 90 per cent.

RUNNER-UP NUMBER 2

MERCHANTS' MATINEES

Submitted by Elstun Dodge
Elstun Theatre, Cincinnati, Ohio

485 seats • 50 cents top adult admission
Family patranage

We are now in our third week of a "Merchants' Matinee" promotion that is proving very successful and should continue so indefinitely.

Each week I sell the merchants, many of them advertisers on my monthly pin-up cardboard program, whose ads cover printing of same, 100 tickets for a flat fee of $3 per merchant. I advise them to be generous with them and offer each customer at least two, as they can call on me if the supply runs out. A window card accompanies the passes, which reads "This ticket will admit one free of charge at the Elstun Theatre, Mt. Washington, Saturday Matinee only (date) 2 shows starting at 2 p.m. and 4 p.m. This ticket presented through the courtesy of (name of merchant)."

It took an average of 15 minutes to sell each merchant the first week and after that just a minute to present the bundle of "tickets" and ask if he wanted to continue. The third week I reduced the price to $2 voluntarily to keep the promotion going in high gear; and used the excuse that I had so many additional subscribers that I could now reduce the price.

The trick to this is in having a different picture on Saturday matinee than the film shown at night. For example, a recent Saturday matinee feature was "Pride Of St. Louis"; and the evening features were "Three For The Show" and "Killer Ape."

As a result of this promotion, which amounts to the merchants subsidizing two matinee shows on Saturday afternoons, we are selling about 400 bags of popcorn and approximately 730 bars of candy and $8 worth of soft drinks.

The same idea, I believe, could be worked just as well for a mid-week evening show.

RUNNER-UP NUMBER 3

CAGNEY CONTEST

Submitted by M. A. Cooper
Cove Theatre, Glen Cove, L. I.

1550 seats • $1.25 top adult admission
General type audience

With a recent feature starring James Cagney we rigged up a lobby board with copy announcing the contest surrounded by stills from many films in which the star appeared. The idea of the contest was "How many films in which James Cagney appeared can you name?" The house staff helped create the 40 x 60 board and 25 free guest tickets were presented to the persons naming the most features in which the star previously appeared.

Judged by the entries received the stunt was quite a success and surely aroused plenty of interest in both the star and his current film.

To plug the contest free publicity was obtained in nine area newspapers; daily free announcements were obtained on radio station WKBS; large signs were planted near check-out counters of two super markets; the outside frames and marquee of the old Glen Theatre were utilized; a library window carried a 22 x 28 card; other special cards were made up, mentioning the contest, and spotted in restaurants, the taxi booth near the railroad station, and in an empty store front.

In addition the contest was plugged via a lobby turntable with colored stills and inserts used.

Aldo Ray, Humphrey Bogart and Peter Uztinov, likeable "devils" on Devil's Island, in Paramount's "We're No Angels," get a glimpse of some feminine intimacy being performed here by Joan Bennett. Paramount has posted $500 for the best campaign an the film submitted by an entrant placing first with it in SHOWMANSHIP SWEEPSTAKES in one of the weekly judgings during the 13-week period from July 20 to Oct. 12. This makes "Angels" worth $600 to whoever knocks off the cash prizes.

GET ACQUAINTED PASSES

Submitted by Richard De Bow
Trans-Lux 85th Street Theatre
New York City, N. Y.

540 seats • 90 cents top adult admission
Upper middle class patrons

The area surrounding this theatre is teeming with construction of new apartment buildings, and to acquaint these new neighbors to our fine chain of theatres, the following tie-up was effected:

An organization called "Welcome Cart" is visiting these new residents, having an annual rental of from $1500 upward. They are presented a card from Trans-Lux Theatres and Flatiron Maid Service, which entitles them to free admission to any of our theatres.

When the pass is presented, the patron is welcomed without charge. Each pass when presented to Flatiron Maid Service by the theatre receives 25 cents from them. This company has paid the entire cost of printing, postage, etc.

BETTER MANAGEMENT DEPARTMENT

George Nonamaker
Editor

DUE TO PRINTING exigencies, we are usually two weeks ahead of you all in SHOWMANSHIP SWEEPSTAKES. In other words, as the winner and runners-up of contest four are being announced in this issue of MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR, entries in contest five are right now in the process of being judged and entries in contest six are getting set in proof form ready to go to the judges next week.

NONAMAKER

A recent flood of entries has attested to the popularity of the contest. All will be given due consideration and processing here.

What we would like to see, however, are some entries on the three features on which film companies have posted extra money for campaigns adjudged best in their own category, as well as a winner in one of the SWEEPSTAKES. This, as you surely know by this time, will give you a return of $600, instead of $100.

The films now with money on the line are Columbia's "It Came From Beneath The Sea," Paramount's "We're No Angels," and U-I's "The Private War Of Major Benson."

The expiration dates for entries on these specific pictures are stated elsewhere on these pages. We'd like to see some of you fellows directing your efforts along those lines and copping this extra dough. It's around for the grabbing.

Contest Winners Say Thanks; Predict Flood of Entries

PHILADELPHIA—Sid Kleper, Loew's College, New Haven, Conn., winner of the first SHOWMANSHIP SWEEPSTAKES, has written a note of thanks; and states that "this type of contest is acceptable to any theatre situation, and I am sure that before many weeks pass, the problem of judging is going to become acute, due to the thousands of entries."

From up Canada way, second winner Mel Jolley, manager, Century, Hamilton, Ontario, in acknowledging receipt of his check for $100, extends best wishes for the continuation of the contest with its generous prizes, and threatens to become a contestant again and again.

Pet Show Boosts "Lady"

NEW YORK—As an aid in the publicity campaign for Disney's "Lady And The Tramp," the Roxy last week joined with the Police Athletic League in the co-sponsorship of a "Lady and the Tramp" pet show for boys and girls from five to 13. The show, held at the Kilpatrick Youth Center in upper Manhattan, brought forth approximately 150 entrants. Judging of cats, dogs, goldfish, etc., was conducted by Deputy Commissioner James B. Nolan, president, PAL; Roxy manager William L. Miller; and Charles Levy, director of advertisiing and publicity for Disney. As a tiein, a color painting of a scene from the film was given to the owners of the dogs most resembling "Lady" and "Tramp."

"It" Draws Attention

MINNEAPOLIS—Robert Whalen, RKO Orpheum, recently used stunts extensively in his own campaign for Columbia's "It Came From Beneath The Sea." He got hold of an ambulance and sent it around town bannered with a message that it would be in attendance at the theatre during the run of the thriller. He also tied up with a beauty salon and set up a display complete with beauty operator to dye the hair of anyone "whose hair turns white" upon seeing "It." Even the cashier's cage wasn't free from gimmicks, as Whelan placed a bottled octopus on display alongside the change box.

A tense moment in Columbia's science-fiction thriller, "It Came From Beneath The Sea," is when sailors on a tramp steamer come in contact with the huge sea beast. Columbia has offered $500 for the best campaign on the film submitted by anyone who places first with it in SHOWMANSHIP SWEEPSTAKES in one of the weekly judgings during the 13-week period from July 13 to Oct. 5. This makes "It" worth $600 to whoever knocks off the cash prizes.

Mel Jolley, manager, Century, Hamilton, Ontario, Canada, above, was winner of SHOWMANSHIP SWEEPSTAKES contest two; while Ted Kirkmeyer, manager, Ogden, Ogden, Utah, below, won first prize in contest three.

Webb To Tour For "Kelly"

NEW YORK—Jack Webb will launch what is said to be the biggest and fastest personal appearance tour in the history of the entertainment industry.

Webb begins a tour of the United States and Canada July 27 for openings of Warners' "Pete Kelly's Blues." The coast-to-coast flying tour will include more than 30 major cities in the United States, and several principal cities in Canada.

Kickoff of the tour, which will cover more than 12,000 miles, will begin in San Antonio, Tex., and will end in San Francisco Sept. 1.

"We plan to spend every moment not utilized in actual appearances traveling to the next opening," Webb said.

Webb will have as police escort Sgt. Lou Swee, former bodyguard of President Eisenhower. Mayor Richard Daley of Chicago gave Sergeant Swee a leave of absence from the Chicago police department.

The "United Jack Webb Special" will accommodate 19 persons in the re-fitted cabin which customarily seats 44 passengers. Webb's "Home-In-The-Air" has, besides berth space, such luxuries as built-in radios, fold-away tables, full divans, reclining swivel chairs, and a conference room in the forward compartment for radio and newspaper interviews. A special galley has been completed in the executive plane.

Mary Tuttle, former director of personnel, RKO Theatres, resigned recently to become executive director of the Vocational Advisory Service with offices in New York City.

International Bows Set For 20th-Fox Picture

NEW YORK—Underscoring the popularity and importance of American motion pictures in all corners of the globe, 20th-Fox last week announced that its forthcoming "Love Is A Many Splendored Thing," starring William Holden and Jennifer Jones, will have simultaneous international world premieres in late August.

The top-budgeted adaptation of Han Suyin's best-selling novel will be introduced in gala premieres in New York and Singapore before audiences numbering stars of the entertainment world, top-ranking government figures, and important personnages drawn from all walks of life.

Launching of the Buddy Adler production in Singapore concurrently with its debut at the Roxy was requested by Loke Wan Tho, leading exhibitor, and other prominent citizens of Singapore, stemming from the film's Oriental background and actual location filming in that area.

Twentieth Century-Fox president Spyros P. Skouras, currently on a business trip which will take him to key cities of Asia, is expected to be on hand for the Singapore premiere of the picture.

TV, Bingo Close 10 Canadian Nabe Houses

TORONTO—The closure of five theatres by each of the two major circuits in this country was announced. All of the 10 theatres closed were in Vancouver, where the novelty of TV is just catching on.

Famous Players was first with their announcement of the closure of their houses, the Victoria, Windsor, Kitsilano, Kerrisdale, and Alma, all neighborhood houses. Odeon then followed with the announcement of the closure of the Rio, Kingsway, and Marpole, Vancouver, and the Metro and Capitol, New Westminster.

In the announcement, Art Grayburn, manager, Plaza, said he believed the closing of the Odeon houses was only a temporary situation "for the summer, when business is down." He blamed bingo as well as TV.

Canadian Comment

Something unusual in the way movie premieres will be introduced Aug. 15 by Odeon Theatres and J. Arthur Rank Organization when the North American premiere of "Above Us Waves" is held aboard three Royal Canadian Navy ships on the Great Lakes. Fifteen of the Navy's vessels will participate in a full day's exercises culminating in the guests sitting down to watch the film premiere. The premiere, arranged by James Hardiman, Odeon's director of advertising and publicity, will first see a fleet during exercises, and the press will participate in mine-clearing, depth-charge, and gunnery practice as well as anti-aircraft shoots in cooperation with the reserve squadron of the Navy Fleet Arm. TV stations and area newspapers will be the guests of the Navy.

Increased activity by Tent 28, Toronto, Variety Club, with an addition to Variety Village as a means of keeping alive the interest of membership was suggested to a meeting by George Hoover, Miami, international chief barker, Variety Club. He said Toronto's tent was superior to many tents in many ways, but he urged the livelier activity. The meeting saw a further contribution of $500 from George Altman for his personal salvage fund, which now stands at $14,593 for a total of 615,000 pounds of scrap. Another $32.50 came from the baseball game of the Film Distributors vs. Gus Mortson's Hockey All-Stars. It was announced that Harold Meyers would be chairman of the baseball game ticket committee.

CINE CHATTER: Kenneth V. Cooper, formerly Ontario sales chief for Associated Screen News, has taken over the post of public relations and advertising director for the company. Jack Chisholm, now head, Ontario sales department and Toronto production unit, formerly held the post. Cooper will also be responsible for theatre trailer sales, moving to Montreal. . . . George D. Koppelman was appointed acting branch manager, Saint John branch, J. Arthur Rank Film Distributors (Canada), Ltd., filling the vacancy created by the death of Graydon Matthews. . . . Appointments of Republic sales representatives in three exchange territories were made by the JARO organization. In Montreal, Bert Franks, who resigned from Empire-Universal, was appointed; in Calgary, Reg Doddridge takes over; while Ralph Zelickson, who resigned from International Film Distributors in Calgary, takes on the other new post. . . . Richard Todd, who shares star billing in Warners' "The Dam Busters" with Michael Redgrave, will attend the premieres in Toronto, Montreal, and Ottawa. . . . Larry Graburn, one-time Odeon pub-chief, and now assistant to Carl Walker, was a visitor in Toronto from Hollywood. . . . The Patricia, London, a Famous Players unit, has taken on a new name, the Victoria, with the acquisition of the marquee from the Victoria, Toronto, now closed. . . . The Century, Hamilton, was closed for a month for renovations. . . . Ann Henry, film critic, Winnipeg Tribune, won the $1,500 first prize in MacLean's 1955 short story competition, for which she is happily receiving congratulations from all of friends on Film Row and elsewhere.

England

In London, Warners' Leicester Square was given until last week to prepare a defense to charges pending in the Bow Street Police Court that it did not fulfill its Quota Act requirements in 1953. The charges were brought by the Board of Trade.

It was understood that Warners' reply would assert that the house played the 3-D "House Of Wax" for 21 weeks and therefore did not have sufficient playing time available to fill the quota requirement. The circuit claims that the long run was undertaken to stimulate attendance with the novel device, and that it should not be penalized for an effort to help British theatres in a time of recession.

International Producers Unit Sets Meet Agenda

NEW YORK—An agenda including the possibility of a single qualified man to investigate film trade barriers, the international censorship of films, and policy concerning the Cannes and Venice Film Festivals, was slated for discussion last week at the San Sebastian meetings of the International Federation of Film Producers Association's General Council and Administrative Council. The MPAA was to be represented at the Spanish resort by its veteran European manager, Fayette W. Allport, serving also as alternate to MPAA president Eric Johnston.

Some agitation abroad for the establishment of an international censorship code or authority acceptable to all producing countries, in order to end considerable irritation from that source, prompted an examination by the Federation of its position on that matter. European producers obviously recall difficulties encountered by many pictures in the United States.

A decision by the Federation to employ, on a permanent basis, an individual charged with the responsibility of eliminating trade barriers would implement the action taken last year at Locarno when the General Assembly adopted a resolution calling for complete freedom in the international industry, which represented an important victory for the American producers. The discussion of the frequency of the Cannes and Venice festivals, and the failure, in some cases, to award all the announced prizes, was also to be taken under consideration.

N. Y. Public Against Toll-TV

NEW YORK—The New York public is emphatically opposed to subscription television, according to evidence offered last week to the City Council by John Merli, chairman, rules committee. He revealed that an opinion survey conducted by the committtee on Council president Abe Stark's resolution calling on the Federal Communications Commission to deny approval of toll-TV showed the average local citizenry at least 90 per cent opposed to the system.

Merli said that when the rules committee first received communications from the public about toll-TV, they were all one-sided in opposition, many of them from persons who, it was presumed, had never before exercised their right to express an opinion in such a way. The results of the recent solicitation on the street now vindicates them.

Egypt

Maurice Dassa, 40, general manager, MGM of Egypt, died in Paris following a brief illness. Surviving are his wife and three children. Dassa began his motion picture career with MGM in 1936 as assistant shipper in the Alexandria office. He rose rapidly through the ranks, becoming accessory clerk, booker, and salesman. In 1946 he was appointed sales manager of the entire Near East. In 1952 he became general manager of Egypt and also supervised MGM operations in Syria, Lebanon, Iraq, and Iran.

2,000,000 Children See NT Kiddie Shows

Los Angeles—Over two million youngsters are being entertained this summer at special children's shows in the 345 motion picture houses operated by National Theatres, Inc., according to figures disclosed last week by Elmer C. Rhoden, president. National Theatres is the parent company of Fox West Coast Theatres.

The "small fry" audiences are being treated to 2,650 showings, one each week, usually during morning hours on midweek dates throughout the summer months, Rhoden said.

Most of the special shows are presented under the sponsorship of local Parent-Teacher Associations, some by civic clubs, some by welfare departments, and others by dairies, bakeries, or soft drink distributors.

Rhoden stressed that the programs, all suitable for juvenile patrons, are selected by local sponsoring groups, who also appoint monitors to serve at all performances.

The National Theatres head also pointed out that junior admission prices and special children's shows have been a long-established policy of the circuit, dating back as many as 15 years in some of the divisions.

Leading the divisions is Fox Midwest with an estimated attendance of 816,000. Other divisions following are Southern California with 436,090; Northern California with 386,000; Intermountain with 288,000; Evergreen with 203,000, and Milwaukee with 107,800.

The final check of the $5,000 corporate gift of Loew's Theatres to the American Red Cross was presented recently to Miss Gloria Glennen, New York Chapter, by Joseph R. Vogel, president, Loew's Theatres, in Vogel's offices in Loew's State Theatre Building, New York.

Because of the expanding populations due to the tremendous increase in the nation's birth rate, Rhoden said his circuit was intensely desirous of generating interest in movies on the part of children, since "we fully realize that these youngsters represent the junior and adult audience of tomorrow." Along this line of thinking, Rhoden has on several occasions urged Hollywood producers to turn out more family-type pictures.

18 From Bel-Air Set In Two Year UA Deal

New York—A new production agreement providing for 18 features within the next two years has been concluded with Bel-Air Productions, headed by Aubrey Schenck and Howard K. Koch, it was announced last week by United Artists, which will release the extensive program of films, 10 of which will be in color.

The first of the productions under the new schedule is "Three Bad Sisters," starring Marla English, Kathleen Hughes, and Sara Shane. Next on the Bel-Air program will be "Frontier Scout," starring singing star Tony Martin in his first straight-dramatic role. Five Bel-Air films are currently in release.

Two more are soon to be released by United Artists, "Desert Sands," a Superscope Technicolor drama starring Ralph Meeker, Marla English, and J. Carrol Naish, and "Fort Yuma," a Technicolor adventure drama starring Peter Graves.

USIA's Campbell Mourned

Washington—United States Information Agency headquarters received word from London last week of the death of Patrick Campbell, 64, radio and television officer for the agency, and an industry pioneer, for the last year with USIA. Campbell was at one time general sales manager, D. W. Griffith, and was also associated with Pathe, United Artists, and the Claude Erlanger interests. He was press agent for Helen Hayes and others.

Coyne Explains Poll At Albany Meeting

ALBANY—The case of COMPO's Audience Awards Poll was lucidly presented by Robert W. Coyne, COMPO special counsel, at a meeting held recently of circuit personnel, branch managers, salesmen, and exhibitors in the 20th-Fox screening room.

With vigorous promotion all along the line, the poll will mean increased interest and attendance at films in a normally slow period, and should uncover a minimum of four or five new stars of the moviegoer's choice, Coyne predicted, as well as promote flexibility in casting by suggesting more convincing portrayals by younger actors. If boxoffice picks up in November and December, Coyne pointed out, everyone will benefit: an increase of 20 per cent could mean a doubling of profit for exhibitors who should, in their own interest, cooperate with producers by booking product featuring young personalities; "ageing" stars and their agents have too strong a grip on Hollywood, he asserted. In the recent past, production has failed to provide opportunities for younger stars to achieve acclaim, but part of the blame for this, Coyne feels, is the exhibitors', who have demanded proven stars.

Most major companies now have sizeable rosters of promising young people, he continued, mentioning those which have indicated they will release shorts spotlighting stars-to-be. Again, he emphasized, exhibitors should cooperate by showing the shorts, because nothing is more important to the survival of the industry than the discovery and development of young stars when the decline of the legitimate stage and vaudeville has dried up many sources of new talent.

Coyne cautioned the industry to expect surprises in the public's choice of the most promising personalities; most of those selected will be youthful, he thinks, and he cited the case of Deborah Paget, who was in the "Movietime U.S.A." group several years ago. Some exhibitors pleaded for a bigger name to be substituted, but in some towns Paget received greater interest than a star, he revealed, advising theatremen to try to learn what the public is thinking and what it wants. He stressed this point when co-chairman Harry Lamont advanced the idea of an "absentee ballot" for drive-ins closed in the season of voting. Coyne expressed doubt that such a modification would be feasible this year, but stated that exhibition's ballots are presumed to reflect the patron's selections and that outdoor operators talk with many people who cannot otherwise be reached.

The COMPO executive agreed with Seymour L. Morris, Schine circuit publicity head, that audiences should vote on nominations, too. This could not be arranged for the period ended July 18, Coyne explained, but could be arranged for next year. He noted that all kinds of promotion for the poll are possible, commending the Oklahoma City scheme to award prizes.

Drive-In Owners Use TV For Boxoffice Pitch

BOSTON—Several drive-in circuit operators went on television in the first of a special series of TV appearances over a Boston station, taking the form of 15-minute interviews with Louise Morgan, WNAC-TV. The drive-in owners appealed directly to the family advantages of outdoor theatres, pointing out the baby-sitting savings, the excellent food available, bottle-warming services, and the fact that all children are admitted free and are welcomed to the playground facilities provided. Among the circuit executives who appeared were Edward Lider, Edward Redstone, E. M. Loew, Louis Gordon, Al Daytz, and Joseph E. Levine. The series, arranged by George Kraska, Embassy Pictures publicist, was put on in connection with the opening of "Sins Of Pompeii," which will play more than 150 New England drive-ins and four-walled theatres during July and August.

Albany

Schine Circuit one-day regional meetings were held recently in Herkimer, for the Albany territory. Speakers from the Gloversville home office were: Bernard Diamond, J. Dewey Lederer, and Sy Evans. . . . Another circuit gathering its manpower for a one-day meeting was Stanley Warner, in the Sheraton-Ten Eyck Hotel. Speakers were Harry Feinstein, James Totman, James Tobin, who was recently designated acting district manager, James Bracken, and Harry Kaplowitz. . . . Elmhart Theatres, through Elmer Lux, notified branch offices that Joseph Agresta assumed operation of the Rialto, Massena, N. Y., and the Crandell, Chatham, N. Y. Agresta also manages the Orvis, Massena.

Atlanta

Jerry Lasswell, Alexander Film Company sales representative, has been promoted to Alexander district manager for Florida, Georgia, Alabama, and central Tennessee. Clint Evans, who had to close the Moonlite Drive-in, Evergreen, Ala., after the screen tower was severely damaged by a wind storm, will reopen soon. . . . Tom R. Pike was appointed manager, new South Expressway Drive-In, owner, Georgia Theatres. . . . Ott Gross, formerly with Rialto and Central Theatres, is now with the Bailey Theatres. . . . A special election for Aug. 9 at Statesville, N. C., has been called by the City Election Board to determine whether voters want Sunday movies, barred since 1947. . . . Readers of the Knoxville, Tenn., News Sentinel recently rolled up a margin of better than 136 to 1 in favor of maintaining the present system of sponsored television programs for home viewers. "Of 820 comments," the News-Sentinel reported, "814 scored toll TV as too costly, and un-American, smacking of business monopoly."

Boston

Norman Glassman and W. Leslie Bendslev have been named co-chairmen of the two-day regional convention of Independent Exhibitors, Inc., of New England, to be held Oct. 24 and 25 at Toy Town Tavern, Winchendon, Mass. Both Glassman and Bendslev are past presidents of IENE, a unit of National Allied. Edward Lider, president, who is also general chairman for the convention, later will announce area chairmen for the six New England states. . . . "A Clerical Error," a ten-minute dramatic film made here by Bryant Haliday, opens at the Paris, New York, this week for its world premiere. "A Clerical Error" was shot entirely in Boston, the interiors on the empty stage of the Olympia, Scollay Square, and the exteriors in Union Park, an older section of the city. Cyrus Harvey, Jr., and Haliday are handling the national distribution under the title of Janus Films Company, Cambridge, Mass. . . . The Saxon, Fitchburg Mass., owned by Benjamin Sack, which has been closed for a month, reopened July 6. Manager Frank Boyle said a spot announcement radio campaign backed it.

Although he is continuing to buy and book for the York Harbor, Me., theatre, Ben Williams, B and W. Theatres, has announced the sale of the house to Charles Paris, including the block of stores housing the theatre. . . . Mike Bruno, Tilton, N. H., exhibitor, attended the national convention in Atlantic City of the Elks, as Exalted Ruler of the Franklin, N. H., lodge. . . . Sympathy to Jerry Callahan, Allied Artists sales manager, on the death of his father, Dennis J. Callahan, 80. . . . Joseph Levine, president, Embassy Pictures, flew to the west coast to attend special screenings of two new films and to set up the franchise-holders for "Sins Of Pompeii." Levine is distributing the picture nationally. . . . Paul Barker, manager, Regal, Franklin, N. H., has given a gallon of blood to the Red Cross.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., NEWS: Robert E. Hoye was recently appointed manager, the Hope, popular neighborhood house, a Lockwood and Gordon unit. Hoye was formerly an assistant, Avon Cinema, before going to South Weymouth, Mass., as manager, Cameo. . . . Willard Mathews, Majestic manager, virtually took over the amusement page of the local papers with spectacular announcements presaging "The Land Of The Pharaohs," dominating theatrical advertising for several days. . . . Willard E. Binford, for over 50 years identified with Rhode Island newspapers, recently died after a long illness. Having handled the advertising of virtually every theatre in the state, at one time or another, for the various papers he represented, Binford was well known among all theatremen.

Buffalo

Captain Edward J. Smith, 25, formerly a manager, Basil Theatres, was one of ten killed when a gasoline-laden tanker plane crashed in flames after its takeoff from Castle Air Force Base in California recently. During high school, he started working for the Basil circuit as an usher in the Varsity, continuing with them until 1942, when he enlisted in the Air Force.

Veteran Exhibitor Dies; Was Buffalo Pioneer

BUFFALO—Vincent R. McFaul, 66, president and general manager, New Buffalo Amusement Corporation, operators for Loew's Theatres, Inc., of Shea's Buffalo, Kensington, North Park, and the Bellevue, Niagara Falls, N. Y., died last fortnight in Mercy Hospital, after a brief illness.

McFaul was the dean of local showmen, having entered show business with the late Mike Shea in 1904, as assistant treasurer, Court Street, a two-a-day vaudeville house. Later he managed the Criterion for Shea, then the Hippodrome. In 1925 he became vice-president and general manager, Shea Theatre Corporation, and directed construction of the circuit's ace house, Shea's Buffalo. At one time he had 13 Shea theatres under his direction. Upon Shea's death in 1934, McFaul became president of Buffalo Theatres, Inc., merging as a Paramount partner. In 1949, the New Buffalo Amusement Corporation was formed by Loew's, Inc., and McFaul became general manager.

He was a member of Motion Picture Pioneers and Variety Club, Tent 7, Buffalo Club, and many other groups, and was a former director and treasurer, MPTOA of Western New York.

McFaul is survived by his widow, Elizabeth, and three stepchildren.

Honorably discharged in 1945, he returned to Basil, and became manager, Genesee, and later of the Victoria, where he served until his re-enlistment in 1951. . . . W. E. J. Martin, chief barker, Variety Club, announces that the Variety clubrooms will be open Monday and Saturday only until after Labor Day. . . . Edmund C. DeBerry, branch manager, Paramount, spent a week in conferences at the home office in New York. . . . Danny Gill represented Local 10, IATSE, and Bert Rhyde represented Local 233, Motion Picture Projectionists, at the IATSE meeting in the Hotel Statler last week. Every town and city in the state was represented, and the main topic of discussion was toll-TV, which the delegates have been fighting for a long time. About 150 members of IATSE attended.

Clarence Miller opened his Orleans Drive-In, Albion, N. Y. . . . Plans for Rochester's first "twin" drive-in, which will offer patrons a choice of shows, and also a place to shop before showtime, have been announced by Donald R. Stevenson, veteran Rochester exhibitor. The project will be an extension of the present Starlite.

One minute safety films, reminding spectators to obey traffic laws and show courtesy toward others using the streets and highways, are being shown this summer on 13 drive-in screens. Deputy Sheriff Joseph A. Gullo, an instructor in Sheriff Arthur Britt's safety patrol team, said the safety trailers were presented to his office by the Erie County Deputy Sheriffs Association. Gullo said 15 films, all containing different safety messages, will be rotated among the drive-ins each week throughout the season. In winter, deputy sheriffs will make the trailers available to theatres in the country outside Buffalo.

Noisy Juke Box Leads To Suit By Drive-In

DURHAM, N. C.—J. T. McSwain, owner and operator, South No. 1 Drive-In, near Cary, N. C., has filed suit asking the court to order the owner and operator of a service station across the highway to remove some high-powered lights and a noisy juke box, which he says are bothering patrons of the drive-in.

In the action filed in Wake County Superior Court, Raleigh, N. C., he charges that Clyde Cooper, owner, and Willie Lynn, operator, of Lynn's Grill and Lynn's Service Station, are using equipment that is disturbing to his customers. He alleges that five high-powered lights recently were erected at the service station and shine on the drive-in screen, forcing his customers to put coats and blankets over their cars to shield them from the glare. He charges further that a juke box with an outside speaker at the grill makes it difficult for patrons of the drive-in to hear the movie properly because of the noise. He says he has asked the defendants to correct the lights and speaker situation, but they have declined to do so.

Charlotte

C. B. Trexler, vice-president and treasurer, Stewart and Everett Theatres, Inc., announced that one of its affiliated companies, Jax Theatres, Inc., has completed plans for the construction of a modern 925-seat theatre for Jacksonville, N. C. The contract for the house went to the New River Building Company, Jacksonville. . . . William R. Waldron, who has been sales representative, Motion Picture Advertising Service Company, Inc., New Orleans, for the past eleven years, has gone back to his first love, the automobile business. However, he is still looking after MPA's television film sales. . . . H. F. Kincey, North Carolina Theatres, Inc., has another title which keeps him stepping, that of board of directors treasurer, American Trust Company. . . . The July luncheon meeting of the WOMPI was slated for Thackers Restaurant July 27. . . . The Variety Club headquarters, over the Delmonico Restaurant, was the scene of hustle and bustle when MGM and Charlotte Theatre Supply were hosts to Variety members and WOMPI members at a gala open house recently. . . . The Exchange Employes Local F33 Union has dispensed with meetings for July and August.

Chicago

Paramount gave a free showing of "Ulysses" for delegates to the National Educational Association convention. . . . Mayor Richard J. Daley was made an honorary associate member of Variety Club. Other new members are Ben F. Elrod, Maurice Glockner, and James F. Gorman. . . . The Kaye, Clinton, Ill., closed for the summer. . . . Ronald Radowski was named to the Roosevelt staff.

Balaban and Katz have signed for the Rocky Marciano-Archie Moore heavyweight bout, on closed TV from Yankee Stadium, Sept. 20. B and K usually show fight broadcasts at their Marbro, Tivoli, and Uptown. . . . Frank A. Beimer, 74, died after 41 years in exhibition, most of the time as Majestic manager, Fort Wayne, Ind. . . . Lou Abramson, Allied Theatres of Illinois, and his wife, observed their 25th wedding anniversary. . . . Elaborate preparations are being made for Variety Club's annual golf outing Aug. 26, at St. Andrew's Golf Club. Committee chairmen have been named as follows: Harry Balaban, general chairman and prizes; Vic Bernstein, baseball; Al Raymer and Harry Walders, cards; Nat Nathanson, dinner; Howard Lubliner, golf, and Johnny Jones, Mike Stern, and Sylvan Goldfinger, tickets. For the purpose of raising as much money as possible for La Rabida Sanitarium, Variety Club's principal charity, chief barker Jack Kirsch has announced audience collections will be made during the week of Aug. 12 in theatres of the Chicago area. . . . Carl Stewart is constructing a drive-in on state highway 37, just south of Bloomington, Ind.

Junior memberships in Variety Club, Tent 26, have been arranged by chief barker Jack Kirsch. There are three catagories: sons of Variety Club barkers, between ages of 21 and 30, theatre managers, film exchange bookers, and male clerical employes. Dues of $15 a year will provide participation in all the clubs' activities, but with no voting privileges. A concentrated drive for the junior memberships in under way.

Albert Pick, Sr., 86, who in 1952 donated $250,000 for the construction of the Gertrude Frank Pick Children's Center at La Rabida Sanitarium, Variety Club's main charity, in memory of his first wife, died at his Miami Beach, Fla., home of a heart attack. Surviving are Mrs. Pick, Albert, Jr., who is president of the hotel chain, the third largest in the country, which his father founded in 1926; a daughter, and three grandchildren.

School Officials Rap "Jungle" As Harmful

CHICAGO—"Blackboard Jungle" was severely criticized by delegates attending the National Educational Association convention. Particularly outspoken was Hobart H. Sommers, Chicago assistant superintendent of schools. He said that both he and Superintendent Benjamin C. Willis had decided to withhold public condemnation of the picture until it had left the Loop, believing that comment would only heighten curiosity over the film while down town.

Sommers said the picture is "harmful" in three ways, and that "if the teaching profession were as well organized as the Catholic Church, the picture never would have reached the screen. "First," he said, "it encourages delinquency; second, it makes heroes of kids who are shown making monkeys out of our entire educational system, and third, the picture's setting is thinly veiled as a vocational school, perpetuating the idea that a trade school is a place for dummies and undesirables."

Offensive Ad Copy Draws Wile Warning

COLUMBUS, O.—Theatre owners and managers should refrain from offering any ad to a newspaper which might offend readers, said Robert Wile, secretary, Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, in a bulletin on the spread of objectionable film advertising.

"To say the least," added Wile, "much of the criticism leveled at film advertising is justified." Wile said that the ITOO board of directors, at a recent Columbus meeting, felt that newspapers were justified in refusing objectionable copy. The board condemned the practice of taking critic's quotes out of context and using them in ads, when those quotes are clearly objectionable. Wile said that "there have been difficulties in Ohio" with ads on "Battle Cry" and "Blackboard Jungle." He said the directors urge every member to carefully consider the content of any ad before offering it to the newspaper.

The Catholic Chronicle at Toledo recently complained about a mailing piece for "No Greater Sin" which played a Michigan drive-in, just over the border. These are quotes from the leaflet: "We are not concerned with morals, that is another question . . . our job is to show the menace to youth and love." The leaflet also contained such phrases as "See the actual miracle of birth" . . . "Shocking beyond description" . . . "The wedding of sin" . . . "Some of the most revealing and intimate scenes ever to be filmed." The picture was advertised as "For adults only." But the leaflet added: "High school students admitted."

Wile said the use of a New York World-Telegram's critic's quotes in an ad for "The Bed" in another New York newspaper is an example of the practice of taking such quotes out of context. The ad read: "Gallic frankness about lighthearted sex . . . the brazen defiance of movie morals will stir protests but they will have to be loud ones to drown out the laughter."

Wile went on to say that the Motion Picture Association "exercises a sort of censorship over advertising but even this has been criticised. As a result, the censorship has been tightened, but the more careful scrutiny will not show up for several months, as the pressbooks for current releases and those for the next month or two have not been subjected to this new censorship." He quoted trade-paper reports that the Washington Star compelled a theatre to put shoulder straps on Yvonne de Carlo for an ad on "Shotgun," and that theatres playing "Kiss Me Deadly" were required to retouch bosom cleavage on several ads. He said "The Prodigal" has run into difficulties because of the clinch scenes with Lana Turner and Edmund Purdom in reclining positions, and said that objectionable lines were used for ads on "One Summer Of Happiness" and "Not As A Stranger." He said some newspapers in Ohio and elsewhere have refused the line, "Adults Only." Newspapers have been refusing such words as "Intimate," "Mature," "Adult." Theatres using these lines, Wile said, in many cases thought they were complying with the wishes of pressure groups.

Governor Vetoes Bill Providing Film Censorship

CHICAGO—A bill passed by the Illinois State Legislature, which would have given movie censorship rights to the Cook County Board in areas outside the city limits, was vetoed by Governor William G. Stratton. The law was to have been administered by the County Sheriff's office, and would have given that body rights over several drive-ins, at which the proposed ruling was mainly aimed. The state attorney advised the governor that the powers to be granted were too broad. They also included censorship of newspapers and other publications.

COLUMBUS, O., NEWS—By the slim margin of one vote in the Ohio House of Representatives to override Governor Lausche's veto, downtown theatres and other business firms were assured of relief in the tight parking situation. The House passed the bill to construct a 1200-car underground garage at the State House after the Senate earlier had approved the measure over the governor's veto. The garage will be within a half-block of all downtown theatres. A future extension may place additional parking space directly across State Street from Loew's Ohio, the RKO Grand, and the Hartman.

Detroit Industry Honors 20th-Fox's J. J. Lee

DETROIT — Joseph J. Lee, 20th-Fox branch manager, was honored on his recent 30th anniversary of association with the firm by a week-long celebration, one of the highlights of which was the showing of a 20th-Fox film at least once in every one of the 550 theatres serviced by the exchange. There was also an open house at the branch offices attended by more than 300 exhibitors, many of them from out-of-town.

Lee's career spans the history of motion pictures. As a boy, he started in the first film exchange in New York as a general errand-runner and, reminiscing, he recalled the contrast between today's highly specialized distribution practices and those of an independent company in 1925. As audiences became more discriminating, theatre managers resorted to hiring "voices" for the characters on the dimly-lit silent screen, and Lee branched off into a career in which he created his own dialogue and dialect for the film actors. In a period of five years in the New York area, he voiced over 2000 performances, and earned the title of the "Joe Lee Stock Company." When his voice began to fail, he made a deal for the distribution rights to Sarah Bernhardt's film venture, "La Tosca." In the simpler industry of those days, a few men could get together over coffee and determine what picture would play where, avoiding conflict and competition. Among those with whom Lee was friendly in the early days were Ben Schulberg, father of the novelist and screen writer, Al Lichtman, and Adolph Zukor.

After 18 years with 20th-Fox in New York, Lee came to Detroit as manager, has handled some of the most important product of the company's history, and has come into contact with many of the great names of the industry. Currently, he is concentrating on forthcoming 20th-Fox releases and is active in the Detroit Variety Club and Lodge 191, Free and Accepted Masons.

Houston Welcomes New 20th-Fox Branch Office

HOUSTON, TEX.—20th-Fox's new branch office, the first full-size film exchange in this city, was slated for opening this week, with a gala cocktail party for local exhibitors, branch manager Henry F. Harrell to be host at the office, located at 2119 Bagby Street.

It was further announced that the new office will have the latest in CinemaScope projection equipment, and office, inspection, and shipping facilities to best serve the needs of theatremen in the area.

Memphis Censors Ban Reissue, UA's "Hunter"

MEMPHIS—Two more motion pictures were banned from the screens of the city last fortnight by the board of censors, who refused to pass United Artists' "Night Of The Hunter" and an Ingrid Bergman re-release, "Notorious." The latter film was banned without having been viewed by the censors because the private life of Miss Bergman has incurred the disfavor of chairman Lloyd T. Binford, who said that all her films were automatically banned in Memphis. The Sunset Drive-In, across the Mississippi River in West Memphis, Ark., opened "Notorious" last week and announced that it will show "Night Of The Hunter" beginning on Aug. 5.

United Artists' branch manager Tony Tedesco revealed that he received a letter from Binford that "Night Of The Hunter" would be banned, saying that the film is the "rawest" he has ever seen. Tedesco said the curious thing is that Binford was not at the screening, which was attended by only three women members of the board. Binford later admitted he had not seen the picture, saying that he did not mean to imply in his letter that he had, but that he knew what the film was all about anyway.

The recalcitrant censors also turned down a request from U-I branch manager Richard C. Settoon to review, for a second time, "City Across The River."

Fred Hull, MGM branch manager, will serve as chairman, midway committee, for the first annual Agricultural and Industrial Fair to be staged November 10 through 19, for the benefit of the Blind Children's Foundation, the charity of Variety's Tent 44. Variety has the cooperation of the Chamber of Commerce in planning the events. . . . Leonard Allen, Paramount publicist, Atlanta, had all the poise of a movie star when he took the leading part in Jacksonville Confidential, a weekly program of WMBR-TV. It consisted of a number of street interviews on the subject of Hollywood motion pictures, followed by Leonard's studio appearance. . . . Hal Stanton, manager, Edgewood, prepared eight tape recordings of his daily radio program, in which he doubles as an organist, prior to leaving for Cuba.

Fox West Coast Names Brown Ad-Pub Head

Los Angeles—Russ Brown, Portland, Ore., a veteran of 26 years with National Theatres, assumed the reins of advertising-publicity director of Fox West Coast Theatres July 25, it was announced here by Edwin F. Zabel, FWC general manager, last week. Brown, until recently ad chief, and for many years a district manager, NT's Evergreen division, now heads promotion for the 150 Pacific Coast houses.

With the new arrangement, Thornton Sargent, NT public relations director, who, since 1951, has also been supervising FWC's ad-pub department, will thus be afforded more time to devote on a national scale to the circuit's increased activities under Elmer C. Rhoden, president. Also under the new set-up, Pete Latsis will become Brown's assistant in the handling of publicity campaigns for Los Angeles. Jack Case will continue in the department here.

Other ad men under Brown will include Fay S. Reeder, San Francisco, and Oscar Nyberg, Portland. Dean Hyskell will continue as editor of the company publication, "Showman," as well as handle the circuit's Los Angeles directory advertising.

Reade Circuit Drive Honors Film Buyer

OAKHURST, N. J.—Managers of the nearly 40 conventional and drive-in theatres of the Walter Reade Theatres, Inc., will honor film buyer Jack P. Harris with a five-week drive starting Aug. 2, it was announced last fortnight by Walter Reade, Jr., president. The drive will be basically patterned after a five-week president's drive held last summer, and it is expected that prizes will total more than the $4,000 awarded as weekly and as grand prizes last year. Managers will be awarded points for their efforts in improving theatre grosses, in increasing attendance, in advertising and promotion, in theatre operations, and in refreshment sales. Harris, one of the key executives of the circuit, is widely known in the industry.

Sid Kleper, College, invited any policeman, fireman, taxi driver, or others who assisted in the emergency delivery of a child, to bring the family to see "Not As A Stranger."

HARTFORD NEWS: Harold Cummings, formerly manager, Riverdale Drive-In, West Springfield, Mass., E. M. Loew airer, has been named manager, Smith Management's Meadows Drive-In, which is now under construction. . . . Joe Miklos, Stanley Warner Embassy, New Britain, Conn., served as relief manager, Strand, while manager Jack Sanson was on vacation. . . . Joe Mansfield, United Artists' exploiteer, worked on "Not As A Stranger" in the area. . . . Local sporting promoters have rented the 4200-seat State from the Harris Brothers, owners and operators, for Aug. 2 boxing show, featuring TV personality Chico Vejar and Hartfordite Vic Cardell. It is understood that the ring will be erected over the orchestra pit and the front rows, thus turning the house into an amphitheatre. . . . Three managerial shifts were disclosed by Harry Feinstein, Stanley Warner zone manager, to handle a number of situations during absence of Joe Liss. Named to supervise Liss' territory was James Tobin, Warner, Bridge-

Fred R. Greenway, Loew's Poli Palace, Hartford, Conn., recently had this model carrying appropriate signs as street bally for Times' "The Naked Amazon." She appeared in downtown streets, parks, etc., for several days.

College Film Series Spurs Industry Interest

Providence—The ninth annual Motion Picture Study Group of the University of Rhode Island is offering a series of movies on "The Director and His Film." The first program was devoted to D. W. Griffith and his movie "Intolerance." Further programs during the summer will include Sergei Eisenstein's "Alexander Nevsky"; Robert Flaherty's' "Man Of Aran"; Alfred Hitchcock's "Dial M For Murder," and John Huston's "Sierra Madre." Plans are underway to secure and present "Le Million," directed by Rene Clair.

So popular was the series when it was presented nine years ago that it has become an annual fixture. Membership is by subscription only, with no single-performance tickets sold. Dues are $2 for the complete series.

The course, which includes round-table discussions and panels, creates considerable interest in the affairs of the industry, and its many phases and technicalities. Movie-goers who have attended these screenings in the past, have come away with a better understanding of the problems of the industry, as well as an appreciation of the finer points embodied in the production of motion picture.

Many exhibitors have voiced their approval of the program and said they wish it were possible for every movie fan to attend.

CANDYDLY SPEAKING

EXTRA PROFITS

THE KEY to successful concession merchadising is traffic. The purchase of any "impulse" item is dependent on getting that item in front of large groups of potential customers and instilling in them the desire to buy through attractive display, clean surroundings and courteous service.

THERE IS no salesman more courteous than the drink vending machine. It never talks back, gives dependable service, and adds to concession buying the element of fun through the operation of an interesting mechanical instrument, the kind of fun that most Americans find particularly intriguing.

THE MAJOR PROBLEM, then, becomes one of strategic location of vending machines for maximum returns. Many theatremen have found it advisable to maintain more than one vending machine. The theatregoer, entering the theatre to see a show or leaving after having enjoyed the film, is confronted by an attractive drink machine, dramatically lit, located near the entrance and exit, reminding him of thirst. He literally sells himself.

THE POPCORN fancier or other patron of the concession stand finds a drink vendor near the candy area and again sells himself. With vending machines available handling a variety of carbonated and non-carbonated flavors, eliminating the change-making problem, and becoming in every way increasingly attractive, easier to maintain and service, and handling peak loads efficiently while leaving concession personnel free to service other items, traffic attraction, becomes the prime concern of the operator.

PERHAPS YOU, the exhibitor, could situate an extra machine in your lounge area, near the stairway approach to the balcony, or at some other strategic location where traffic is heavy. The worth of vending machines has been proven; it only remains to make certain that they are doing all they can to boost your EXTRA PROFITS.

Vending Success Depends On Location Near Heavy Traffic

Attractive design, proper site can insure maximum returns from large variety of colorful machines available to boost concession profits.

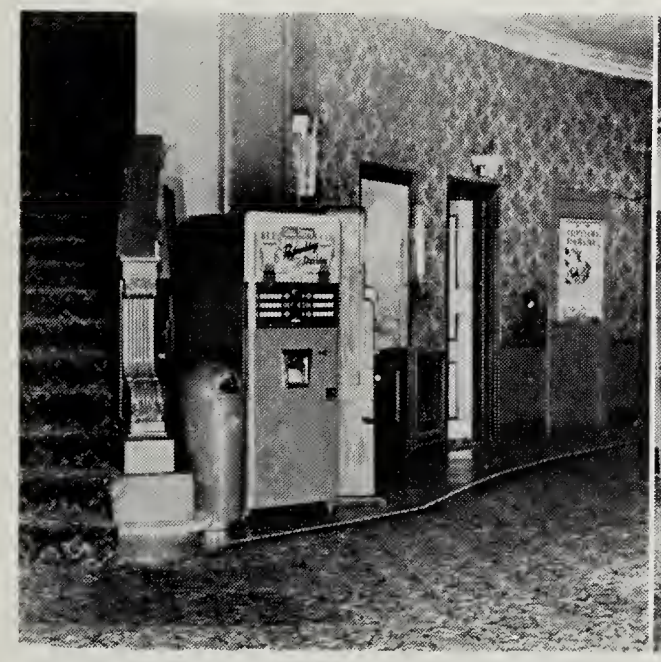
To secure the maximum in extra profits from his automatic vending machine installations, the alert exhibitor will be extremely careful to locate them in those places in the situation which consistently suffer heavy patronage traffic. He will make sure also, that they are prominent enough to take the eye of even the most difficult sales possibility. On this page are pictures representing several examples of the installation of Apco multi-cup soft drink dispensers in several of the Randforce Amusement Company's houses in Brooklyn, N. Y.

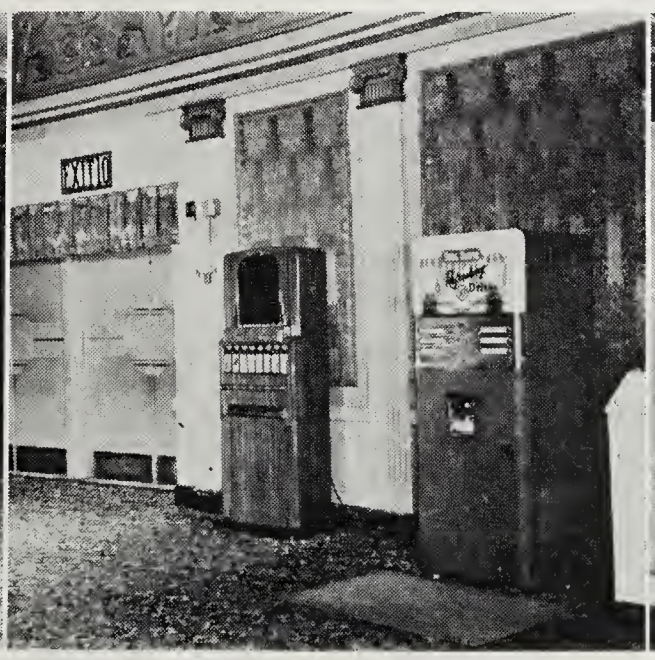
When a concession stand is in operation in the theatre, the most obvious and desirable location for the drink dispenser is, of course, adjacent to the stand, close enough to benefit from concession sales, yet far enough away to preclude congestion in the area. The automatic vendor relieves fountain personnel of mixing drinks, freeing them to perform other important services for extra profits. Apco's extraordinary 10-drink dispenser, for instance, offers maximum selectivity to please the taste preference of almost every customer. It is also a profitable course to supplement a lobby drink dispenser with another in the lounge, which can secure sales to many patrons who seek to relax in less congested areas during a picture break. The wide range of vendors available today assures the theatre owner of being able to install a machine which will fit the location and compliment the decor and, of course, the larger the machine, the greater the profits, in the ratio in which it can cater to peak crowds efficiently and quickly.

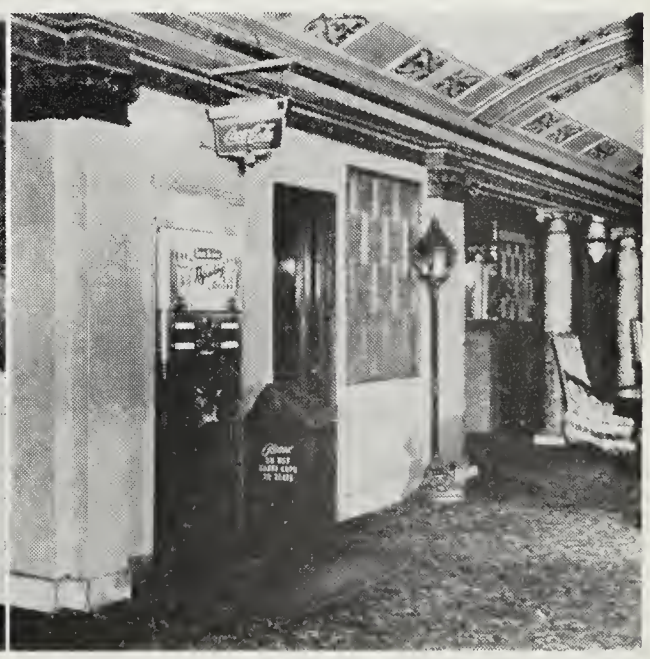
Inevitably, extra profits in the theatre resolves into the problem of offering excellent-quality merchandise with a minimum amount of overhead and maintenance expense, together with speed for the patron eager not to miss any part of the entertainment. There can be little question but that automatic drink dispensers help solve this problem.

The 10-Drink Dual Cup Station SodaShoppe, by Apco, is installed near the concession stand in the Meserole. It serves two at a time for double grosses and double profits, yet is unobtrusive in its surroundings and in its appearance.

The 4-drink machine found in the lounge of the Ridgewood supplements the 6-drink vendor in the lobby. Patrons' demand for the excellent cold beverages from Apco's cup dispensers was so great that it has been found both machines are profitable.







The SodaShoppe is found again in its 6-drink capacity in the lobby of the Ridgewood, representing almost a concession stand in itself, offering four carbonated and two non-carbonated drinks. In the Savoy, center and left, the automatic vendors are found again blending with their surroundings and located at crucial sales points near staircases and washrooms to attract attention from a maximum number of patrons.

Popcorn Seasoning Is Important, Simonin's Ryan Tells IPA Meeting

By JAMES A. RYAN
President, C. F. Simonin's Sons, Inc.

I FEEL somewhat like St. Peter—not in the sense that I have his missionary zeal at all, and not in the work he succeeded in doing for humanity, but for something else. He said, "Lord, it is good for us to be here." I think it is good for us to be here. It is good for us to be with each other for a common purpose, a common mission, to make this fast growing industry a better industry.

As we meet in our various organizational segment meetings, we realize more and more each day, I think, that it is only by such cooperation that we can give each other, and give to the parent organization what IPA needs to be a success and bring back to each of us the material rewards that are to be realized. As we give to the organization, we not only get back those rewards, but we get the spiritual blessings that working together in the spirit of brotherhood brings to us all.

This subject, "Popcorn Seasoning is Important to Your Product," is a very interesting one because I do not think that many of us realize what an important place fat takes in our economy and also in our physiological makeup. If we all had the sort of wife I have, who deprecates fat and tries to keep her own waistline down, as well as that of the other members of the family, you probably would not have much respect for fat, as such. But in the popcorn industry, fat is important. Fat is important as a seasoning. Fat has always been important as a seasoning in foods—always, and possibly to a greater extent than we realize.

You can go down the list of pork and beans, bacon and eggs, and you will quickly see that fat is a seasoning in food and it is a very necessary part of the diet, and it also contributes greatly to the flavor of the food we eat. That extends all the way through. I know my Italian friends pour olive oil into their soup. Fat goes into our pies. We would not get a good pie crust if we did not have fat in it.

Fat has certain peculiar values, but it is more important as a seasoning in the food we eat. It is not surprising that popcorn is seasoned with fat which is an important component in the flavor of this popcorn that you all produce.

The quality of seasoning in popcorn need hardly be mentioned, I suppose. Those of you who buy the various types of seasonings that are available in the form of fats of one kind or another have bought them for one reason or another possibly because you thought they were traditional, something to buy in connection with popping of corn, and you have not been too much concerned with the background of the fats that have been used, or possibly the basic reasons why they were used.

But there, again, we have fat being used to a considerable extent in popcorn and very necessarily so. The flavor of the oil or fat that is used in popping corn is a very important element—so much so that there are flavoring additives given to the oils, in case of butter flavors or in the case of bacon flavor, as my friends have developed in other ways.

Jim Cameron, Lakehead district manager, Famous Players Canadian Corporation, states that this background candy bar display, 32 inches by 40 inches, definitely produced results with sales actually doubled on the large economy 25 cent package of popcorn at the Capitol, Fort William.

However, in my end of the business, the refining end of the business, we try in our refining processes to remove all flavor possible in the manufacturing process, leaving it to the corn popper or the manufacturer of finished popcorn seasoning to add such flavor as he thinks his customer may desire.

The shelf life of the product is an important thing in the use of fat, and the selection of a fat for popping corn is very highly essential and that is something to be borne in mind when we are buying fats. I think we find without any question of doubt, that where popcorn is going into the retail stores to be held there until it is sold over a period of time, definite or indefinite, that coconut oil has been and probably will continue to be the best oil for that purpose. The reason is that coconut oil, of all of these fats that we have available, is the least susceptible to the absorption of oxygen and therefore is better than some of our other fats.

Secondly, I think it will be generally conceded among us in dealing with popcorn seasonings that peanut oil is a desirable popcorn seasoning. However, those who pre-pop corn and send it out into the country to be sold at a later date know that peanut oil does not fill the bill as well as coconut oil does. There isn't any question about that at all.

For popping on location, where the popcorn is going to be consumed in a very short time, let's say a couple of days, then the advantages of peanut oil come to mind, and it has some advantages which may or may not be compelling to those who pop corn. Peanut oil being liquid oil is easier to handle, while coconut oil is a hard fat and has to be melted before it can be used.

But peanut oil for popping corn, where it is to be consumed in a very short time, certainly is a very highly desirable product for that purpose.

The cost of these oils is an important thing to you, but speaking from the broad general standpoint, it would appear to me that the cost of oil in comparison with the cost of a ten-cent box of corn or the package of popcorn that the pre-popper sells, is quite minor, and a very small element in the final cost of his product. Therefore I would leave with you the thought that the first cost of the seasoning you buy is not as important a consideration as the proper type of oil for you to use, the excellence of quality of the product that you purchase, the reliability of the supplier, the development of friendly relations with him so that your information on market trends and the general well being of your business, as well as his, may be fostered in all respects.

In the use of these seasonings, I think it is important to mention that there can be too much used, or too little used, conceding for the moment the seasoning value of the fats that are used in seasoning, which certainly will not fulfill the purpose if too little be used. By the same token, if too much fat be used, there will be waste. I think in combination with the supplier of the fat, and with the manufacturer of the machines, the proper amount of fat to be used in popping corn can easily be ascertained and it should be followed at all times.

Since fat, even though it has the shelf life and the durability of coconut oil, let us say, is still a fragile material, it is very highly important that the equipment in which it is used be kept in good condition at all times.

I have seen popping kettles being used which had become carbonized, that would have been truly shocking to the consumer if he had looked into the kettles. If the kettles are cleaned regularly, there is no reason at all why they should not be kept in a nice bright condition at all times.

I think that you might be interested in markets and market trends. None of us in this country know very much about the coconut oil market because that is truly a world commodity, and the Philippines, from which most of our coconut oil comes, depend very largely upon the way Europe buys. And if Europe comes into the Philippines and buys a lot of the commodity over a short period of time, the price goes up, and if they pull out the price goes down. It is for that reason that it is difficult for us to see far ahead and try to visualize a trend in coconut oil prices over a long period.

There is one element that we have thought might have some effect upon the coconut oil prices, and that is the give-away program of our United States Government. As you probably know, we have been beset by terrifically heavy surplus quantities of cottonseed oil in this country which the government accumulated under the price support program on cottonseed, and the new administration has been making very serious attempts to get rid of that surplus at sacrifice prices abroad. As a result, at lot of cottonseed oil has been given away to Europe and the European manufacturers of margarine and shortening and coconut oil.

We thought that might have some effect on coconut oil prices because certainly

ABC Vending Plans New Distribution Unit

NEW YORK—Plans for the immediate construction in Long Island City of a 1,000,000 cubic foot distribution center to serve the New York and metropolitan area, were announced by the ABC Vending Corporation. The new building, when completed, will also house the organization's national executive offices.

The company is a leading operator of attended stands and automatic concessions in the theatrical, motion picture, sports, transportation, and industrial fields, with merchandising and sales activities in the more populous communities of over 34 states and the District of Columbia.

The concrete, steel, and masonry building of advanced one-story and mezzanine design, will be located on Northern Boulevard and 50th Street, Queens, adjacent to principal traffic arteries. It will be erected by the Kretzer Construction Company, Inc., industrial builders of Flushing, N. Y.

Featuring efficient function throughout, the building will employ the latest principles of mechanized warehousing. Indoor, all-weather loading ports will accommodate 30 trucks, with ample additional off-street parking facilities. Ventilation and even temperature will be fully controlled by air conditioning apparatus and special construction techniques.

In making the announcement, Charles L. O'Reilly, chairman of the board, ABC Vending Corporation, pointed out that expanding company operations in the face of mounting traffic congestion had made replacement and consolidation of its two present mid-town Manhattan locations with new and more strategically accessible quarters in Long Island, advisable.

Said O'Reilly, "Erection of this large, ultra-modern and centrally located building is ABC's way of dynamically reinforcing our confidence that the vending industry in metropolitan New York and the nation continues to have a sound and bright future.

"The new distribution center has been custom blue-printed for the expeditious movement of a great volume of incoming and outgoing shipments, handled with maximum efficiency. Industrial engineers have worked closely with ABC executives, sales, and administrative department heads in designing this building as one of the world's most up-to-date distribution centers, one that will fully meet present-day demands as well as those of future growth."

Drive-In Scores With Donuts

WAPPING, CONN.—Bill Daugherty, East Windsor Drive-In, a Lockwood and Gordon unit, has discovered an additional source of revenue in sale of donuts during the late intermission on Saturday nights. "The drive-in, by request some weeks ago, started selling donuts during Saturday night intermission, and customers, realizing they won't have to dash out of the house early Sunday morning for donuts, have been buying them heavily," Doug Amos, Bill's boss, reports. "As many as 80 dozen have been sold on a Saturday night."

Roxy Tie-in Sales On "Lady" Bring Added Bally, Profits

NEW YORK—William J. Moclair, managing director, Roxy, established a tremendous merchandising area for the sale to patrons of Walt Disney's "Lady And The Tramp" items.

Opened to the public prior to the opening of the feature-length CinemaScope cartoon, the area was strategically placed in the Roxy's spacious Rotunda. It centered around a 25-foot semi-circular glass counter, brilliantly lighted to exhibit the thousands of items available. A 60 x 80 color background further dramatized the important and popular stopping-off place for theatre patrons, either entering or leaving the theatre. Five especially trained uniformed attendants were on constant duty at the stand, under the supervision of Myron Levy, assistant manager in charge of merchandising.

The vast stock of attractive items, of interest not only to youngsters, but all ages, included 2,000 "Lady And The Tramp" charm bracelets; 500 all-speed records of tunes from the musical score; 2,000 story books; 3,000 comic books; 150 books of the popular musical score; 500 children's wash mitts; 450 girls' bubble bath and powder sets; 500 stuffed "Lady" and "Tramp" animals; 200 puppets; 250 model clay sets; 100 McCall's cut-out motifs; 200 hat box hand bags; plus a display of girls' Cheryl May "Lady And The Tramp" blouses.

Levy estimated that upwards of 10,000 items were carried in stock at the Roxy merchandising area during the run of "Lady And The Tramp," and from indications during the period preceding the opening, the Roxy's "Walt Disney Store" proved a fabulously successful venture.

we have demonstrated in this country that we can make just as fine margarine with cottonseed oil and soybean oil, as ever was made with coconut oil. Even so, Europe has held pretty much to the use of coconut oil in the manufacture of margarine, and we felt that, as they found out how to make good margarine they would need less coconut oil and they would buy less in the Philippines, and the price would come down.

That was the long view which some of our people finally held, and it has come to pass, notwithstanding these heavy shipments of cottonseed oil to Europe, that Europe still continues to go in and buy a lot of coconut oil in the Philippines and all through the east Asiatic area. The price of coconut oil reflects that. As I said before, as they pull out of the market, the price weakens somewhat.

As far as peanut oil is concerned, we have a very serious shortage of peanut oil in this country arising from the price of the pork program, as one cause, which required the Secretary of Agriculture to reduce progressively over three or four years the acreage planted to peanuts and also the repeal of legislation which permitted our farmers to plant peanuts for crushing into oil without penalty. That legislation was repealed a couple of years ago because it was abused and between the new cuts in acreage this year and very serious droughts in the Far East, we will have practically no peanuts for crushing this year.

I think, however, our markets have already felt the ultimate effect of that situation, and we have already arranged to bring in from abroad considerable quantities of peanut oil at prices below those in the United States. As a result, I don't expect the price of peanut oil to go materially higher than it is now, and I hope it will ease off as the Europeans offer continually larger quantities of peanut oil in this country.

Manley Develops New Concession Combination

Coliseum

KANSAS CITY—Manley, Inc., announces a new machine in their line. The Manley Coliseum Model is a combination of a Manley Ice-O-Bar and a Manley Display Console Popcorn machine.

The drink machine is a two-faucet Ice-O-Bar, and has a capacity of 1,000 soft drinks at a temperature of 40 degrees or less with three volumes of carbonation hourly, provided the incoming water temperature is 80 degrees or less and an adequate supply of water is available. The drink machine section is stainless steel with red Formica top. Reserve cold storage in the refrigerator compartment for an additional six gallons of syrup gives reserve capacity equivalent to an additional 27 cases of bottled drinks. The utility storage compartment is designed to hold a CO_2 gas bottle.

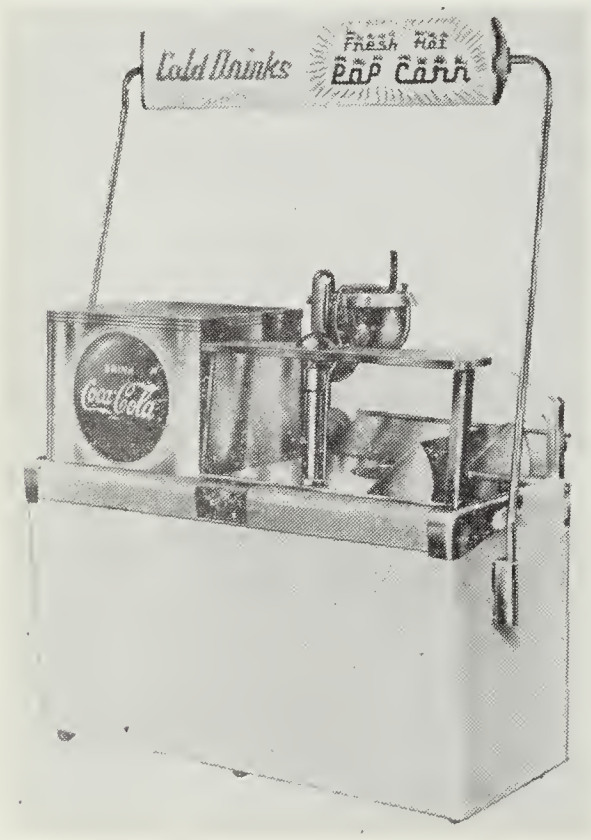
The popcorn machine has an Aristocrat cascade kettle, an elevator warmer capable of holding 72 1½-oz. popcorn cartons. It is available with either 12-oz. or 16-oz. kettle.

Refresherette

Manley, Inc., announces the Manley Refresherette, a compact snack bar occupying only 14 sqare feet, designed for speed, efficiency and service. It presents an opportunity to install food service in a place of business without the heavy capital outlay usually required when installing a fountain or kitchen.

Basically it is a combination of a two-faucet Manley Ice-O-Bar soft drink dispenser, a rotary hot dog grill spotlighted from an illuminated sign above, a two cubic foot refrigerator, bun steamer or toaster, three condiment cups, and a Maple carving block.

The drink machine has a capacity of 1,000 soft drinks, at a temperature of 40 degrees or less, with three volumes of carbonation hourly. The rotary hot dog grill has a capacity of 18 hot dogs every five minutes. Total capacity is 216 hot dogs per hour. The cabinet is baked enamel on steel. The drink machines section is stainless steel with red Formica top. It is designed for use either as a counter end or to stand independenly.



Sweden Shows New Ice Cream Dishes

SEATTLE—A new soft-serve dessert sherbet called "Passion Fruit" found popular favor with booth visitors in the Sweden Freezer local dealer booth at the recent Washington State Restaurant Convention. The fruit, grown in the Hawaiian Islands and also known as "Lilikoi," is used in the new soft-serve sherbet base which is made by Richardson and Holland, western topping and flavor manufacturer, and is expected to find favorable reception in the drive-in concession field as well as restaurants.

In addition to the special sherbet, which was dispensed from one head of a double-head Sweden automatic continuous fountain freezer, booth visitors were served sundaes, sodas, and a la modes made with their choice of either a high or low butterfat product. The high butterfat ice cream was drawn from the second head of the double-head machine, while the low butterfat product was dispensed from another Sweden Freezer. Specialty dishes such as parfaits and fresh fruit shortcakes were also made up and served to show the speed of this new automatic system of handling ice cream products. Milk shakes were dispensed from a Frigidmixer milk shake machine that turned out complete shakes that needed only the addition of flavor and a few seconds on the spinner before serving.

One of the outstanding features of the booth was a colorful presentation in full-color slides of the many ice cream disnes that can be made with the Sweden Automatic Fountain System, from the standard fountain items to new specialty dishes that are attractive and yet are inexpensive and easy to prepare.

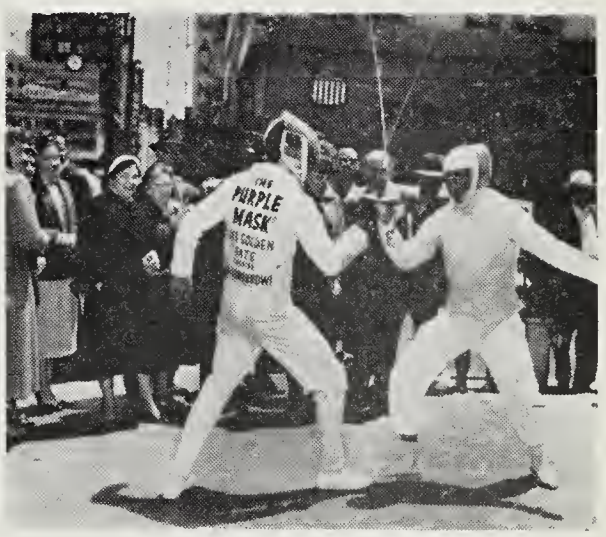
INDIANAPOLIS

In connection with the local promotion of U-I's "This Island Earth," Circle, Indianapolis, manager Dal Schuder used an attractive model recently to hand out special "Metaluna" money, appropriately numbered so that some was good for free admission if the number was posted at the theatre.

SAN FRANCISCO

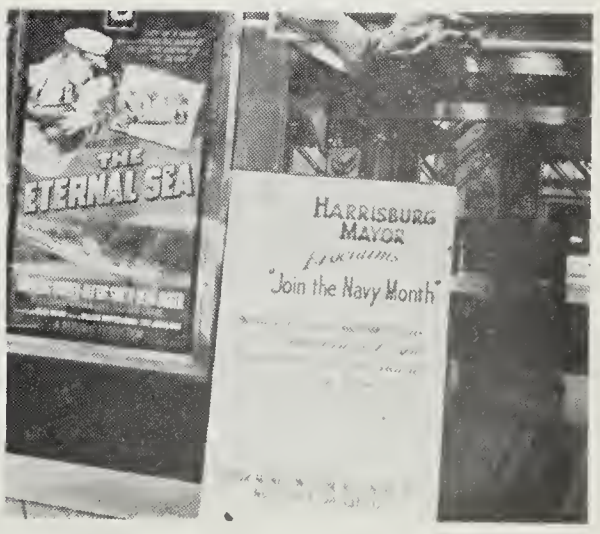


Mark Alling, manager, Golden Gate, San Francisco, aided by U-I promotion rep Mike Vogel, recently developed this crowd attracting bally of two appropriately attired swordsmen duelling on the streets downtown to herald U-I's "The Purple Mask."

BALTIMORE, MD.

A free give-away air conditioner, recently promoted by Rodney Collier, manager, SW Stanley, Baltimore, Md., at no cost to the theatre attracted many patrons to the lobby. The person stating in 25 words or less the best reason, in the opinion of the judges, for wanting the new air conditioner, will win it.

HARRISBURG, PA.



So confident was Bernard J. Bispeck, manager, Senate Harrisburg, Pa., recently that Republic's "The Eternal Sea" would please patrons that he guaranteed the film with a money back offer as stated on his one-sheet board. He also had the Mayor of Harrisburg proclaim "Join The Navy Month" in connection with his showing of film.

Northwest Variety Unit Seeks Club Charter

SEATTLE—Plans for the formation of a Variety Club of the Pacific Northwest and Alaska were finalized at an organizational dinner at the New Washington Hotel. Approximately 85 attended the affair, which was preceded by a cocktail hour graciously hosted by Pepsi-Cola and Glaser Brothers. A request for a charter has been submitted to Variety Club International headquarters, Miami, Fla. Rotus Harvey, Variety International representative-at-large, came up from San Francisco, to assist in the local club formation.

A committee of 15 was selected to tentatively guide the club's activities until the charter is granted. Five temporary officers elected were Bud Saffle, chief barker; Ed Cruea, first assistant chief barker; Glen Haviland, second assistant barker; Fred Danz, property master, and C. D. Gustavson, dough guy. The rest of the steering committee includes B. C. Johnson, Joe Rosenfield, Keith Beckwith, Bill Thedford, Jr., Harry Plunkett, Bob Parnell, Art Greenfield, Frank Christy, and Doug Forbes.

Plans call for a charter dinner on Aug. 18, at which George Hoover, international chief barker, is expected to present the charter. To date, over 50 memberships have been paid, a combination $15 initiation fee and dues covering the balance of 1955.

Variety Club welcomes everyone connected with the amusement and entertainment industry. Membership in the group is not limited to motion picture personnel, and is extended to TV, radio, sports, and newspaper people.

The Phenix City Story (5525)

DOCUMENTARY
87½M.
With prologue
100M.

ESTIMATE: Highly engrossing and exploitable thriller.

CAST: John McIntire, Richard Kiley, Kathryn Grant, Edward Andrews, Lenka Peterson, Biff McGuire, Truman Smith, Jean Carson, Meg Myles, Katharine Marlowe, John Larch, Allen Nourse, James Edwards, Helen Martin, Otto Hulett, George Mitchell. Ma Beachie and James Ed Seymour appear as themselves. Produced by Samuel Bischoff and David Diamond; directed by Phil Karlson.

STORY: This is the documented story of what happened in Phenix City, Ala., when crime took over the local city administration under the violent grip of bosses, hoodlums, and men higher up in the state legislature. When several ruthless murders are committed, virtually in the open, decent citizens attempt a strong reform movement. They try to enlist the aid of John McIntire, eminent attorney, who declines to commit himself to either side. When his son, Richard Kiley, returns from overseas, he joins the citizen's committee, which angers the mob administration. Several bloody murders are committed to intimidate the committee, the police ignore the situation, and the local courts and juries are afraid. McIntire joins the committee, realizing the only way for him to oust the administration is to run for state attorney general. On election day, violence is threatened in Phenix City and voters are terrorized, but the rest of the state votes McIntire into office. Before he is sworn in the gang leaders murder McIntire because of the threat he represents to their century-old racket, with the result that the governor puts the city under martial law. Kiley is elected to fill his father's office and swears to reform the city.

X-RAY: A shocking and almost unbelievable story, this hits the screen with high dramatic realism and impact. Cast with new personalities, all of whom give good performances, and excellently directed and photographed, this film should hit high grosses if properly exploited. For audiences who like action and explosive drama, this is it. The aspect ratio is 1.85-1. One song, "Phenix City Blues," is heard.

AD LINES: "One Man's Courage Defies The Rotten Core Of The Underworld"; "The True Story Of Crime And Violence On Your Doorstep"; "The Dramatic And Explosive Tale Of Crime And Sin That Could Have Happened In Your City."

COLUMBIA

The Gun That Won The West (809)

WESTERN
71M.
(Technicolor)

ESTIMATE: Satisfactory action programmer.

CAST: Dennis Morgan, Paula Raymond, Richard Denning, Chris O'Brien, Robert Bice, Michael Morgan, Roy Gordon, Howard Wright, Dick Cutting, Howard Negley, Kenneth MacDonald. Produced by Sam Katzman; directed by William Castle.

STORY: In the late 1800's, Colonel Roy Gordon and his troops are assigned the job of constructing a chain of forts in the Sioux Indian territory of Wyoming. Gordon recruits former cavalry scouts Dennis Morgan and Richard Denning. Morgan and Denning are friendly with Sioux chief Robert Bice, and it is felt that a peace treaty with the Indians can be made. If war with the Indians should ensue, a new type of Springfield rifle is being manufactured. Morgan, Denning, and Denning's wife, Paula Raymond, arrive at the fort where the troops are stationed. Chief Bice and his braves arrive at the fort for a conference with Gordon. Gordon and Morgan try to pacify the Indian chief, but Denning, in a drunken fit, attempts to scare the Indians into submission. Chief Bice threatens war if his territory is invaded. Gordon, Morgan, and Raymond accompany a military expedition into the Indian country and are attacked. A dispatch is sent back to the fort telling of the need for the new rifles. Denning, in an attempt to prevent an Indian attack, goes to Bice and shows him the potency of the new Springfield. Bice realizes that it will be futile to fight against the new guns, but he thinks he can attack Gordon's troops before the guns arrive. Denning escapes from the Indians and warns the troops of the attack. Morgan risks his life to intercept the reinforcements, armed with the guns, and lead them to the troops now under attack. The reinforcements arrive in the nick of time, and the Indians are routed by the Springfields.

X-RAY: Containing abundant action in the form of gunplay, Indian attacks, and heroics by Morgan and Denning, this entry will serve as an okeh programmer. The story is somewhat routine with the direction, acting, and production being fair. Story and screen play by James B. Gordon.

TIP ON BIDDING: Low program rates.

AD LINES: "Outnumbered By A Band Of Savage Indians, They Had Only An Untried Weapon To Protect Them"; "The Mighty Sioux Nation In A Battle For Survival"; "They Had To Defeat A Mighty Indian Tribe . . . With An Untried Weapon."

The Night Holds Terror (807)

MELODRAMA
86M.

ESTIMATE: Well-made suspenseful entry.

CAST: Jack Kelly, Hildy Parks, Vince Edwards, John Cassavetes, David Cross, Edward Marr, Jack Kruschen, Joyce McCluskey, Jonathan Hale, Barney Phillips, Charles Herbert. Written, produced, and directed by Andrew Stone.

STORY: Driving home across the desert, aircraft worker Jack Kelly picks up hitchhiker Vince Edwards, who robs him of 10 dollars. He is told to drive to a rendezvous where they are met by John Cassavetes and David Cross, who are enraged over the small haul and are about to kill him when he suggests that he can sell his car and turn over the proceeds to them. Since the dealer can supply only half the cash with the balance to come from the bank the next morning, the trio decides to spend the night with Kelly at his home and take over to the dismay of wife Hildy Parks and their two youngsters. After a night of terror, he gets the money, but they are reluctant to let him get away alive for fear of being arrested. They hold him as a kidnap hostage hoping for really big money from his wealthy father. Parks notifies the police who strive to capture the trio without any fuss or news announcements. They are thwarted until the telephone company is able to provide enough clues as to their whereabouts when they phone. This permits their capture with Kelly unhurt.

X-RAY: Ingrained with suspense from start to finish, this entry should prove immensely entertaining to those who like to view their pictures from the edge of their seats. It is the sort of film that is short on names but long on all other phases of entertainment, and there is a good chance that word-of-mouth can start this off and help it at the boxoffice. The story told in matter-of-fact fashion starts out fast and winds up in a faster climax, while the cast is good as is the direction

MGM

The King's Thief (532)

MELODRAMA 78M.

(CinemaScope)
(Eastman Color)

ESTIMATE: Period piece for program has names to assist.

CAST: Ann Blyth, Edmund Purdom, David Niven, George Sanders, Roger Moore, John Dehner, Sean McClory, Tudor Owen, Melville Cooper, Alan Mowbray, Rhys Williams, Joan Elan, Charles Davis, Ashley Cowan, Ian Wolfe, Paul Cavanagh. Directed by Robert Z. Leonard; produced by Edwin H. Knopf.

STORY: George Sanders as Charles on the throne of England in 1662 leans heavily on the advice of Duke David Niven and sentences to death all Niven accuses of treachery, with Niven hoping to kill off all of Sanders' loyal friends and then assume the throne himself. One of those so killed is the father of Ann Blyth, who returns from France to avenge his death. Niven is held up and robbed of a black book containing names and addresses of victims past and future by former officer in Sanders' army, Edmund Purdom, and his friends. Purdom and Blyth become friends, but before they can plan any action with the book, Niven tracks them down, wounds Purdom, recovers the book, and then jails the former officer along with his friend Roger Moore. Blyth helps them escape and they bring Niven's treachery to Sanders' attention in a surprise meeting in the Tower of London. Purdom wins a duel with Niven and forces a confession, Sanders pardons and rewards Purdom and looks as though a wedding between him and Blyth is in the offing.

X-RAY: There's a goodly bit of action, intrigue, and colorful settings from the days of yore to be found in this entry which should find a favorable niche on the program. The story is of average interest, and the cast and direction as well as the production are adequate for the set needs. The names may be of assistance in the selling. The screen play is by Christopher Knopf, based on a story by Robert Hardy Andrews.

TIP ON BIDDING: Program price.

AD LINES: "He Had To Steal To Save His Life"; "A Thief Without Peer In The Kingdom And The Story Of His Adventures"; "He Stole A Kiss Or A Jewel Where He Could Find Either Or Both."

PARAMOUNT

To Catch A Thief (5502)

MYSTERY COMEDY 106M.

(VistaVision)
(Color by Technicolor)
(Filmed mostly on the Riviera)

ESTIMATE: High rating entertainment.

CAST: Cary Grant, Grace Kelly, Jessie Royce Landis, John Williams, Charles Vanel, Brigitte Auber, Jean Martinelli, Georgette Anys, Roland Lesaffre, Jean Hebey, Rene Blanchard. Produced and directed by Alfred Hitchcock.

STORY: When a series of jewel thefts occur in and around Cannes, one-time jewel thief Cary Grant is suspected although he has gone into retirement. He eludes the police until he can get in touch with friend, Charles Vanel, restaurant owner and one-time head of the French underground. Also working in the restaurant are several other ex-convicts who, along with Grant, escaped from jail during the Nazi occupation and did work for the underground which merited them a parole. Vanel agrees to help his establish his innocence, and he is helped to escape by young Brigitte Auber, who has a crush on him. Vanel puts him in touch with John Williams, insurance investigator for the firm that has had to pay for all of the losses, and he agrees to help Grant by supplying a list of possible victims. He introduces him to two of them, Jesse Royce Landis and her daughter, Grace Kelly. The latter begins to suspect his real identity. Landis is robbed with Grant in the vicinity. Grant sets a trap but is almost killed by the gang of real jewel thieves who wind up causing the death of one of their own men. Another trap is set at a huge costume ball where with the aid of Landis, Kelly, and Williams, Grant is able to trap the burglar, Auber, who works for Vanel.

X-RAY: Smooth and engrossing entertainment is what this entry has to offer, along with fine performances by Grant, Kelly, and Landis, who with the bright and witty dialogue do much to make it all seem possible and realistic. While not as suspense-laden as some other Hitchcock entries, this one has a full quota of the commodity so that audiences will be highly interested from start to finish. Backgrounds and settings of the picturesque Riviera add much to the value of the film. Direction and production are in the better category. This will be appreciated and enjoyed by adult audiences with good word-of-mouth to follow and with better business resulting. The screen play is by John Michael Hayes, based on the novel by Davis Dodge.

TIP ON BIDDING: Higher rates.

AD LINES: "Breathless Adventure And Suspense On The Riviera"; "He Had A Way With Women And Jewels And Appreciated Both In Their Proper Setting"; "A Trap To 'Catch A Thief' Makes For An Adventure In Suspense And Romance."

RKO

Son Of Sinbad (513)

COMEDY DRAMA 88M.

(Color by Technicolor)

ESTIMATE: Entry has exploitation angles.

CAST: Dale Roberston, Sally Forrest, Lili St. Cyr, Vincent Price, Mari Blanchard, Leon Askin, Jay Novello, Raymond Greenleaf, Neijia Ates, Kalatan, Ian MacDonald, Donald Randolph, Larry Blake. Produced by Robert Sparks; directed by Ted Tetzlaff.

STORY: When Dale Robertson visits the harem of Leon Askin once too often, he is captured, much to the dismay of queen Lili St. Cyr and her servant, Sally Forrest. Urged on by court jester Jay Novello, Robertson and his friend, Vincent Price (Omar Khyam), are sentenced to die. Ian MacDonald, representative of a barbarian conqueror, threatens utter destruction unless Askin surrenders the city. An old Greek scholar, Raymond Greenleaf, and his daughter, Mari Blanchard, friends of Robertson's father, the famous Sinbad, offers to reveal a secret weapon which can keep the conqueror away if Askin will free them as well as Robertson. He demonstrates after first obtaining the formula from Blanchard, whom he must hypnotize to get it. Novello reports all to MacDonald and Greenleaf is killed and Blanchard and the chemicals abducted. Robertson offers to get Blanchard and the chemicals back in return for freedom and a high position in the government. Forrest offers him the help of the Forty Thieves, all girls and daughters of the original Forty Thieves. He frees Blanchard and they ride to the hideout of Forrest and the girls, who with the aid of the secret explosive keep MacDonald and his men at bay, killing most. Returning to the palace, Robertson has Novello arrested and is installed as second in command to Askin, with the Forty Thieves as his bodyguard. He and Forrest plan a future together, with Price and Blanchard likewise occupied.

X-RAY: Loaded with females in brief costumes, a nonsensical story that is broad in its humor, fair performances, and adequate production and direction, this entry shapes up as average program entertainment given added attraction and emphasis by the excitement and protestations of unofficial censorship groups. Whether or not this will add to the boxoffice potential is something each individual buyer must decide, but for the record it should be noted that this has a "C" rating by the Legion of Decency. Price, tongue in cheek, makes the most of the available dialogue. Aubrey Wisberg and Jack Pollexfen are responsible for the screen play which seems a compilation of all former types of films on this order. This film has an aspect ratio of 1.75-1.

TIP ON BIDDING: At individual discretion.

AD LINES: "The Picture They're All Talking About"; "Fifty Beautiful Girls . . . All Ready To Entertain You In Their Own Way"; "He Was The Best Lover Of Them All . . . And What A Harem"; "Romance From Days Of 'Arabian Nights'."

Wakamba (514)

OUTDOOR DRAMA 65M.

(Technicolor)
(English Narration)

ESTIMATE: Off-beat entry for the art spots and for lower half in regular houses.

CREDITS: Edgar M. Queeny, Producer. Presented by The American Museum of Natural History.

STORY: In central East Africa dwells the Wakamba tribe. A hunter of the tribe, desiring a bride, goes to a tribal elder to obtain the hand of his daughter. The father consents but demands elephant tusks as payment for his daughter. The hunter, armed only with a bow and arrow, goes after a huge elephant. At a crucial moment the bow breaks and the hunter is forced to return to the village empty handed. After he obtains a new bow and arrows specially prepared by the high-priest, the hunter once again goes out in search of the elephant, this time accompanied by a friend. The two hunters wander far from the village until they locate elephant tracks. The tracks take them to unexplored land. They locate the giant elephant and stalk him through the alien territory. The hunters soon become fearful, since they observe that the animals around them do not run away as do the animals of their hunting grounds. The elephant is brought down by the hunters' arrows. The men take the tusks of the dead beast and start their journey homeward. The hunters now become more frightened, since they observe that the animals are now restless and aggressive. In addition, a band of elephants is roaming the fields, seeking to avenge the killing. After a night of sleep near a campfire the men increase their speed homeward and are soon in familiar territory. They finally arrive in the village and the marriage ceremonies get under way.

X-RAY: This entry could appeal to art and specialty audiences as well as to regulation viewers as a lower half release. Good photography captures interesting views of African wildlife, and colorful scenery, and native tribal life and ceremonial rituals.

AD LINES: "A Story Of Mystery And Strange Enchantment"; "Dark Africa . . . Where Witchcraft Rules A Race Of Primitive Emotions"; "Journey To A Land Never Seen By Western Man . . . A Land Of Beauty And Mystery."

REPUBLIC

Double Jeopardy (5437)

MELODRAMA 70M.

ESTIMATE: For the lower half.

CAST: Rod Cameron, Gale Robbins, Allison Hayes, Jack Kelly, John Litel, Robert Armstrong, John Gallaudet, Bob Nelson, Minerva Urecal, Tom Powers, Dick Elliott, Fern Hall. Associate producer, Rudy Ralston; directed by R. G. Springsteen.

STORY: John Litel is being blackmailed by his former partner, Robert Armstrong, who served a prison rap years before on a shady business deal. Litel's daughter, Allison Hayes, and his lawyer, Rod Cameron, in love with Hayes, know nothing of this. Urged on by Gale Robbins, his two-timing wife, Armstrong tries to apply more blackmail pressure and is killed by Jack Kelly, Robbins' boyfriend, who tried to double cross Robbins by getting the money from Armstrong. Investigating Armstrong's death, police turn up the relationship to Litel, who confesses the blackmail part of the affair, but denies the murder. Cameron and Hayes begin their own investigation, finally link Robbins to Kelly and Kelly tries to kill her. He then confesses the murder of Armstrong. Cleared, Litel gives his blessing to the marriage of Hayes and Cameron.

X-RAY: Strictly a meller for the lower half, this has little to recommend it. The low budget shows all the way, with the story being familiar and performances adequate. There are a few moments of action, but suspense is lacking. Don Martin did the screen play.

AD LINES: "Hard Hitting Crime Drama With Exciting Action"; "Suspicion, Violence, Blackmail"; "A Deadly Formula For Murder."

20TH-FOX

How To Be Very, Very Popular (518)

FARCE 89M.

(CinemaScope)
(Color by DeLuxe)

ESTIMATE: Farce has angles for the selling.

CAST: Betty Grable, Sheree North, Robert Cummings, Charles Coburn, Tommy Noonan, Orson Bean, Fred Clark, Charlotte Austin, Alice Pearce, Rhys Williams, Andrew Tombes, Noel Toy, Emory Parnell, Harry Carter, Jesslyn Fax, Milton Parsons, Jack Mather. Produced and directed by Nunnaly Johnson.

STORY: Two dancers, Betty Grable and Sheree North, in a honky tonk, witness the murder of Chinese stripper, Noel Toy, and grab a bus winding up in a college town hungry, homeless and without funds. Their wanderings take them to a fraternity house peopled by Orson Bean, Tommy Noonan, and Robert Cummings among others. Grable persuades Cummings to give her some food and then summons North, who enters the room where Noonan is trying to hypnotize Bean and not succeeding. North does come under his influence and he is unable to snap her out of it. In addition to hiding the girls, it is also necessary to hide Bean, who has been expelled by president Charles Coburn, who regrets his action when he hears that Bean's father Fred Clark is due to arrive with a possible bequest of a million dollars to the school. It also becomes known that the killer is near the school looking for the girls. Since he is described as bald-headed, all hairless males, including Clark, suffer all kinds of things from head injuries to arrest. The girls also succeed in disrupting and pepping up the graduation proceedings, at which point the killer, Milton Parsons, starts shooting. Eventually, the killer is caught, Clark is happy that Bean has become acquainted with girls and that he is to graduate, and the girls are paired off, Grable with Cummings and North with Bean, while Noonan tries hypnotizing another pretty girl.

X-RAY: A sneak preview audience seemed to have a lot of fun watching this wacky farce that had its moments of high entertainment but not enough North dancing (there's just one dance number, actually). The story has a familiar ring to it, the cast is adequate, and the direction and production are okeh. Between the ballyhoo for North as a promising newcomer and the title of the film, this could go places given a little extra selling attention. Two musical numbers are heard, "How To Be Very, Very Popular" and "Shake, Rattle and Roll." The screen play is by Johnson based upon a play by Howard Lindsay from a novel by Edward Hope and a play by Lyford Moore and Harlan Thompson.

TIP ON BIDDING: Higher program rates.

AD LINES: "She Had A Way With Men, Men, Men"; "She Knew How To Be Very, Very Popular . . . Come In And Catch Her Secret"; "A Cool Tale About A Hot Subject . . . Sheree Is The Hottest Of Them All."

The Living Swamp (512)

DOCUMENTARY 33M.

(CinemaScope)
(Color by DeLuxe)

ESTIMATE: Satisfactory featurette.

CREDITS: Produced by Jeffrey Hunter and William Hayes; directed by David DaLie.

STORY: The camera is taken into the Okefenokee Swamp of Georgia. There is seen the region's natural beauty and a varied assortment of wildlife, including birds of many species, snakes, bears, alligators, and smaller animals. An expedition journeys into the swamp. After capturing an alligator, the party engages in the dangerous task of snake hunting. This tricky operation is performed with the aid of a long stick and a sack for imprisoning the deadly vipers. Mission accomplished, the party heads out of the picturesque, but often dangerous, Okefenokee.

X-RAY: Excellent CinemaScope photography highlights this featurette. The camera explores the primitive swamp region, and captures its atmosphere and color. The film is well narrated and maintains an element of interest. Written by David DaLie, it can serve as support for a long top half entry.

AD LINES: "An Unusual Treat"; "The Okefenokee . . . Behind Its Beauty Lurks The Danger Of Claw And Fang"; "In The Heart Of Georgia, A Land Of Primitive Beauty And Primitive Death."

The Big Bluff

DRAMA 70M.

(Wilder)

ESTIMATE: Routine lower half entry.

CAST: John Bromfield, Martha Vickers, Robert Hutton, Rosemarie Bowe, Eve Miller, Max Palmer, Eddie Bee, Robert Bice, Pierre Watkin, Beal Wong. Produced and directed by W. Lee Wilder.

STORY: Martha Vickers recovers from a heart attack and goes to California with her secretary companion, Eve Miller, who knows that she has about a year to live. She comes under the care of Dr. Robert Hutton, who is attracted to Miller, and also meets John Bromfield, who has an eye for women as well as for money and who is in love with dancer Rosemarie Bowe, who is unhappily married to Eddie Bee. He charms Vickers and she marries him. He plans to get her money as soon as possible. The marriage, however, has given her a new lease on life, and he plans to murder her and give himself an alibi with Bowe hundreds of miles away. In the dead of night, he shoots her and escapes, arriving later to act surprised and offer his alibi along with proof having spent the night with Bowe. It turns out that Vickers died of a heart attack before the bullet could kill her, and he is free to go until Las Vegas police arrest him for the murder of Bowe, since his alibi was iron-tight. She was killed by Bee, who had a fatal auto accident.

X-RAY: The plot here is of average interest with performances, direction, and production also falling into the average category. The whole shapes up as a routine entry for the lower half. The screen play is by Fred Freiberger, based on a story by Mildred Lord.

AD LINES: "He Stopped At Nothing To Get Her Fortune And Wound Up Under Arrest For Murder"; "Could He Be Guilty Of Killing A Woman Hundreds Of Miles Away? Don't Miss The Surprise Answer"; "A Startling Tale Of Men, Women, And Money."

Break To Freedom

DRAMA 88M.

(Angel)
(English-made)

ESTIMATE: Okeh entry for art and specialty spots.

CAST: Anthony Steel, Jack Warner, Robert Beatty, William Sylvester, Guy Middleton, Michael Balfour, Paul Carpenter, Moultrie Kelsall, Eddie Byrne, Geoffrey Hibbert, Peter Jones, Frederick Valk, Frederick Schiller. Produced by Daniel M. Angel; directed by Lewis Gilbert.

STORY: During World War II in a German prison camp, Lt. Anthony Steel conceives the plan of constructing a collapsible life-like dummy to assist in the escape of prisoners. Lt. Paul Carpenter is first to try, but he is captured at the frontier and shot. An impatient American officer, William Sylvester, decides to try on his own instead of waiting for his turn to come and tries to bribe one of the Nazi officers, who doublecrosses him and shoots him down at the wire. Steel has been reluctant to try and escape after a break in correspondence with a girl he has never seen but is persuaded to make the attempt. He fails and is taken by the guard and returned to camp. The existence of the dummy is kept a secret. He claims the privilege of another try during a bombing raid and gets a chance to see the overbearing Nazi officer Anton Diffring get his just due from one of the falling bombs.

X-RAY: Patterned on the prior released "Stalag 17," this English version might prove of value to the art and specialty spots with its British dialogue and mannerisms, and as filler on the lower half if the accents are not minded too much. The story is interesting and the cast does well by its assignments, with the direction and production in the adequate category. The screen play is by Vernon Harris and Guy Morgan based on the play by Morgan and Edward Sammis. The aspect ratio is 1.66-1.

AD LINES: "They Had Freedom To Gain And Nothing But Their Lives To Lose"; "A Suspense Drama Of Men Behind Barbed Wire . . . Their Thoughts And Desires"; "They Had To Make A 'Break For Freedom' Or Go Crazy Behind Barbed Wire."

The Kentuckian

MELODRAMA 104M.

(Hecht-Lancaster)
(CinemaScope)
(Print by Technicolor)

ESTIMATE: Interesting melodrama.

CAST: Burt Lancaster, Dianne Foster, Diana Lynn, John McIntire, Una Merkel, Walter Matthau, John Carradine, Ronald MacDonald, John Litel, Rhys Williams, Edward Norris, Lee Erickson, Clem Bevans, Lisa Ferraday. Produced by Harold Hecht; directed by Burt Lancaster.

STORY: In the backwoods of Kentucky in 1820, hunter Burt Lancaster discusses going to Texas with his son, young Donald MacDonald, but he is jailed by constable Rhys Williams for the murder committed by another of his clan against their feuding opposites in the area. The boy is befriended by Dianne Foster, bonded servant of the local tavern owner. She frees Lancaster, who uses his Texas money to buy her freedom. They stop at the home of his brother, John McIntire, and his wife, Una Merkel, while Foster goes to work for tavern owner Walter Matthau to help save the needed money. Lancaster goes to work for McIntire, meets school teacher Diana Lynn, and thinks of settling down with her. Finally the Texas riverboat commanded by John Litel docks, and he announces he will lay over for awhile awaiting passengers. Friction between Lancaster and Matthau comes to a head and the two battle it out, Matthau with a whip and Lancaster without a weapon. Lancaster is losing until Foster helps by rendering the whip useless, whereupon Lancaster wins. He plans to settle down with Lynn until several of the feuding clan show up to kill Lancaster. Their plans are disrupted by Foster, who shoots one and makes it possible for Lancaster to get the other. He decides to forget Lynn and go to Texas with MacDonald and Foster.

X-RAY: An interesting, though slightly different type of vehicle for Burt Lancaster in that there is less action than is usually found in his type of entry, the release holds interest pretty much throughout with the play on situation and character development. There are several sequences which will please the action fans immensely. The cast, direction, and production are good so that the overall result is one that can do a little better than average given some push and selling. Lancaster's first directorial assignment comes off in okeh fashion. The screen play is by A. B. Guthrie, Jr., based on the novel, "The Gabriel Horn," by Felix Holt.

TIP ON BIDDING: Higher program rates.

AD LINES: "He Let No Man Or Woman Stand In His Way—The Man From Kentucky"; "He Could Shoot Straight And Fight Hard . . . And Had To Do Both At Once Many A Time"; "An Action Adventure Thriller About Early Pioneer Days."

The Man Who Loved Redheads

ROMANTIC COMEDY 89M.

(Lopert)
(English-made)
(Eastman Color)
(Print by Technicolor)

ESTIMATE: For the art and specialty spots.

CAST: Moira Shearer, John Justin, Roland Culver, Denholm Elliott, Harry Andrews, Patricia Cutts, Moyra Fraser, John Hart, Joan Benham, Jeremy Spenser, Melvyn Hayes. Produced by Josef Somlo; directed by Harold French.

STORY: When just a boy, John Justin met teen-ager Moira Shearer and fell in love with her. He never forgot her face despite having gotten married and raised a family as well as having assumed his title and a position with the foreign office. One day in the street, he meets a young woman who so resembles his childhood sweetheart that he asks her to dinner, posing as a bachelor and borrowing the use of friend Roland Culver's apartment and man-servant, Harry Andrews. He likes the excitement and decides to lead a double life so that he can dabble with the opposite sex at will. The years pass, and he meets a number of gals who resemble Shearer. At one of his parties, his grown son, Denholm Elliott, shows up, and he persuades him to keep quiet. He and Culver grow old but still go for an occasional fling, the latest being to take two models to the opening night of a show in which Elliott appears. Justin is startled to find his wife, Gladys Cooper, present and apparently in the know about his young girl friends as well as his other escapades throughout the years. He is overwhelmed by her affection and loyalty and resolves not to stray any more. He doesn't even recognize childhood sweetheart Shearer when she is nearby for she too has grown old.

X-RAY: A charming and humorous entry for the art and specialty spots where it will be most appreciated, this has typical British dialogue and a suave story. The cast is efficient and the direction and production are adequate, while the story should hold interest for select audiences. The screen play is by Terence Rattigan and there are a few excerpts from the ballet, "Sleeping Beauty," by Tchaikovsky, to be found here. This bears a Legion of Decency "B" rating.

AD LINES: "He Had A Wife And Child But—Oh—How He Loved Redheads"; "He Was A Romantic Dr. Jekyll And Mr. Hyde Until His Wife Caught Up With Him And Then The Fun Started"; "Fun For All In This Romantic Comedy In Color."

The Night Of The Hunter

DRAMA 93M.

(Gregory)

ESTIMATE: Entry based on best-selling book needs selling.

CAST: Robert Mitchum, Shelley Winters, Lillian Gish, Evelyn Varden, Peter Graves, Billy Chapin, Sally Jane Bruce, James Gleason, Don Beddoe, Gloria Castillo, Mary Ellen Clemons, Cheryl Callaway. Produced by Paul Gregory; directed by Charles Laughton.

STORY: Robert Mitchum, self-ordained soul saver and murderer of a number of women whom he termed evil although their money remained pure, is arrested for car theft in West Virginia and jailed with Peter Graves, convicted of murder and the theft of $10,000. Before being taken, Graves shows his youngsters, Billy Chapin and Sally Jane Bruce, where he has hidden the money, in her rag doll, and makes them promise to never tell and use it to care for themselves in these days of depression. Mitchum seeks out Shelley Winters, Graves' widow, and convinces her to wed him. Bruce likes him but Chapin is suspicious. Convinced that Winters doesn't know where the money is and tiring of her, Mitchum kills her and gives out the story that she ran away and that he intends to remain and care for the children. He almost kills them, whereupon they tell where the loot is, but they escape in a rowboat on the river before he can catch them. After several sleepless and hungry days and nights, they land on property owned by Lillian Gish, who has a warm heart and takes in strays both animal and human. The children like her and her home. Mitchum shows up and tries to get the children, but Gish is not convinced they should go with him and drives him off. He tries to attack her but she shoots at him and the police capture him, at which point Chapin gladly gives up the money.

X-RAY: This is a moody, dismal, and unpleasant entry that can be sold in several ways. Firstly, this can go out on the art and specialty rounds where its definitely off-beat story, situations, and characterizations may best be appreciated and where the patron is always on the watch for the "different." Secondly, this can be sold in regulation houses as a sensational type of entry based on the book that saw much attention, along with suspense, a killer after two young children, and a murderer venting his killer-emotions on hapless and unsuspecting women. It can prove a real horror-type of release for some audiences. There are other angles as well that can be used in the selling, with each exhibitor finding his own particular best level. There is no doubt that there is a certain amount of fascination to be found here, along with some competent performances on the part of many members of the cast, particularly Mitchum and youngster Billy Chapin. Laughton's direction on the other hand swings from the real to the ethereal, and at times his transitions from scene to scene are choppy and unsatisfying to those who expect their entertainment to emerge in orderly fashion. There are on the other hand some good bits for which Laughton can take credit. The screen play is by James Agee, based on the novel by Davis Grubb. This bears a Legion of Decency "B" rating. The aspect ratio is 1.85-1.

TIP ON BIDDING: This will vary with the individual situation.

AD LINES: "A Best Selling Novel Is Brought To The Screen As Unusual And Exciting Entertainment"; "People With Weak Hearts Should Avoid 'The Night Of The Hunter'"; "Adventure In Horror And Suspense."

Female On The Beach (536)

DRAMA 97M.

ESTIMATE: Good suspense drama.

CAST: Joan Crawford, Jeff Chandler, Jan Sterling, Cecil Kellaway, Judith Evelyn, Natalie Schafer, Charles Drake, Stuart Randall. Produced by Alfred Zugsmith; directed by Joseph Pevney.

STORY: A quarrel is heard between Judith Evelyn and Jeff Chandler and he walks out, after which she drunkenly tries to follow and goes over a guard rail falling to her death on the beach below. The owner of the beach house, widowed Joan Crawford, moves in and notices Lt. Charles Drake examining the scene of the accident while real estate agent Jan Sterling is on hand to greet her. She finds Chandler in her house preparing breakfast and she resents his intrusion, althought he charmingly implies he has always had the run of the house. She sends him on his way retrieving the key. Sterling has had an affair with Chandler, but now he refuses to continue with her. Crawford eventually is drawn to Chandler. She finds a diary left by Evelyn and understands that Chandler has been staying with next-door neighbor-gamblers Cecil Kellaway and Natalie Schafer, hoping to snare a rich widow so that they would all profit. Crawford, in love with Chandler, presents him with a new fuel pump for his boat that they plan to use for their honeymoon. Sterling warns Crawford against the marriage, but she refuses to listen. Married, she brings items aboard the vessel and finds the new fuel pump hidden in a drawer and the faulty one still in place. She suspects Chandler of wanting to kill her for her money and tries to get away. Sterling confesses to Chandler that she was responsible for the death of Evelyn and for putting the old fuel pump back in place, which is overheard by Drake who takes her into custody allaying Crawford's suspicion and reuniting them so they can really start a happy future together.

X-RAY: Well-done is this study in suspense, drama, and romance, with the story holding interest on high pretty much throughout. Competent acting by Crawford and Chandler make the events seem realistic and better direction and production contribute much to the over-all effect which results in good entertainment for adults. It is well constructed so that the climax comes at the right time for maximum effect. The screen play is by Robert Hill and Richard Alan Simmons, based on the play "The Besieged Heart" by Hill. This bears a Legion of Decency "B" rating.

TIP ON BIDDING: Higher bracket.

AD LINES: "She Wanted To Be Alone Until The Right Man Came Along"; "An Adventure In Suspense, Drama, And Romance"; "He Cuts A Fine Figure In A Bathing Suit . . . Could He Also Be A Murderer?"

The Naked Dawn (537)

DRAMA
82M.

(Filmed in Mexico)
(Print by Technicolor)

ESTIMATE: Can be slotted either in art spots or on lower half in regulation outlets.

CAST: Arthur Kennedy, Eugene Iglesias, Betta St. John, Roy Engel, Charlita. Associate producer, James O. Radford; directed by Edgar G. Ulmer.

STORY: After robbing a freight car, Arthur Kennedy and his friend are fired upon and the friend dies from his wound. Kennedy hires youthful landowner Eugene Iglesias to drive him to town, where he delivers the loot to Roy Engel, who tries to hold back on some of the money. Kennedy takes it all by force, after which the pair go for a time on the town. Returning, Iglesias is worked upon by greed, and plots to kill Kennedy. His young wife, Betta St. John, is shocked and fed up and begs Kennedy to take her with him. As they start to leave, the police and Engel arrive and attempt to get Iglesias to talk by threatening to hang him. Kennedy intervenes, shooting Engel. He is mortally wounded but is able to send Iglesias and St. John on their way to safety together before he goes off to die.

X-RAY: An off-beat type of drama featuring emotional displays, some action, and an interesting yarn, this entry could go in either the art spots or as a supporting feature on the program. The cast is uniformly good and the direction and production are okeh. There is a song, "Al Hombre." The original screen play is by Nina and Herman Schneider.

AD LINES: "He Had To Kill Or Run"; "A Beautiful Girl Was His For The Taking, But Death Was Too Fast"; "Action And Adventure In The Dead Of Night."

To Hell And Back

BIOGRAPHICAL DRAMA
106M.

(539, CinemaScope) (540, Standard)
(CinemaScope)
(Print by Technicolor)

ESTIMATE: Well-made war film should have wide appeal.

CAST: Audie Murphy, Marshall Thompson, Charles Drake, Gregg Palmer, Jack Kelly, Paul Picerni, Susan Kohner, Richard Castle, Art Aragon, Brett Halsey, Bruce Cowling, Paul Langton, Felix Noriego, Julian Upton, Denver Pyle, Philip Lloyd Farber. Produced by Aaron Rosenberg; directed by Jesse Hibbs.

STORY: Following the death of his mother, Audie Murphy, 16, joins the Army and is sent as an Infantry replacement to North Africa. He immediately proves himself in battle, winning promotion and the respect of fellow GIs Richard Castle, Paul Picerni, Marshall Thompson, and particularly Charles Drake. One by one, the platoon loses veterans in the fighting through Italy and southern France. Murphy accepts a battlefield commission and forces an entire German company to retreat by commandeering a blazing tank's machine gun and conducting a one-man action. Wounds received during the battle kill all hopes of a West Point career, and Murphy returns to the U.S. where he receives the Congressional Medal of Honor, making him the most decorated soldier in American military history.

X-RAY: The impact of this well-made war film is heightened considerably by the audience's knowledge that the events depicted actually occurred. Murphy relives his war experiences effectively, and the job of the foot soldier is honestly portrayed. The CinemaScope photography is excellent, as are production and direction, with battle scenes particularly well staged. The popularity of Murphy's biography on book stands and his stature as a Hollywood luminary should give this wider appeal than most war pictures enjoy. The screen adaptation of the autobiography is by Gil Doud. One song, "Dogface Soldier," is heard.

AD LINES: "The True Story Of America's Most Decorated Soldier"; "A Stirring Salute To The Dogface, Who Traveled The Road 'To Hell And Back'."

King Of The Coral Sea

MELODRAMA
87M.

(Realart)
(Australian-made)

ESTIMATE: Good programmer.

CAST: Chips Rafferty, Charles Tingwell, Ilma Adey, Rod Taylor, Lloyd Berrell, Francis Chin Soon, Reginald Lye. Directed by Lee Robinson.

STORY: Chips Rafferty, aided by Rod Taylor, is in charge of a company owned by Charles Tingwell, reputed playboy, which he inherited from his father. Tingwell decides to have a look at the operation, which is getting shell, pearls, etc., from the ocean's bottom. Rafferty discovers a body out in the ocean and brings it in, which sets off a police investigation into the possible smuggling of undesirable aliens into the area with Rafferty asked to help. Tingwell arrives and is impressed with Rafferty's daughter, Ilma Adey. He also shows that the use of modern equipment can streamline the operation as well as saves lives, which he does for Rafferty when the latter is trapped under seas. When the smugglers learn Rafferty is on their trail, they hold Adey hostage, but Tingwell, Rafferty, and Taylor, with the use of Tingwell's aqua lungs, follow and save her as well as take care of the crooks and murderers with police arriving in time to wind things up. It looks as though Tingwell and Adey might merge in the future which makes Rafferty happy.

X-RAY: Backed up by unusual settings, scenery, and some very good underwater footage, this entry has a plot that holds interest pretty much throughout and the cast is good as is the fast-paced direction. It can round out the program in neat fashion and there is a goodly amount of action for fans who appreciate that type of entry. The screen play is by Chips Rafferty and Lee Robinson.

MISCELLANEOUS

Mau Mau

DOCUMENTARY
53M.

(Brenner)
(Color) (Filmed in Kenya)

ESTIMATE: Interesting documentary with angles.

CREDITS: Produced by Joe Rock; directed by Elwood G. Price.

STORY: This film reviews the highly explosive Mau Mau issue which has turned Kenya into a land of martial law. More than 50 years ago, before the coming of the white settlers, the native Kenyans, most of them belonging to the Kikuyu tribe, controlled most of the land. The Kikuyus were an agricultural people who lived under a social system whereby the land was not owned by individuals but by the tribe. The land always provided for the natives. With the coming of the white settlers, the sociological makeup of Kenya underwent a drastic change. The whites acquired a sizeable amount of land and established their own community. The natives were now employed to work the land. An increased native population and gradual dominance by the whites led to a situation where unrest flourished among the Kikuyus. When the secret Mau Mau society was estabilshed, it soon became the symbol of the Kikuyu battle for equality in Kenya. However, the Mau Mau leaders based their recruiting of members on fear. The fanatical leaders soon resorted to violence which culminated in massacres of native communities. Thus the reign of terror began. The whites and loyal natives soon organized a police force, and British troops were rushed to Kenya. Thousands of natives were rounded up and interned by the Kenya government. Leaders of the Mau Mau were captured and stood trial for their crimes. These measures succeeded in smashing the Mau Mau movement, but the job remained of mopping up the small bands of resisters hiding out in the surrounding jungle. This job is not completed, and today the white settlers live with a gun constantly at their side. The greater problem remains of establishing a system in Kenya whereby the whites and blacks can live in peace.

X-RAY: This film can be successfully exploited as a programmer. The entry presents its timely topic in an interesting and factual fashion. The brutality of the Mau Mau is adequately portrayed without creating an air of sensationalism. Written by Dave Sheppard and narrated by Elwood Price.

AD LINES: "An American Big Game Hunter Faced Death To Film Mau Mau"; "Out Of The Headlines And On To Your Theatre Screen"; "Mau Mau . . . The Name That Means Fear, The Name That Means Terror And Death In The Night."

Outlaw Treasure

WESTERN 67M.

(American Releasing Corp.)

ESTIMATE: Mediocre western.

CAST: John Forbes, Frank "Red" Carpenter, Adele Jergens, Glenn Langan, Hal Baylor, Michael Whalen, Frank Jenks, Harry Lauter. Written and produced by John Carpenter; directed by Oliver Drake.

STORY: When outlaws team their gangs to rob gold shipments, the Army sends trouble-shooter John Forbes to the scene to see what can be done. When head crook Glenn Langan turns to murdering Forbes' father, also played by Forbes, girl friend and secretary Adele Jergens deserts to the lawful side. An attempt to kill her is foiled by Forbes and the finale witnesses a widespread gun battle with the outlaws and Langan getting their just desserts.

X-RAY: This is fair filler for the lower half with perhaps youngsters appreciating this best since they are less discriminating. The story, acting, direction, and production are only fair.

AD LINES: "He Could Tame The West But Had Difficulty With A Blonde Bombshell"; "Roaring Action Follows Army Trouble-shooter John Forbes"; "They Had A Way Of Ending Their Conversations With Roaring Six Guns."

Strips Around The World

BURLESQUE 55M.

(William Mishkin)

ESTIMATE: Satisfactory for burlesque spots.

CAST: Dick Kimball, Wally Blair, Arlene Hunter, Genii Young, Mae Blondell, Dimples Morgan, Mitzi Doeree, Brandy Jones, Valda. Produced by George Weiss; directed by Phil Tucker.

STORY: A performer goes to a travel agency with hopes of visiting foreign countries. He has insufficient money for a trip, but after seeing the performer's juggling act, the travel agent agrees to letting him work his way over to Pamonia, a mythical oriental country where the agent's brother is a Pasha. Arriving at the Pasha's palace, the performer exchanges words with the Pasha in a comedy routine, and then watches the Pasha's dancing girls perform. The girls, dressed in brief oriental costumes, do a series of suggestive dances. The performer returns to the travel agency and goes into another act, this time juggling while riding a miniature bike. He then does a comedy eating routine. Returning to the Pasha's palace, the performer exchanges a few quips with the ruler and then watches the scantily clad girls as they dance and strip. The performer exchanges places with his host, the Pasha returning to the travel agency with his girls and the juggler becoming the new ruler of Pamonia.

X-RAY: This entry is adequate for burlesque audiences, with its sufficient supply of dancing girls and low comedy. Production is fair.

AD LINES: "You Won't Find A Dull Moment In This Film"; "Loaded With Gals . . . That Really Please."

THE ADVENTURES OF ALEXANDER SELKIRK. Warners—Specials. 17m. Alexander Selkirk, a young Scotsman, agrees to be put ashore by a pirate captain on the South Pacific island of Juan Fernandez, in the year 1704. Selkirk realizes his folly too late. He remains on the deserted island for five years until he is rescued. The Scotsman spends his time hunting crawfish and wild goats, his only source of food; reading the Bible; and playing with pet cats and goats. Selkirk's only visitors during his self-imposed exile are a band of Spanish sailors. Fearing imprisonment, he successfully eludes them. The literary character, Robinson Crusoe, was based upon Selkirk's experience. GOOD. (2011).

Color Cartoons

BEAUS WILL BE BEAUS. Paramount—Popeye Cartoons. 6m. Popeye, Olive Oyl, and Bluto start out for a day at the beach. Olive makes the boys promise that they won't fight among themselves. Popeye tries to keep his word but Bluto continually provokes him. Finally, Popeye gets an idea. He shoves a can of spinch down Bluto's throat. Bluto goes after the sailor man with a vengeance just in time for Olive to see the brute for what he is. She sends Bluto on his way, then accepts Popeye as her boyfriend for the day. FAIR. (E14-6).

A BICEP BUILT FOR TWO. Paramount—Herman and Katnip Cartoons. 7m. Katnip's serenading of a girl cat is interrupted by a tough cat who takes over. Katnip is determined to get the best of the muscle-bound feline and consequently enlists Herman, the mouse's aid. Herman suggests a muscle-building course for the lovelorn Katnip. The course consists of weight-lifting and bar-chinning, with the exercise gadgets being equipped with high explosives aimed at eliminating Katnip. Katnip survives and goes after the tough tom, with bowling balls substituting for his non-existant muscles. While the cats battle it out, Herman proceeds to serenade the girl. GOOD. (H14-3).

GIFT OF GAG. Paramount—Popeye Cartoons. 6m. Popeye's nephews attempt to smuggle a large box into the house without the sailor knowing of it. Popeye discovers the box and tries to take it away from the boys. This leads to a merry chase inside the house. When Popeye does get his hands on the mysterious object, he discovers it to contain a king-size can of spinach and a note saying, "Happy Birthday, Uncle Popeye." GOOD. (E14-7).

GIT ALONG LIL DUCKIE. Paramount—Noveltoons. 7m. Baby Huey wants to join the little ducks in their cowboy game. The ducklings would rather have nothing to do with the oversized bird. A fox comes along and the ducklings flee, Huey being left to battle the enemy. The fox attempts to eliminate his opponent through the use of an exploding cigar. a shotgun, dynamite. Huey, however, is too tough and winds up pursuing the fox. GOOD. (P14-4).

LUMBER JERKS. Warners—Merrie Melodies. 7m. Two extremely polite gophers return home from a food gathering expedition to find that their tree has been cut down and dragged away. They follow it to a sawmill and unsuccessfully try to save it from being cut into lumber. The lumber is made into furniture which the gophers believe belong to them. They manage to hijack a truck load of furniture and stack it on their tree stump, one piece on top of another. GOOD. (2719).

NEWS HOUND. Paramount—Noveltoons. 6m. Snapper, a canine news photographer, is ordered by his editor to get sensational news pictures. Snapper takes pictures of a girl who's jumping off a roof, but she jumps into his camera and ruins the film. Snapper next photographs a bandit robbing a bank. The bandit chases Snapper in order to get his camera but Snapper gets the photograph to his editor. However, the film only shows the robber's hands. GOOD. (P14-5).

PENNY ANTICS. Paramount—Popeye Cartoons. 8m. Popeye and Bluto operate rival penny arcade movie shows. Not only do the rivals battle with each other for customers, but they also slug it out in their shows for the affections of Olive Oyle. In the movies Popeye presents, the sailor man is victorious, while Bluto is top man in his own productions. Wimpy, a would-be customer, arrives. Popeye and Bluto fight it out for his trade. Wimpy proceeds to charge admission to the great Popeye-Bluto battle royal. GOOD. (E14-5).

RABBIT RAMPAGE. Warners—Bugs Bunny Specials. 7m. Bugs Bunny objects to his animator's refusal to draw the rabbit in the conventional way. Bugs at first refuses to work, but reconsiders when the artist continues to fool around, giving him non-rabbitish ears, tail, etc. The animator draws Bugs with head and tail out of proportion to the rest of his body. The animator is revealed to be none other than Elmer Fudd. EXCELLENT. (2728).

SPOOKING WITH A BROGUE. Paramount—Casper Technicolor Cartoons. 6m. Casper, the friendly ghost, goes to Ireland. There he meets Billy, a small boy whose widowed mother is about to be dispossessed by a miserly landlord. Billy, thinking Casper a leprechaun, demands a crock o' gold. Casper attempts to fool Billy by giving him gold painted eggs, golden corn, and gold fish. The boy is not deceived and demands the gold. When the landlord sees Casper he runs for his life, and Casper is able to take the miser's gold and give it to the boy. GOOD. (B14-5).

THIS IS A LIFE? Warners—Bug Bunny Specials. 7m. Bugs Bunny and Daffy Duck are seated in the audience of the TV program, "This Is A Life?" Daffy expects to have his life portrayed on the program, but Bugs is picked instead by master of ceremonies Elmer Fudd. Yousemine Sam appears out of Bugs' past and recounts an experience he had with the rabbit. Elmer recalls his dealings with Bugs while rabbit hunting. Sam and Elmer seek their vengeance on Bugs, but Daffy, the innocent bystander, turns out to be their victim. GOOD. (2729).

prevent it from ringing. "The Policeman's Dilemma," starring Owen Moore, tells the story of a cop who discovers that his brother is a crook. The policeman is torn between his duty or his brother. He votes for his duty despite the pleadings of his mother. GOOD. (54213).

FIVE HUNDRED HORSES. Paramount—Pacemakers. 10m. We visit the Ben White Raceway in Orlando, Fla., the home of trotters and pacers. There we see trainers putting the horses through their paces. The young colts begin their training with go-carts, then graduate to jog-carts. With riders such as champion Billy Houghton aiding in the training, the horses could develop into outstanding money winners. FAIR. (K14-4).

HOLLYWOOD BEAUTY. Columbia—Screen Snapshots. 9m. At the Friars Dinner we meet George Jessel, Danny Kaye, Jack Benny, Pat O'Brien, Bob Hope, George Burns. Ralph Staub visits with Rhonda Fleming, who tells him of her plans as a member of a recording group. FAIR. (7859).

LET'S LOOK AT THE BIRDS. Paramount—Toppers. 9m. Several unusual species of birds are see in their natural habitats. On an island in the North Atlantic. The gannett is observed returning from a fishing expedition with food for her young. Other island residents include the Atlantic puffin, the murre, and the razor-billed awk. An action shot of a hummingbird is revealed. A stork is shown feeding her offspring. Pelicans and their families can be seen, as well as cormorants, a bird Japanese fishermen use in place of conventional fishing techniques. FAIR. (M14-5).

PICK A PET. Paramount—Toppers. 8m. This short presents an assortment of unusual animals whose antics are more than unorthodox. The Latin American Pi-so-ty is seen in the act of trying to grab a banana. The spider monkey of the Amazon jungle is also shown devouring bananas. Other animals shown include an armadillo, an ant-eater, a parasoso, a chimpanzee, a gorilla, an orangutang, and a three-toed sloth. GOOD. (M14-6).

SOME OF THE GREATEST. Warner Varieties. 10m. John Barrymore, Myrna Loy, and Mary Astor are seen in the scenes from the 1926 film, "Don Juan." Off-screen dialogue kids the action on the screen. Don Juan's romantic escapades and his battles with the Borgias highlight the action. EXCELLENT. (2606).

WALK IN THE DEEP. Paramount—Pacemakers. 10m. We visit the waterfront of Tarpon Springs, Florida and observe the area's sponge fishing industry. The industry was once a million dollar business, but synthetic sponges and a sponge plague reduced its importance. We meet the older Greeks and young native Americans who dive for their product. Sponge fishing is dangerous, sometimes killing and sometimes crippling. Chris Johns, an elderly and crippled diver, is shown getting into his collar, helmet, and weighted shoes, and going down to the bottom of the sea. GOOD (K14-6).

Sports

BASEBALL'S ACROBATIC ACE. Paramount—Grantland Rice Sportlights. 9m. Jackie Price travels with the Cleveland Indians, displaying his varied and fascinating assortment of baseball tricks. These tricks include the pitching of two balls simultaneously to two catchers, the pitching of three balls to three catchers, the throwing of two balls to two catchers while standing on his head, the batting of balls while in an upside down position, the throwing of three balls simultaneously while being suspended upside down from a trapeze, the catching of balls from a moving jeep. GOOD. (R14-7).

BOWLING BOOM. RKO—Sportscopes. 8m. This short deals with the growing interest in the game of bowling. Through the use of automatic pin machines, alleys can remain open for longer periods each day and thereby cater to a wider audience. As a result, bowling is now being enjoyed by smallfry, grandmothers and grandfathers, and college and high school students, in addition to the growing number of office-league bowlers. Sylvia Wene, champion woman bowler, demonstrates her skill on the bowling lanes. FAIR. (54312).

HIGH SCORE BOWLING. Paramount—Grantland Rice Sportlights. 9m. Following the usual pattern of such reels, this shows several champs, both male and female, doing their almost unbelievable stuff on the alleys. Some inkling is also given as to what a business bowling has become in recent years. GOOD. (R14-9).

TANBARK AND TURF. RKO—Sportscopes. 8m. This short opens on the harness-racing track at Aiken, S. C. We see trotters and pacers and observe the difference in their gaits through slow-motion shots. From harness horses we go to hackney ponies, the high-stepping horses that were very popular in the Victorian era. These ponies are seen pulling old-time carriages. The hackneys are also observed in slow-motion shots. FAIR. (54313).

TUMBLING JAMBOREE. Paramount—Grantland Rice Sportlights. 9m. At Illinois University, the gymnastic team practices all kinds of stunts including roundoffs and flip-flops. On a trampoline or bouncing canvas a national champion does a series of ingenious sommersaults. Performers stage a tumbling exhibition on a trapeze. This is followed by an acrobatic balancing act staged by the Seven Danwill Brothers. The film concludes with four girls who excel in rhythmic tumbling. FAIR. (R14-8).

Color Travel

ARABESQUES. Around The World With UltraVision—Transatlantic Productions. Eastman Color, 10m. At the bullfighting stadium in Madrid we see a performance by the Spanish Riding Academy of Vienna. The horsemen put their pure white mounts through a series of tricks involving timing and balance. The horses dance to music, stand on their hind legs, and perform other diffifficult and entertaining feats. The riders are dressed in traditional costumes. GOOD.

FIESTA IN SEVILLE. Around the World With UltraVision Transatlantic Productions. Eastman Color, 10m. A tour of Seville, Spain, reveals majestic and traditional towers, cathedrals, plazas, and palaces. In the Plaza de Espana we see a dancer perform a Spanish tap dance. An annual Seville festival is shown. For this occasion, the main street is lined with booths where Spanish families meet their friends. EXCELLENT.
